One knows not what he will choose to do when he leaves this Chamber. Some of us have speculated that he will be a Cabinet member should there be a new administration. Others of us hope very much that things work out so that he teaches at a university rather than serves in a new Cabinet, but the election will decide that particular issue.

Regardless of what the future brings, the past demonstrates his record clearly. Senator WIRTH has had a major impact on many national issues, including his work in the telecommunications, banking, and financial industries. He is perhaps best known for his leadership in addressing environmental and energy issues. As the chairman of the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, he played a key role in developing innovative proposals and educating the country on telephone, broadcasting, and banking deregulation.

Senator WIRTH has been passionately dedicated to the protection and preservation of our public lands and natural resources. He put aside partisan differences which had plagued earlier wilderness negotiations and, together, we forged a strong, balanced Colorado wilderness bill. The Wirth-Brown bill will protect nearly 700,000 acres of Colorado lands as wilderness and conservation areas, while ensuring protection of water resources within the areas.

If, indeed, it passes tomorrow—as we hope it will—it culminates an effort of over 12 years. Not only that, but it is a symbol of the bipartisan efforts he has made to bring common sense to this particular issue.

Senator WIRTH also has fought to protect forest resources in Colorado and around the Nation. He has cosponsored legislation to protect old-growth forests and was an advocate of protections for the spotted owl in the Endangered Species Act.

He has been a true leader in the Senate in examining the possibility of global climate change. In addition to calling attention to this issue on the Senate floor, he has chaired numerous hearings to bring it to public attention. In 1990, he authored the National Energy Policy Act, which was passed in the Senate. It addresses the issue of global warming, and aims to develop an energy policy focused on reducing emissions of carbon dioxide.

Senator WIRTH also is chairman of the Alliance to Save Energy. He has been a long-time supporter of natural gas, both as a legislator and has set an example as a consumer in using natural gas as fuel for his jeep. His efforts to encourage the use of alternative fuels played an important role in crafting the comprehensive national energy policy legislation, which will hopefully be signed into law in this Congress.

As an outspoken advocate for the environment and a member of the Senate Environment Committee, Senator WIRTH's dedication to our national and global environment has been of great significance. He worked toward approval of the Strategic Environment Program, which opens Defense Department data up for use in global environmental analysis. He has fought hard for what he believes.

Some of us who have not always agreed with him, but there is no question that he is effective. In 1989, he led a delegation from the United States of the Senate and House of Representatives to the Amazon Basin to examine tropical rain forests. He has pushed for consideration of environmental issues as part of the negotiations on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Anyone who remembers the fight over the Clean Air Act will recall the close relationship between Senator WIRTH and his close friend, Senator John Heinz. Together they negotiated a successful act. It changed the record of clean air in this country. He has also led the effort to require the Environmental Protection Agency to test the ability of existing car models to continue to meet the pollution emission standards. Senator WIRTH introduced legislation to control toxic pollution and to ban leaded gasoline.

Mr. President, this exceptional, talented individual has made a difference in our country. He has made a difference in the House, he has made a difference in the Senate, he has made a difference in Colorado, he has made a difference in America. He has never shrunk from a fight, he has never pulled his punches, he has never failed to stand up for what he believes in. He carries the respect of everyone who knows him.

Public service has not simply been his commitment, it has been a family commitment. His wife, Wren, is an accomplished national cochair of the Environmental Defense fund and cofounder of the Congressional Wives for Human Rights. Their commitment, their team commitment, has made an enormous difference in people's lives.

When I began my term in the Senate, the Wirths went out of their way to make Nan and me feel welcome. Their friendship, warmth, guidance, and cooperation will be missed.

Senator WIRTH will be missed by all of us. Perhaps, more than anything else, he will be missed as a strong dedicated, committed champion of what he believes in.

I know not what will be the next chapter in his life. Without wishing him ill, I do hope it is not necessarily as a Cabinet member, but, if it is, I know he will bring the same commitment and the same hard work and the same creative mind to that task that he has shown throughout his life.

Nan and I appreciate the Wirths' friendship and wish them and their children, Christopher and Kelsey, the best as they begin the next chapter in their lives.

DESTRUCTION OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, the third item that I wish to address deals with the institution of a very special award. It will highlight the taxpayer's ripoff of the month. This particular award will be awarded on a monthly basis, when Congress is in session, to the most outstanding example of Government ripoff of the taxpayers that can be found. Some, of course, are concerned that there would not be enough examples to award this on a monthly basis. Far from there being a shortage of candidates, I think that we will find we have far too many.

The amount of this month's winner will be made at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow. Tonight, I want to share with the Senate one of the front runners for that award: A $400 million appropriation this session of Congress voted to destroy the stockpile of nuclear weapons in the Soviet Union. Let me make it clear that we all have a very significant and important interest in seeing those weapons are destroyed.

Almost 1 year ago, I voted against an amendment later passed by the Congress that set aside $400 million to aid the newly independent States of the former Soviet Union under the guise that it would be used to dismantle their nuclear weapons. Destroying nuclear weapons has great merit, but using our funds to do something the independent states are already committed to do by international treaty frees funds in military budgets for use in developing other military weapons. With the newly independent states in chaos and disorder, I was doubtful that $400 million would be effectively used to decrease the former Soviet Union's nuclear threat.

Those concerns appear to be well-founded. Nearly half of the $400 million has been committed for support functions, not for dismantling nuclear weapons; $191 million has been committed to date, and the only thing that is planned for destruction are the wallets of the American taxpayer. The money will go for fissile material storage containers, armored blankets, accident response equipment and training, modification kits for Russian railway cars, material control and accountability for fissile materials, including assistance with computer hardware and software to inventory the materials, physical security, and the International Science and Technology Centers in Moscow and Kiev that will be used to retrain their weapons scientists.

Mr. President, even worse than the fact that nearly one-half of the $400 million has been spent on support functions that will keep their nuclear weapons SAFE—not destroyed—is the fact that never has there been a study done that decides, from the United States' perspective, how the money should be spent. Instead, it is my understanding that we solicited from the Russians their list of places and functions on which they would like us to spend $400 million. Funny thing is, they came back with a list of ways to store their nuclear weapons better, to improve the safety of transportation of the weapons within Russia, and so forth. But actual destruction of those weapons was not on the list. That does not make sense.

What does make sense is a process by which the United States decides which functions are in our interest to do first—like disassemble the nuclear weapons—and then negotiate with the Russians to fund that project. To my knowledge, though, no overall assessment of U.S. interests in the weapons destruction process has been accomplished, nor has a game plan been assembled to ensure we fund these activities first. We must take the lead to ensure that the United States is not spending hundreds of millions of American taxpayer dollars just to improve the Russian military's storage infrastructure. We must spend it to actually dismantle nuclear weapons. The State Department and Defense Department need to develop a clear plan for the use of the $400 million that reflects our interests, not the Russians.

One thing that seems to have been overlooked is the involvement of American industry. Reports we have received indicate that few plans include the use of the huge talent base of American companies that exists in the area of nuclear weapons destruction. We have the world's experts. In fact, when the $400 million was announced, some of our leading companies combined their expertise to best respond to this new challenge. But instead of looking to these companies who employ the Nation's leading experts, the Defense and State Departments started sending armies of bureaucrats to Russia to investigate. One week's worth of meetings in Moscow that saw nearly 100 Washington bureaucrats in attendance caused 1 government official to note that probably all the United States would get for its $400 million was a lot of airline tickets.

In the view of many experts, the United States must develop a list of projects that puts American objectives first by putting nuclear weapons accountability at the top, a plan to assist the Russians in the destruction of the weapons next, and a clear blueprint for involving American industry in the process. A plan like this should be negotiated immediately.

The conference report accompanying this year's defense authorization bill seems to agree on both the importance of the destruction of these assets and the involvement of the U.S. private sector. I wish to compliment the Senate Armed Services Committee, and particularly Senator JOHN WARNER, for their attention to these issues. It is my hope that we will lay a planning foundation that will ensure accelerated dismantlement and destruction of these weapons.

In spite of the fact that we have literally hundreds of people situated in the Moscow Embassy and in consulates around Russia and the other embassies in the old Soviet Union, it was thought necessary to send almost 100 United States experts to visit the Soviet Union.

THE BUDGET

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, this body is known for Members with a very striking sense of humor. Some of those Members have addressed the serious subject of the budget and the budget deficit in recent years and have done it by suggesting that this Congress is significantly more fiscally responsible than the President. In that regard, they have referred to figures which seem to indicate this Congress has appropriated and spent less money than the President has recommended.

That is a significant subject. It is an important one. I think it deserves a close look. So I took the opportunity to dig through and get the facts from the Congressional Research Service. This is a publication put out by Congress itself, not the executive branch but the Congress.

I asked a pretty simple question of the Congressional Research Service: How much money did the President ask for in his budget, how large was the deficit he recommended, and what action did Congress take.

The figures from the CRS report of March 4, 1992 with updates are very clear.

In fiscal 1990, the President recommended a budget deficit of $91.1 billion. But the actual deficit for that year, the one Congress presided over and voted for was $220.5 billion. Congress' deficit in fiscal year 1990 was more than double what the President had recommended. Let me repeat that—Congress' deficit in 1990 was more than two times the deficit President Bush recommended.

What happened in 1991? The contrast is even more dramatic. As reported by the Congressional Research Service, the President that year called for budget deficit of $63.1 billion. Congress' actual deficit was $269 billion.

Mr. President, this is not from some campaign folder. These are figures from the Congressional Research Service on the actual budget. They describe what the President asked for and what Congress delivered—a $63 billion he asked for; he got a staggering $269 billion in deficit spending.

What happened in 1992? As I think all Members know, we are not through the year yet. The President had originally recommended $280.9 billion in the way of a deficit, part of that necessitated by the runaway deficits of the prior years. Thus far, the latest estimate is that Congress will deliver a deficit of $333 billion, dramatically higher still than what the President asked for—$29.5 billion more.

How is it possible then for Members to come to this chamber and imply that the President has asked for more spending and bigger deficits than Congress has given?

Part of the answer—and it is a complicated one—lies in a variety of topics. First, estimates can vary. The fact is the President's estimates for the economy are the same ones Congress has adopted except in one instance. For the budget for this coming year, Congress took more optimistic estimates than those the President had recommended to make their numbers look better than the President's numbers.

Some say that we ought to look at only appropriated monies, I believe the figures which have been shown on this floor and discussed publicly do, indeed, deal with appropriated money.

Mr. President, it is totally accurate to say that in these years the President has asked for more appropriated funds for defense than Congress has provided. If the statements—that the President's requests for appropriated funds—were mentioned strictly in terms of defense spending, they would be accurate.

But to imply that overall the President's spending requests exceed the Congress's actual allocations is simple misrepresentation. It does not square the facts as reported by the Congressional Research Service.

The argument thus is something like this. There is a category of spending in which Congress has spent less than the president has asked, and thus, the argument goes, Congress is more frugal and more protective of the taxpayers than the President.

But that is a little like the folks who were caught in the House banking scandal for their ills. Some blamed their dog or their secretaries for their ills, but the more creative blamed their spouses. Why? Because they claim the checks their spouses wrote on the account were the ones that bounced. The checks the Members themselves wrote on their checking account was balanced. But, whether it is your own account or the Nation's, the other side of the checking account cannot be ignored. All of the figures in the checking account must be reviewed to balance a budget. To simply blame it on your spouse or to blame it on your dog or to blame it on a different category of spending is not enough.

This Congress controls every penny our Nation spends, including entitlements. This Congress can say yes or not to the entitlement reforms the President recommends. In fact, we had votes in this Chamber to control increases in entitlements this year. Only 28 Senators voted to control those entitlements in any way.

Your have to look at the whole picture: entitlement, defense spending, and every other category of spending. We must look at the whole ball of wax, and not try to mislead our listeners with only some of the facts. According to our own Congressional Research Service, all the facts are:

In fiscal 1990, Congress spent ($95 billion in outlays) Almost $100 billion more spending by Congress than what the President requested.

In 1991, Congress spent $89.7 billion more than the President requested.

Thus far, using the estimates for 1992, Congress has spent $29.5 billion more than the President's request.

The budget is complicated. The figures are involved. Let me be the first to acknowledge that both the executive and the legislative branches could have and should have done a better job to control spending and hold down the deficit. But to claim that Congress has spent less than the President simply does not square with the facts our own research service has produced.

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

THE EXTRA EFFORT

Mr. FORD. The Journal of our proceedings—the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—is an essential tool in the conduction of the day-to-day business of Congress.

Particularly in periods like this one we are completing—periods of intense legislative activity, the RECORD is sometimes the only written account of an amendment or bill.

My hat is off to the men and women in both Chambers—in the Secretary of the Senate's office and on the staff of the Clerk of the House who get this job done. My appreciation includes those men and women at the Government Printing Office who get the copy, compose it into print, print it, bind it, and get it back up to the Senate and House floors the following morning.

For years the work force at the Government Printing Office has come through for us against adverse conditions. GPO's management has not always fully understood the immediate need in a vital legislature.

In the past the RECORD has backed up for days at the end of the session. Not so this year, even though both floors sent record amounts of copy to GPO during the night. I think it only proper that we give these men and women the recognition they are due for doing a difficult job well. And my thanks for the extra effort many of you extended.

REPUBLIC OF CHINA'S REPRESENTATIVE DING MOU-SHIH ADDRESSES THE CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, much has been written about Taiwan's progress in democratization and economic development, but few reports are as comprehensive as Representative Ding Mou-Shih's recent address to the Chautauqua Institution in New York. In his address, Representative Ding comments on the end of the cold war, the North-South gap, the conflict between rich and poor nations, and Taiwan's pivotal role in the Pacific region.

In detailing Taiwan's political and economic progress, Representative Ding argues that Taiwan is a "showcase model of success for other developing nations," including mainland China. In addition, he discusses Taiwan's hopes for a peaceful and democratic unification with mainland China.

Representative Ding characterizes Taiwan's relationship with the United States as harmonious and fully functional. In a post-cold-war era of trade tension and economic protectionism, Taiwan remains a dependable partner of the United States and looks forward to working with the United States and other democratic countries to achieve global peace and prosperity.

For a more up-to-date study of the Republic of China on Taiwan, I urge my colleagues to review Representative Ding's address with diligence and care. I ask unanimous consent that his address be reprinted in full.

There being no objection, the address ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF CHINA ON TAIWAN, AND ITS RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES

Ladies and gentleman: I am honored to address this prestigious and historic center for education and the arts. For generations, your Institution has inspired literacy and intellectual discourse among Americans, two elevating principles for mankind that are highly valued in my own Chinese culture as well. The vast political and social issues confronting us today are no less daunting than those our forebears contended with, and they merit thoughtful discussion in forums such as this whenever possible. What a pleasure it is to contribute perhaps a little perspective and wisdom to your proceedings here today.

As general euphoria over the end of the Cold War fades, we realize that a new array of political and security issues confronts us. Perhaps we have entered a new era, but every age has its threats and challenges. As the old East-West security concerns recede, different problems emerge, or re-emerge with greater clarity.

Old ethnic and territorial rivalries threaten to resurface in the void left by the end of superpower confrontation. The growing contract in income and social welfare between the richest and poorest nations, or "North-South gap," jeopardizes global stability and peace. Beset by their own economic problems, the wealthiest nations will have perhaps even more difficulty focusing on problems of developing nations. Trade tension and economic protectionism, even among old friends and allies, is resurgent. And the continuing destruction of our national resources by pollution and waste is a tragic by-product of this generations's rapid progress.

I understand you will focus this week on the Pacific, a dynamic and emerging power in global commercial relations. It is, as you may know, a distinctly heterogeneous and socially diverse region, stretching thousands of miles from the Kuril Islands in the North, down to the South Pacific Islands. The nations of the Pacific are at different stages of political and economic development. Yet together they comprise a major influence on international developments, and will continue to do so throughout the coming century.

There are important currents of change underway, perhaps less sensational in terms of daily headlines, but not less important than the historic transitions in Eastern Europe and other areas of the world. East Asia and the Pacific is the fastest growing region in terms of economic output, with average area-wide growth rates far higher than those of the European Community. Tensions have eased dramatically with the passage of old regimes and the new atmosphere of gradual reconciliation and cooperation. Political democratization is now a prevailing trend throughout the region, with a few notable exceptions like North Korea and Mainland China.

It is true that many political and social issues in the region remain unresolved. Still the region generally is advancing at a remarkable pace, and promises to be a significant factor in the world's destiny for years to come.

The Republic of China on Taiwan shares the same principles, interests, and goals as the majority of our neighbors. As one who has been at the forefront of change this past decade, the ROC expects to be a significant player in the region's modernization. Many of our neighboring states already rely increasingly on Taiwan's investment, trade, technical expertise, and aid programs. Indeed, the level of trade and investment between Northeast and Southeast Asia have soared in recent years. We believe in integrated regional approaches to common problems, such as those concerning natural resources, environmental protection, and energy resource development. The ROC accepts its responsibility to participate in regional planning and development.

I want to take this opportunity this morning to inform you about the broad range of dynamic and progressive developments taking place in my own country. We have embarked upon an historic program to fully democratize the Republic of China on Taiwan. Five years into that effort, we can say confidently that it is pervasive and irreversible. Every member of our legislative and representative institutions has now been closer through free and open elections. Our multiparty political system encourages broad scale representations and freewheeling campaigns. The individual's rights of speech, assembly, and petition are virtually unrestricted, even though we, as a society, still face a potential and unpredictable threat one hundred miles from our shores.

For us, this has been a dramatic and extensive transformation in a very short period of time. For every three decades, we clung to survival as an anti-communist outpost on the periphery of the world's largest communist enclave. We managed to do so only through vigilance and social discipline. Certain restrictions on political and social activity were necessary to protect our people and our governing institutions, similar to those undertaken by the United States during wartime. Even in that environment, opportunities for political participation and commercial initiative were widely available to our enterprising citizens. As our economic health and national security stabilized over time, the ROC leadership recognized the need for evolution in our society's freedom as well. Our government took the initiative in the 1980s to eliminate outdated restrictions, and to introduce democratic reforms that brought our society very quickly into the ranks of the world's freest nations.

It has been the perfect counterpart to our free enterprise tradition, expanding the liberalized climate in which prosperity and democracy are now thriving. Not only is the Republic of China on Taiwan the freest Chinese society in five thousand years of history, we are also among the most progressive nations in the world today, striving ever onward to complete our democratization program.

Political freedoms are reflected most vividly in the regular election forums now conducted on Taiwan. Since 1989, a large spectrum of legally registered political parties have fielded candidates in our Legislative Yuan contests. Like the United States, the ROC has two predominant political parties with significantly contrasting platforms and policy objectives. In addition, dozens of minor parties dot the political landscape, and legally compete in our open elections. Last December, historic elections were held for my country's Second National Assembly. This was a milestone toward fulfilling President Lee Teng-hui's commitment to reform the ROC Constitution and allow the popular election of all members of the nation's representative bodies.

The election itself says a lot about our political modernization process. Some 68 percent of our voters turned out for the smooth and orderly balloting. For weeks prior to the election, our citizens witnessed spirited competition among candidates representing numerous political parties. Our ruling Nationalist Party (KMT) platform advocated prosperity and reform; and was vindicated by receiving over 71 percent of the vote. The Democratic Progressive Party (DPP), received about 24 percent of the ballots cast.

U.S. observers hailed the historic importance of our democratic elections. Your State Department termed them "an important milestone in Taiwan's political reform process," and declared "we are pleased that they were held in an open and democratic fashion which promotes continued peace and stability in the region." The New York Times noted this was "the most democratic vote for a legislature ever held in China." Some opposition candidates tried to characterize this election as a referendum on the issue of "Taiwan independence." Contrary to government policy and our Constitution, the DPP Party platform contained a plank calling for establishment of an independent "Republic of Taiwan." Election results indicated strong popular opposition to this approach; and a clear preference for continuation of the ruling party's policies of economic prosperity, social stability, reform, and a gradual approach to reunification of China under free democratic principles. With its landslide victory in the December elections, the KMT Party emerged with a new popular mandate for the important tasks ahead. This coming December, our Legislative Yuan elections will provide yet another occasion for the vigorous airing of issues and proposals in an island-wide campaign.

Our new National Assembly has the responsibility to review and implement constitutional reform proposals. During its 1992 session, completed on May 30th, the National Assembly adopted eight constitutional amendments for structural reform in the ROC government. These include direct election of provincial governors and county magistrates, and popular election of the ROC president and vice president beginning in 1996. The method or the presidential election—whether by direct ballot or by delegate system—is to be decided within three years, after a careful review of public opinion on the matter. In addition, the amendments provide for national health insurance; environmentally conscious development of the economy; and protection of the rights of women, the handicapped, and minorities. These actions comprise a major step in my country's constitutional development.

In yet another significant step for democratic reform, the ROC Legislature in May revised the sedition clause of our Criminal Code, to apply only to those who commit overt acts of violence and coercion to overthrow the government. Previously, any action that might "tend" to incite rebellion was strictly prohibited. This significant step will liberalize even further our laws regarding freedom of speech and political activity.

Such actions to date signify the historic transition underway to implement western-style democracy and freedom in the Republic of China on Taiwan. Our commitment to this course is clear and firm.

Our successful story of national economic development on Taiwan is well known throughout the world. In the space of three decades, we were able to transform ourselves from an undeveloped, agrarian community into a highly productive consumer-oriented society on par with enterprising countries in the West.

The development of the Republic of China on Taiwan in the past thirty years has been phenomenal. In 1959, our population was 10.4 million; by last year it had doubled. In 1959, our per capita Gross National Product (GNP) was the equivalent of US$120; in 1991 it reached well over US$8,000, ranking 25th in the world. Disposable family income has reached an average of US$19,265 per household, and is still growing.

For the past thirty years, our economic growth rate has averaged 8.8% annually. At the same time, the high savings rate among our people and substantial foreign exchange reserves held by our government, together with low rates of inflation and unemployment, contributed to an atmosphere of increasing prosperity. The jobless rate in Taiwan remains less than two percent, as it has for several years. We are proud of our record in this area. We are also proud of the fact that extremely equitable income distribution has enabled everyone in our country to share the prosperity. In fact, the income gap between the top 20 percent and the bottom 20 percent in my country remains among the world's smallest. Moreover, according to a recent edition of Business Week magazine, the people on Taiwan rank first in the world in housing ownership, at 79.1%.

All this has been accomplished despite necessary heavy expenditures for national defense. We take pride in the fact that we have not grown by "mortgaging" our future and that of our children. On the contrary, our growth has generated government budget surpluses in every year except one (1982). Furthermore, we have not grown by enriching some at the expense of others.

By the end of 1992, we expect our gross national product to surge past $200 billion, ranking us 20th among all nations. Our per capita GNP will reach US$10,000. Moreover, our foreign trade will surpass US$150 billion, making us the 14th largest global trading actor. Despite the fact that our domestic economic structure is still in transition, we are moving toward an increasingly open economy aimed at liberalizing our trade, foreign exchange, and investment regimes. Our goal is to create a system in which private entrepreneurship, national prosperity, and political democracy can continue to flourish.

Taiwan earned its prosperity and its reputation for productivity as a manufacturer of labor-intensive goods, such as footwear and textiles. Today, we are making the transition to that producer of high-tech goods like computers and optic-fibers. As part of our modernization process, we are promoting automation, expanding technical training programs, and pursuing new joint ventures with our international financial partners. We believe Taiwan is destined to became a financial, transit, and technological center in the Western Pacific during the Twenty-first Century.

As I mentioned, we have managed to keep inflation and unemployment well under control in recent years, even as our economic growth rate—more than seven percent last year—has surpassed that of most western industrial countries. The spirit of entrepreneurship, coupled with intellectual creativity and efficient manpower, has provided for balanced growth in all sectors of our society. That same drive will carry us into the ranks of the fully developed economies in a very short time.

Despite our triumphs, we now face a number of economic challenges which we are determined to overcome. These challenges include:

a. a shortage of labor and rising wages;

b. an intensified labor movement and more complex industrial relations;

c. environmental pollution, which has triggered a strong domestic environmental protection movement;

d. rising energy costs and unstable prices of key resources;

e. soaring real estate prices; and

f. the NT dollar's appreciation against the U.S. dollar at a rate of nearly 47% since 1986, with all that this implies.

These factors are being addressed with the same vision and determination which brought us successfully to this point.

The Republic of China's policy abroad is to engage in free and fair trading competition as we pursue greater market diversification overseas, and less restrictive import regulations. While we are not yet a member of GATT (the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade), we voluntarily adhere to many of its global trading principles, and hope to gain accession in the very near future.

Thirty years ago, the ROC on Taiwan engaged in total global trade of only about US$400 million, with a net trade deficit of some $80 million. By contrast, in 1991, our worldwide trade volume reached nearly US$140 billion. So we do feel our economic stature has been well established, both at home and abroad.

For many years, exports abroad were the engine of our economic progress. But the percentage of Taiwan's foreign trade in our GNP has gone down substantially in recent years, as a result of our policy of expanding domestic demand. Statistics show that our reliance on foreign trade has declined year by year since the late 1980s. The ratio of our foreign trade to the GNP fell from a high of 106% in 1980, to 90% in 1989, and to 84% in the first half of this year. Domestic demand will be accelerated even further by our current National Development Plan.

Perhaps you already know that in September 1990 my government announced a six-year, $300 billion "National development Plan" to upgrade infrastructure on the island. This plan includes a number of major expenditures for housing, schools, medical and transportation facilities. The goal is to improve the national well-being of every citizen. There will be more affordable housing, better schools, and better transportation facilities between schools and towns.

The plan is expected to increase the per capita Gross National Product from the present $8,000 to $14,000 in 1996. As an added bonus, the plan should spur private investment, thereby increasing public demand and reducing Taiwan's trade surplus. The anticipated 775 projects will offer important opportunities for overseas participation in developing our communications and transportation systems; energy resources; environmental protection; flood prevention; science and technology; and health and medical care programs.

Indeed, many of the areas where the ROC requires the most assistance are precisely those areas where US firms have goods and services to offer. For example, American companies are world leaders in the development of environmental technology and in the management of environmental programs. Your companies should be able to provide us with machinery and equipment needed for protecting and preserving our natural heritage and with the management expertise needed for enforcing government environmental policies throughout the nation.

The U.S. Commerce Department recently described us as a prosperous market that "represents significant opportunities for American companies to bid on contracts for major projects, including flood control, city transportation networks, water and sewage plants, and highway construction."

U.S. business already is heavily involved in my country in the fields of pollution control, computers, automated production equipment, telecommunications, household furnishings and appliances, transportation, high-tech instruments, petrochemicals and processed foods. Ford Motor Company, for instance, which established plants in Taiwan in the 1970's, has gained the largest market share for automobiles in my country, competing against ten other manufacturers. IBM Taiwan Corporation and Hewlett-Packard Taiwan Limited are major distributors of computers, while AT&T is one of our largest telecommunications product suppliers.

I sincerely hope that the success and confidence shown in the ROC on Taiwan by certain U.S. companies will lead other American firms to explore and undertake significant commercial ventures in our market.

In 1991 alone, United States engineering companies won more than a billion dollars worth of major contracts in Taiwan. Some 200 U.S. firms either bid on, or participated in the 50 largest projects covered by the Six-Year Development Plan last year. We hope this trend may continue. Of course, product quality, realistic prices, and after-sales service will help U.S. business sustain its favored position in our market.

Commercial interaction between my country and the United States has always been extensive, and it remains so today. In fact, Taiwan is the sixth largest trading partner of your country, and you remain one of our largest overseas markets. American exports to Taiwan have nearly tripled in the last six years. We have successfully reduced our trade surplus with you by ten percent a year, over the past five years; from $16 billion in 1987 to $9.1 billion in 1990, and to $8.2 billion last year. In addition, an ever-increasing portion of our private investment abroad—more than fifty percent, in fact—is targeted at the United States, where high-tech industries, financial institutions, and construction companies are attracting Chinese investors. Total amounts already run into the billions of dollars, and Taipei intends to encourage our businessmen to set up additional plants and take part in mergers of U.S. companies. Last year, the United States ranked as the number one investor in Taiwan, at about forty percent of the total amount.

In the meantime, the two of us have been able to resolve successfully those few areas of disagreement over commercial policies and practices. In June of this year, we jointly agreed to phase out export curbs of machine tools from Taiwan by the end of 1993. This accord follows the expiration last year of our five-year-old voluntary restraint agreement. Our new Voluntary Restraint Understanding on machine tool exports had been welcomed by U.S. manufacturers.

Also in June, we reached an agreement on intellectual property rights protection after extensive discussions. Taiwan will strengthen its measures for protecting international property rights, including patents and publication copyrights. My government strongly believes that counterfeiting is not only immoral but also damaging to research and development efforts. Our executive branch will work with our legislature to complete the enactment of laws for enhancing and enforcing intellectual property protection.

We are gratified by your government's open support last year for our admission to the Asian Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, and prospectively to the GATT. Our participation in those organizations will enhance their effectiveness and relevance over the long run.

Of course, not all cooperation between our two countries is in the economic or financial realm. The range of our common interests, and the extent of our goodwill, is vast. Educational, cultural, scientific, and technological links between us are well advanced. We have entered dozens of bilateral agreements involving such U.S. agencies as the National Science Foundation, National Institutes of Health, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Exchange of research visits involve hundreds of your citizens and ours each year.

I know that the Chautauqua Institution is a major champion of scholarly discourse. Intellectual dialogue and interaction is a well-established tradition between your country and mine. Chinese students have been coming to the United States to study for well over a century. Among all foreign students currently studying in the United States, Taiwan has the third largest number, at 33,000. Among those foreign students now attending schools on Taiwan, the thousand-plus Americans studying Chinese language and culture far outnumber those from anywhere else.

Three years ago, the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange was established by donations from private and public sectors in my country, in honor of our late president. The Foundation funds research by foreign scholars on subjects related to the Republic of China. With more than $100 million principal, the Foundation also is contributing to educational programs at various overseas institutions, primarily American universities. Since its inception, $11 million dollars has been committed to 176 U.S. universities and research institutions. We expect these projects to significantly upgrade academic cooperation in Chinese-area studies.

As all of you well appreciate, education tends to reinforce those political and social values and objectives which free societies like ours embrace. So it is these scholarly ties between your country and mine that have bolstered our common commitment to democracy, liberty, and justice. Truly, it can be said that the democratic reform movement in the Republic of China on Taiwan was inspired, and has been stimulated by the American model of liberty, free speech, and universal political participation.

Before closing, I want to say a word about the issue of China in general. My government stands for the peaceful and democratic unification of China. The present reality is that China is temporarily separated into two areas—the mainland and Taiwan—with two political entities. The timing and method of China's eventful reunification must respect the rights and interests of the Chinese people on Taiwan, safeguard their safety and welfare, and recognize the rights of the Chinese people on the mainland to freedom and democracy.

In his inaugural address of May 1990, President Lee Teng-hui advocated the institution of democratic and free market reforms on the mainland. He held forth the possibility of broader exchanges and discussions with Peking once it renounces the use of military force against Taiwan and pledges not to interfere with the R.O.C.'s external relationships.

The growing network of private contacts and exchanges between Chinese people on Taiwan and on the mainland already enhances prospects for eventual reunification. To date, Taiwan residents have made more than 2 million trips to the mainland, while over 17,000 mainland residents have visited Taiwan. Indirect trade through Hong Kong surpassed $5 billion in 1991.

The Guidelines for National Unification which my government adopted last year include these essential points:

(1) The ROC adheres to the Principle of "one China," and seeks China's unification.

(2) It insists on peaceful unification, and opposes the use of force.

(3) The rights and interests of the people in the Taiwan area should be respected.

(4) Peaceful unification of China should proceed in three phases: near-, mid-, and long-term.

In the "near-term phase of exchanges and reciprocity," the ROC government encourages people-to-people contacts between two sides of the Straits. At present, the ROC government has set up the Straits Exchange Foundation (SEF) to act as an intermediary organization for handling affairs concerning both sides of the Straits. In the "mid-term phase of mutual trust and cooperation," we hope that both sides of the Straits would establish official communication channels on an equal footing, and we propose joint development of the south-eastern coastal area of the mainland. in the "long-term phase of consultation and unification," the Guidelines suggest that a consultative organization for unification be established for joint discussion of the grand task of unification. This is our constructive program to reunite the Chinese people.

Last month, our legislature approved a "Statute for Relations across the Taiwan Straits" to provide a legal basis for bi-coastal contact between people on Taiwan and the Chinese Mainland. It authorizes our Executive Branch to initiate the set-up of direct trade, shipping, and postal links. But any move in that direction must first be approved by the legislature, based on assurances of Peking's sincerity in improving bi-coastal ties. Such assurances remain elusive.

Allow me to close this morning with the observation that the Republic of China's longtime friendship and cooperation with the United States is a cornerstone of my country's international policy. The Cold War "victory" of the free world is due as much to the cohesion of global democracies as it is to the disintegration within the communist system. The same common vision of universal freedom and peace which brought us, together, to this point will sustain us all in the future as we contend with new challenges and circumstances.

The broad range of interests, objectives, and principles which our two countries share means that we view many global issues in the same way. Your country, as leader of the progressive nations, can count on the ROC as a dependable partner in the era ahead. We have much to offer. Though small geographically, Taiwan today is a showcase model of success for other developing nations, large and small. Our example, and our assistance, can serve the interests of East Asian progress over time. We look forward to working with the United States and other democratic countries to achieve global peace and prosperity for this generation and those to come.

Thank you very much.

STATEMENT ON SENATOR CRANSTON AND THE STAFF OF THE VETERANS' AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, before we adjourn for the year, I wanted to take a few moments to wish Godspeed to our dear friend and colleague, ALAN CRANSTON, who is departing the Senate after 24 stellar years as a legislator and statesman of international stature, as well as to thank the staff of the Veterans' Affairs Committee for their many years of outstanding service to the Nation's veterans.

During his four terms as a U.S. Senator, ALAN CRANSTON left an indelible mark on virtually, every major issue of the day. Think of any of the following—arms control, improved relations with the then Soviet Union, SALT II, START, the Panama Canal Treaty, the Mideast peace process, affordable housing, environmental protection, national parks, mass transit, a woman's right to choose, the disabled, civil rights, civil liberties, health, immigration reform—and one cannot help associating them in some way with the Senator from California.

But my own experience with Senator CRANSTON has been largely confined to my acquaintance with him as a member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, which he has chaired so ably over the years. For the 2½ years that I have served as a member of that panel, I have some to know and appreciate the full extent of ALAN CRANSTON's grand legacy to veterans.

ALAN CRANSTON, as chairman or ranking member or member of the Committee, and of its precursor, the Subcommittee on Veterans' Affairs, has either written or helped write every major veterans initiative of the last two decades, from the Montgomery GI bill to creation of the Readjustment Counseling Service, from the Job Training Partnership Act to agent orange compensation, from expansion of the Home Loan Guaranty Program to passage of the Judicial Review Act, from reform of the Dependency and Indemnity Compensation Program to services for women veterans who have been sexually abused. He will be given special credit for drawing attention to the needs of Vietnam veterans, women, minorities, and veterans of such recent conflicts as Grenada, Panama, and the Persian Gulf. The depth of his commitment to those who served will be forever engraved in the thousands of improvements he made to title 38, of the United States Code. His philosophy of veterans benefits—that the Nation owes a fundamental, continuing obligation to veterans, particularly to disabled veterans, and to the survivors of those who died in battle—will serve as a standard for all those who follow.

Apart from his legislative accomplishments, Senator CRANSTON was a delight to work with. As chairman, he was unfailingly courteous, ever willing to entertain dissenting views, and eager to offer assistance to his less experienced junior colleagues. Though it was his right, he never abused the authority conferred by seniority, preferring accommodation to raw displays of power, and gentle persuasion to parliamentary legalisms. For ALAN CRANSTON is that rare man: A politician with a conscience, a statesman for whom goals and means are inextricably linked, an individual whose public ideals are more than matched by an inner grace.

And so, Mr. President, I will miss this good man who has taught this junior Member much about what it means to be a U.S. Senator. I honor his service to the Nation, and I cherish him for his humanity.

Mr. President, in wishing the best of luck to Senator CRANSTON, I also would like to bid farewell to the outstanding staff of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, including staff director and chief counsel Ed Scott, general counsel Bill Brew, associate counsels Michael Cogan and Thomas Tighe, professional staff members Janet Coffman, Chuck Lee, and Susan Thaul, and the rest of the staff, including Charlotte Hughes, Neil Koren, Virginia Rowthorn-Apel, Kelly Cordes, Tom Hart, Chris Mohr, Jo Meuse, and Rosalie Dukasin.

Mr. President, I do not exaggerate when I say that these individuals collectively represent the finest staff I have ever had the privilege of working with in my 16 years on Capitol Hill. They are bright, hard working, knowledgeable, and truly dedicated to their mission—which is to help us help veterans. I know that I have relied on them for advice and background material on any and every conceivable veterans issue—to the point where I often thought they were really just extensions of my personal staff.

I am particularly grateful to Ed, Bill, Michael, Thomas, and Neil for their assistance in working on specific initiatives I have supported, including my efforts to establish a VA medical center on Oahu to help native American veterans obtain direct VA home loans, to make members of the National Guard and reservists eligible for the VA home loan program, to establish a special center in Hawaii to assist veterans suffering from combat-related psychological problems, to require VA to undertake a comprehensive study of posttraumatic stress disorder in minority veterans, and to establish the position of Chief Minority Affairs Officer within the Department of Veterans Affairs.

In addition, Ed, Bill, and Thomas accompanied me on several different occasions to Hawaii to help me conduct oversight hearings and inspection tours on VA health care matters, activities which materially aided the veterans of my State.

Mr. President, I will miss the Veterans' Affairs Committee staff. I will miss their earnestness. I will miss their youthful idealism. I will miss their enthusiasm. I truly hope that their energy and experience will not be lost to the Senate or the Nation, that their services will be utilized by the next chairman of the committee or by the new administration.

Thank you, Mr. President. Senator CRANSTON and his staff represent the best traditions of public service. I know that I speak for the entire Senate when I thank them for their service to the Nation and urge their continued involvement in the great public issues of the day.

JEWISH GERIATRIC SERVICES, INC. OF LONGMEADOW—80 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE ELDERLY

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to take this opportunity to congratulate the Jewish Geriatric Services, Inc., of Longmeadow, MA, which is celebrating 80 years of excellent service and tireless dedication to older Americans.

Established in 1912, the Jewish Geriatric Center was pioneered by a group of 18 women and 1 man. Bound by a common goal, they combined their efforts to raise funds to provide food for elderly citizens throughout the Springfield Jewish community. Today, after 80 years of outstanding service, this distinguished organization still maintains its funding commitment to provide needed services and support for elderly residents in the area.

In keeping with its longstanding tradition, the women's division of today's Jewish Geriatric Services continues its efforts to carry on these services. This year's celebration marks a milestone. It continues to enrich the lives of those in need, by offering comfort and dignity to all those assisted by its services.

Jewish Geriatric Services, Inc., is an exemplary institution that offers indispensable aid to the community. It has become one of the most effective organizations serving the elderly, and I commend it for its success, and I extend my best wishes for many more years of successful accomplishments.

THE NEWS ON THE PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICE FRONT: BAD, AND GETTING WORSE

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, today, I want to update my colleagues on an issue that is very important to me and vital to millions of older Americans: their ability to afford prescription medications. Day after day, older Americans write to me as chairman of the Special Committee on Aging, pleading that Congress do something about the high cost of drugs.

PLEAS FOR HELP COMING IN BY THE THOUSANDS

In the past 6 months, new reports have been released which demonstrate that millions of older Americans are unable to obtain their drugs. Before I describe these reports, however, I want to share with my colleagues the events of the past few days, which, in my opinion, put a more compelling human face on the prescription drug cost crisis facing the United States than any report can.

This past Monday night, CBS aired a special segment on their nightly news program describing the impact that rising drug prices have had on Americans of all ages. The segment also described a new report developed by the Senate Special Committee on Aging staff which lists all the programs that drug manufacturers have to make their prescription drugs available free of charge to patients that cannot afford them.

Since the airing of that report, the committee has been absolutely deluged with thousands of requests from individuals of all ages and from all across the country, asking desperately for a copy of this report. Extra phone lines had to be installed to accommodate the number of calls that have been coming in, validating what I have been saying all along: That people are hurting and cannot afford their medications. In call after call, we are hearing the heart-wrenching stories of individuals who describe the astronomical cost of medication that they absolutely have to take, and how they often wonder whether they will be able to afford them the next time they need a refill.

Even more startling is the news that we are hearing from many physicians that are also calling in. These physicians are telling us that they were shocked to hear that these free drug programs existed and that, in spite of the drug companies' claims to the contrary, they have never heard about them from the drug manufacturers that regularly visited them.

Mr. President, why have we reached this sorry state of affairs in the United States today? The lion's share of the blame rests squarely on the shoulders of the drug manufacturers of this country. These five reports will clearly and unequivocally illustrate that all we receive in return for the extravagant tax credits and tax breaks, monopolistic patent protection, and generous Federal Government research subsidies that we give to the drug industry is the highest medication prices in the industrialized world. It is these pricing policies that are responsible for the thousands of calls that we have received over the last few days, and the thousands of more I am sure that we will receive over the next few days and months.

GAO REPORT ON SECTION 936 DRUG INDUSTRY TAX BREAKS

Mr. President, last May, the General Accounting Office released a report that shocked and startled even those of us who have long known that the pharmaceutical industry is the beneficiary of some of the most lavish tax breaks and tax credits given to any industry in the United States. Not only does this industry receive hundreds of millions of dollars in research and development tax credits, orphan drug tax credits, and marketing and advertising deductions, it also receives the largest share—about $2 billion dollars each year—of a tax credit which is clearly the mother of all tax credits: section 936.

Under the section 936 tax credit bonanza, the pharmaceutical industry is able to close up manufacturing operations in the United States and move them to Puerto Rico, transfer drug patents to the island, avoid paying millions of dollars in taxes on the sales of these items, and then receive a credit of about $70,000 per employee on an average salary of about $24,000 that they pay to each employee. This tax credit, which was designed to stimulate the growth of jobs in Puerto Rico, has done more—much more—to add to the drug industry's already-bloated bottom line rather than create jobs.

In fact, while the drug industry receives 56 percent of all section 936 tax credits, it only employs 18 percent of all section 936 employees. And, for some companies, the tax credit received per employee hired is higher—much higher—than the $70,000 average.

For example, Pfizer receives a tax credit of $156,000 for every employee that they hire in Puerto Rico, 636 percent more than the salary that they pay that employee. Merck receives $110,000 for every employee that they hire, 450 percent more than the salary that they pay. No wonder why these companies hired an army of lobbyists to defeat my proposal that would use this tax credit as an incentive for drug companies to contain drug prices.

In March 1992, I offered an amendment to the tax bill that would pare back these section 936 windfall tax credits to drug manufacturers that increased their prices faster than the rate of inflation. While I was not successful in convincing my colleagues in March to enact this amendment, had this report been in my hands on the Senate floor during that debate, I believe that the outcome would have been much different. This report provides more weight to the argument that we should target this windfall tax credit as a good first step in reducing drug costs in the United States.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED PERSONS REPORT

In 1982 and 1986, the American Association of Retired Persons released reports on the ability of older Americans to afford their medications. In 1986, the report found that three of four older Americans said that their highest out-of-pocket medical cost was for prescription medications. Last year, the association did a telephone survey of thousands of older Americans to determine whether this sorry situation had improved or deteriorated. Unfortunately, the July 1992 report showed that the situation had definitely deteriorated:

About 8 million Americans over 45 now say that they have to cut back on necessary items such as food or fuel to pay for their medications. This sorry statistic is being validated this very day by the number of requests that we have been receiving for the Aging Committee report on the drug manufacturer indigent patient programs.

About 18.4 million older Americans over 65 report that they have trouble paying for their medications.

About 43 percent of older Americans age 55 and over have absolutely no prescription drug coverage. That means 23 million older Americans are left exposed to potential financial catastrophe from exorbitant medication bills.

The problem is worse—much worse—for older Americans over age 75. Only 40 percent of this population group has drug insurance coverage, leaving 8 million older Americans in this age group without drug coverage.

REPORT OF THE SENATE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON AGING

Mr. President, the staff of the Senate Special Committee on Aging completed its own report in August, 1992 on the ability of older Americans to afford their medications. Here is what that report showed:

Because of 12 years of triple digit price inflation for medications, the ability of older Americans to afford their drugs has reached a crisis situation in this country. Many older Americans are having to skip doses or cut their tablets in half to stretch their prescription.

The majority of older Americans do not have private or public health insurance for prescription drugs. In fact, over 64 percent of all medication costs for older Americans are paid out-of-pocket. It is the near-poor elderly that do have have Medicaid that have the highest out-of-pocket drug costs, and the hardest time paying for their medications.

While Medicaid's prescription drug program can act as a safety-value in helping the poorest of the poor obtain their medications, only about 16 percent of older Americans—about 1.9 million—that are classified as poor or near poor qualify for Medicaid. That means that 84 percent of poor or near poor Americans—about 10 million—do not qualify for Medicaid's prescription drug coverage.

Although many manufacturers say that they have special programs to make their medications available free-of-charge to patients that cannot afford them, the report found that only a handful of the millions of older Americans that could benefit from the programs are actually taking advantage of them. The thousands of requests that we have received over the last few days for information about these programs are all the evidence we need that patients and physicians are unaware of these programs. In addition, these programs are not particularly user-friendly. Indigent patients often have to wait weeks before they are able to get the medications that they need to live.

GAO REPORT ON SKYROCKETING PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICES

Another report about the high costs of medications was released in August by the General Accounting Office [GAO]. In that report, manufacturers of 29 widely used prescription drugs were asked to explain the reasons for the excessive price increases that we have seen on some of their products over the last few years. As we might expect, the report found that the drug manufacturers gave their standard boilerplate argument that their price increases were needed to fund research and development of new drugs.

Although that argument is now threadbare, the fact is that a manufacturer which is spending 15 percent of its sales on R&D would only have to increase its prices by 1.5 percent each year to increase R&D by 10 percent. Where are all these excess price increases going? To marketing, advertising, and profits. That is the bottom line.

Not only are drug manufacturers increasing prices on drugs that are still on patent, but some of the stiffest price increases occurred on drugs that have been off patent for decades, such as Dilantin, used to treat epilepsy, Synthroid, used as a thyroid replacement, and Nitrostat, used for angina. Price increases of the magnitude described in this report for products that have been off patent for decades are totally inexcusable and the most blatant example of price gouging the American public.

FAMILIES USA REPORT

Just last month, in September 1992, Families USA released a most compelling indictment of the pharmaceutical industry's pricing practices. We know that the industry has wrecked havoc on the American public by increasing drug prices over the past 12 years by three times the rate of inflation. This report went one step further. It showed us how the industry abuses the monopoly power that we have given them by granting patents on their products. Patents are needed to encourage innovation in all areas of our society. Patents allow the inventor assurance of adequate time to recover their investment in discovering and making the product. However, Congress did not create patents to encourage price gouging, especially on products as vital as medications. Here's what the Families USA Report found:

Over the past 6 years—from 1985 through 1991—the top 20 prescription drugs used by older Americans almost quadrupled in price. Many of these medications are still on patent, and no lower-cost generic alternative is yet available.

The profits of the manufacturers of the top 20 drugs used by Americans have increased at 5 times the average of the Fortune 500 companies. That is, while the average Fortune 500 company was making profits of 3.2 percent, the average profit of the manufacturer of the top 20 drugs was 15.1 percent. They have been able to make these monopoly profits because they have been abusing the patent that we have given them.

Because of this incredible price gouging on patented pharmaceutical products, older Americans at the lowest income level, who are unprotected by Medicaid, have the highest out-of-pocket prescription drug costs of any income group of older Americans. These Americans spend 10 percent of their total income on prescription drugs. No wonder that 8 million older Americans say that they have to make choices between paying for food and medications. These older Americans go to bed at night wondering whether they will be able to afford a pill to treat their diabetes or their high blood pressure. These are choices that no American should have to make.

VOLUNTARY EFFORTS FALL FAR SHORT OF WHAT IS NEEDED

Mr. President, we have heard much rhetoric from the drug companies and their supporters that they are voluntarily going to restrain their drug price increases in 1992. Well, recent data do not show that the drug manufacturers are putting their money where their mouth is.

In fact, drug inflation is increasing at an even faster rate. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, during the period between August 1991 and August 1992, while the overall inflation rate was 1.5 percent, drug prices 6.3 percent, more than 4 times the amount. Unfortunately, these data show why voluntary approaches to pharmaceutical cost containment can not and will not work.

First, not all manufacturers have taken the pledge to keep their price increases to inflation. In fact, only six drug companies have taken this pledge, and we have no idea whether these manufacturers will continue to show restraint if we take their outrageous behavior out of the spotlight. Second, these voluntary commitments do nothing about the astronomical cost of new drugs coming to the market. In recent years, we have seen some drugs come to market at a cost of $3,000 to $4,000 a dose. The bottom line is this: nothing short of legislative initiatives will assure that the American public will pay fair prices for medications.

Mr. President, when the 103d Congress convenes, I will continue to seek enactment of practical, reasonable approaches to pharmaceutical cost containment. We must also find ways to expand access to needed medications among various vulnerable population groups. Health care reform is inevitable, and whether prescription drug costs are 5 percent or 10 percent of the health care dollar, they are too important and too expensive to be left out of meaningful health care cost containment mechanisms.

The only real solution to the crisis so vividly described in these reports lies in strong mechanisms that reduce the cost of pharmaceuticals for all Americans. We have to be sure that Americans are not being price-gouged by an industry that has clearly abused the patent protection on their products.

We have to protect Americans against paying high drug prices to subsidize lavish and extravagant drug manufacturer marketing campaigns which have little or no educational value for health care professionals. We have to be certain that the American taxpayer pays a fair price for those drugs that are developed with financial support from Federal Government laboratories and institutions, such as the National Institutes of Health.

Finally, Americans want to know why we should continue to allow the drug industry to reap the benefits of a $2 billion a year windfall tax credit when all we get in return are drug prices that climb higher and higher into the outer stratosphere. Mr. President, these are among the issues that I intend to take up once again shortly after we convene the 103d Congress next January.

IRRESPONSIBLE CONGRESS? HERE IS TODAY'S BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the Federal debt run up by the U.S. Congress stood at $4,059,483,157,798.59 as of the close of business on October 5, 1992.

Anybody familiar with the U.S. Constitution knows that no President can spend a dime that has not first been authorized and appropriated by the Congress of the United States.

During fiscal year 1991, it cost the American taxpayers $286,022,000,000 just to pay the interest on Federal spending approved by Congress—spending over and above what the Federal Government collected in taxes and other income. Averaged out, this amounts to $5.5 billion every week, or $785 million every day, just to pay the interest on the existing Federal debt.

On a per capita basis, every man, woman and child owes $15,804.33—thanks to the big-spenders in Congress for the past half century. Paying the interest on this massive debt, averaged out, amounts to $1,127.85 per year for each man, woman, and child in America—or, to look at it another way, for each family of four, the tab—to pay the interest alone—comes to $4,511.40 per year.

What would America be like today if there had been a Congress that had the courage and the integrity to operate on a balanced budget?

IN TRIBUTE TO THE FIREFIGHTERS WHO DIED IN THE LINE OF DUTY IN 1991

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, on October 11, 1992, firefighters who died in the line of duty during 1991 will be honored at the 11th Annual National Fallen Firefighters' Memorial Service in Emmitsburg, MD. Since I am unable to attend the memorial service, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my condolences to the families and friends of our fallen firefighters.

Our Nation owes a great debt to the brave men and women of the fire service who work tirelessly and risk much to protect us. No matter how dangerous or difficult the emergency, they are always there. Whether they are battling the intense flames, heat, and smoke of a fire raging out of control, freeing a motorist from the twisted wreckage of his car, or helping a town rebuild after a natural disaster; our dedicated firefighters are there to perform their lifesaving duties with courage and compassion.

Tragically, the dangers of the job take a terrible toll. Last year, 105 firefighters made the ultimate sacrifice for their communities. Included in their number are four firefighters from Connecticut: Ronald C. Altieri who served with the Hamden Fire Department; Robert A. Cole who served with the Beacon Hose Co. No. 1; Michael Moriarty who served with the Canterbury Volunteer Fire Co.; and Daniel E. Wannagot who served with the Shelton Fire Department. These men worked hard to make their communities a better and safer place and they will live on in our hearts and minds. To their families and friends I extend my sympathy. My thoughts and prayers are with them.

DEDICATION OF THE FEDERAL JUDICIARY BUILDING

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, last Wednesday, the city of Washington was presented with a grand architectural achievement: The new Federal Judiciary Building. The building is a brilliant complement to Daniel Burnham's Union Station and newly restored Postal Square. Wednesday's dedication ceremony was graced with the words of the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, Senator MOYNIHAN, who served as chairman of the Commission for the Judiciary Office Building, Chief Justice William Rehnquist, and the Honorable L. Ralph Mecham, Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

Mr. President, dedication of any new Federal building, let alone one of this magnificence, is a special and rare ceremony. It is not something we do every day, nor should we take it lightly. The words of Senator MOYNIHAN, Chief Justice Rehnquist, and Mr. Mecham were dignified and celebratory, and should be shared with the full Senate. Accordingly, I ask unanimous consent that their statements be entered into the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN

One of the engaging features of the American experiment, as we persist in calling it, is the counterpoint between our insistent association with classical republican forms of government, and equal insistence that ours is indeed a wholly "New Order of the Ages". As proclaimed in Latin on the Great Seal.

The founders had few illusions about the "fugitive existence", as Madison put it, of those ancient republics. Yet, you cannot doubt their dream that the mind of man might yet devise a mode of republican government that would endure.

The experiment goes on, not least in the evolution of the Nation's Capital, a wholly new city designed to facilitate and to celebrate this republic, and to illustrate its character with Greek and Roman architectural forms. In this regard, there have been good times, and, well less good. (The Persian drinking horns that festoon the Rayburn Building being one not altogether fortunate example.) But one of the finest moments came at the beginning of this century with the Report of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia on the Improvement of the Park System of the District of Columbia, named for its chairman, Senator James McMillan of Michigan. The Commission recovered the neoclassical clarity of the L'Enfant plan for the city, most particularly by proposing to clear the Mall of existing and prospective railroad stations. Instead, we would have one station on the present sight. But no ordinary railroad shed.

"The plans call for a station eight feet and eight inches longer than the Capitol, the building to be of white marble, the facade to be Roman in stile of architecture, and the construction and arrangements to be so planned as to make this station superior to any structure ever erected for railway. Facing the Capitol, and yet not too near that edifice, the new station will front upon a plaza six hundred feet in width and twelve hundred feet in length, where bodies of troops or large organizations can be formed during inaugural times or on other like occasions. Thus located and constructed, the union depot will be in reality the great and impressive gateway to Washington.[1]

Daniel Burnham, who could make no little plans, conceived an arrangement of three buildings, and in turn design the station itself and the Post Office to the west, bequeathing the present eastern site to our age. As chairman of the Commission for the Judiciary Office Building, I hope you will agree with us that the American genius has never been more on display than here and now. The critic Benjamin Forgey has described this work of Edward Larrabee Barnes and his associates as "an abstract variation of classicism." We are now beyond Greek and Roman. Yet, the antiphony persists. As President Kennedy would say Pericles would say, "We do not imitate, but are an example to others."

Not only in the arts, but also in government. The McMillan Commission report concluded with this passage:

"By the patient and steadfast cooperation of all those persons charged with the upbuilding of the District of Columbia, a result may be attained such as has been reached in no other capital city of the modern world. The task is indeed a stupendous one; it is much greater than any one generation can hope to accomplish. The very hearty and intelligent cooperation that the plans have received by the officers of the Government, the committees of Congress, and by the public generally makes it reasonably certain that the development of the National Capital will be prosecuted along the general lines proposed; and that the city which Washington and Jefferson planned with so much care and with such prophetic vision will continue to expand, keeping pace with national advancement, until it becomes the visible expression of the power and taste of the people of the United States.[2]

Lest too much gravitas descend, let us recall Mencken's observation that "No one ever went broke underestimating the taste of the American people." As for McMillan, it would seem closest he ever came to going broke was in the elections of 1895 and 1899, when, as his biographer notes, as sometime Republican State chairman, "he took considerable trouble and expense to insure his unanimous election by the Michigan legislature.[3] This required that he buy every Democratic vote in Lansing.[4] Money well spent, say I.

REMARKS OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE

I am pleased to join you in dedicating our new Federal Judiciary Building. My predecessor, Warren Burger, recognized more than twenty years ago the need for a building to house in one location the various agencies which comprise the support system of the federal judiciary. Today, his vision has become reality. Its realization has been much aided by the efforts of those in the judicial branch—especially Ralph Mecham and his colleagues in the Administrative Office of United States Courts—and by those in the executive and legislative branches—particularly by Senator Moynihan.

We also express our appreciation to George White, the Barnes/Lee architectural partnership and those who brought their design to fruition. This handsome structure surely provides a fitting complement to Union Station and Postal Square, both of which were recently refitted to their original splendor, albeit modified to serve contemporary needs and functions. It has often been said that the public buildings of an era reflect the mood of its times. Adjacent to us on Columbus Circle, Union Station's architectural style exemplified an era of robust optimism and a sense of limitless potential that, as many historians have noted, has been considerably toned down as the century has advanced. What can be said of this building and its style, which evokes so many of the patterns of its predecessors?

We can speak of the timelessness of the classical architectural elements that make up both buildings—and a timeless style is particularly appropriate in a building dedicated to the administration of justice. The strong classical elements symbolize the timeless strength of the system left to us by the framers of the Constitution, who themselves consciously referred to classical models. The modern elements of the design—the glass walls around us and the glass canopy above us, floating on few visible means of support—do not detract from the classical symbolism. The German philosopher Schelling called architecture "music in space, as it were a frozen music"—and this building admirably fits that description.

It will soon teem with more than one thousand employees who staff the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, The Federal judicial Center, the United States Sentencing Commission, and the Panel on Multidistrict Litigation—agencies whose purpose is to support the programs, policies, and goals of the federal judicial branch. Their integration at last from many scattered locations into this central structure symbolizes the nation's need for a unified, efficient, and properly focused federal court system to meet the serious challenges confronting it today.

Most Americans—indeed, probably most people everywhere—from their impression of the system of justice under which they live by their experience with that system in their own community. For them, the local courthouse is the tangible symbol of the availability of justice, and of its quality. By contrast, most Americans—indeed, most lawyers and probably many judges—will not know the purpose which this building serves. Most of those who have noticed it probably passed it on their way to and from Union Station—their momentary curiosity limited to the progress of the construction, and the unfolding of its architectural design. To them, it will undoubtedly seem just another large government building housing yet another Washington bureaucracy. But we should make no mistake about the importance of this building in the administration of justice.

The federal judiciary has experienced tremendous changes since 1907, when the first train pulled into the newly built Union Station. At that time Melville Fuller presided over the Supreme Court, but not over the federal judicial system, principally because the organization of the federal judiciary 85 years ago bore little resemblance to that today. The local federal courts enjoyed nearly complete independence in the conduct of their business and in the appointment of staff. The circuit courts of appeal had been in existence a mere sixteen years and the beginnings of centralized administration of the federal judiciary—the establishment of the Judicial Conference of the United States—would not take place until 1922.

Until 1939, funding for the administration of the federal courts came from the budget of the Department of Justice. The report of the Judicial Conference of the United States was submitted to the Attorney General of the United States, who incorporated it into his own annual budget. To alleviate the potential interbranch friction this arrangement occasioned, Congress passed legislation in 1939 creating the Administrative Office, Circuit Conferences, and Circuit Councils. And, as some of you know, for the first three decades of its existence, the Administrative Office had quarters on the ground floor of the Supreme Court Building.

Almost thirty years after creation of the AO, President Johnson in 1967 proposed the establishment of the Federal Judicial Center to promote a more effective federal judiciary through research, planning and education. The President included the proposal in his "Message on Crime in America" partly because the federal courts were inundated by the federalization of criminal laws. It is interesting to note parenthetically that today, twenty-five years later, we face a similar inundation of federal courts as a result of the accumulation of congressional decisions to transfer matters previously handled in state courts to the federal courts. What a fitting illustration of the French proverb "Plus ca change, plus c'est le meme chose"—(the more things change, the more they remain the same). The United States Sentencing Commission and the Panel on Multidistrict Litigation are of even more recent vintage and, like the other judicial agencies, were created to promote more effective administration of criminal and civil justice in the federal courts.

Although the frontline administration of justice will continue to be done in courthouses throughout the United States, the work that will transpire within these walls will do much to support it. The federal judiciary has become too complex and large-scale an organization to continue to grow in a purely reactive way; it must develop plans for future growth that may be presented to Congress in order to aid that body in making the necessary determinations. That work, and the other work done in this building, will contribute importantly to the maintenance of our national ideals of respect for the rule of law and equal justice for all. To these ideals we today dedicate this building.

REMARKS OF L. RALPH MECHAM

Chief Justice Rehnquist, Chief Justice (Ret.) Burger, Senator Moynihan, Judge Pauline Newman, Architect White, justices and judges, members of the Judiciary Building Commission and distinguished and honored guests, it is a privilege and honor for me to proffer a few words at the dedication ceremony for this magnificent building. This monumental structure represents the culmination of a long-term dream to consolidate the third branch agencies into one facility. For decades, we have been scattered like the ten Lost Tribes of Israel throughout downtown Washington, DC. Now we are to be gathered into a building of our own which gives the judiciary an administrative promised land where we can work together instead of apart.

Although the Federal Judiciary Building took only 5 years to design and build, it was over two decades in the making. It was the dream of Chief Justice Warren Burger, who worked for over 17 years to provide housing under one roof for the various national administrative agencies of the Federal Judiciary including the Administrative Office, the Federal Judicial Center, and other judiciary agencies. When I was hired by the Supreme Court to serve as Director of the Administrative Office on July 15, 1985, one of my first charges from Chief Justice Burger was to work to get such a building, and to get the job done.

I took that charge seriously and did get right to work to make Chief Justice Burger's dream a reality first, by testifying before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee just 2 days after taking office. We had to gain congressional approval of not one but three bills starting in 1985 in order to secure all the needed authorization and funding for the building. First, Congress had to authorize the Architect of the Capitol and the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Chief Justice, to study alternatives for construction of a judiciary office building. This was enacted in December of 1985 in part through the good work of Senator Robert Stafford, then chairman of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works with important help both from his committee colleagues and from the House Public Works Committee leaders.

Then it was necessary for the judiciary to secure $1.3 million to fund the study. This money was approved in July of 1986 through the effective leadership of our House and Senate Appropriations subcommittees. I then transferred our $1.3 million to the Architect of the Capitol, George White, who had also "dreamed" for years of our new building, so that he could undertake the feasibility study.

Upon the completion of the feasibility study, the patron saint of our building who made it all possible came to the fore, Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan who was by then the subcommittee chairman. He introduced authorizing legislation in December 1987. Through his outstanding leadership coupled with valiant support from Senator John Chafee and from their counterparts in the House Public Works Committee, congressional approval of the authorizing legislation was secured, which on October 7, 1988 was signed into law by President Ronald Reagan.

In virtually unprecedented fashion, the developer, architect and contractor completed this building on time and under budget. It is a prototype for what we think the judiciary could do on all of our judiciary building projects if it were granted the approval to do so by Congress.

Given the fiscal situation prevailing in 1988 when Congress authorized our building, to say nothing of the present fiscal circumstances, our building would never have been built had it not been for the congressional initiative led by Senator Moynihan in authorizing a lease-purchase arrangement to pay for the new structure. Thus, there were no initial capital outlays. By special arrangement, there was no budget "scoring" or charge in advance for the total cost of the building, that would otherwise have been required. The judiciary occupants of the building will pay the equivalent of rent for 30 years and then we will own the building outright.

Creative financing has resulted in converting future rent payments into current working capital at rates very slightly above the cost of 30-year treasury bonds. The judiciary will enjoy a virtually rent-free period until August 1994. This represents a savings of approximately $17,230,000 per year. Thereafter, the bulk of the annual payments equivalent to rent will remain flat for 30 years. Only the much smaller operation and maintenance payments will increase with inflation. Consequently, we estimate that the judiciary, and therefore the taxpayer, will save many millions of dollars over the 30-year life of the project. This is because rent in a GSA or privately owned building charged to the judiciary escalates every year. We will be paying off our own mortgage, rather than someone else's, as we pay our annual rent. In fact we estimate that in a very short time, the rates the judiciary tenants would have been paying in our old and scattered buildings would actually exceed the rate that we will pay in the new Federal Judiciary Building, where we will also enjoy the many operational efficiencies of consolidation.

I have stressed the dream theme. Perhaps that is why I am reminded of the movie "Field of Dreams" in which a mysterious voice continually whispers to Kevin Costner to "Build it and he will come." Against almost insuperable odds, Mr. Costner builds a lighted baseball field in the middle of his

Iowa cornfield and first "Shoeless" Joe Jackson, then other Hall of Fame players, and finally his deceased father, come to play baseball thus fulfilling not only his dreams but also those of the baseball greats who had gone before.

Through your good efforts as in the "Field of Dreams," we "built it" and we "will come." More than 1,200 judicial branch employees will come to this building by October 6th from ten locations scattered throughout the District of Columbia.

The voice of Kevin Costner not only said "Built it and he will come", but the voice also said "Ease his pain." This building will ease retired Chief Justice Burger's pain and I can assure you that it will ease the pain of the judicial administrators such as myself who have tried to run complex, even though modest sized agencies, from multiple locations throughout Washington. We will serve the judiciary much more effectively, and more efficiently while at the same time improve both staff morale and esprit de corps. It has been said that the quality, inspiration, and performance of the world's political and governmental institutions varies inversely with the grandeur of their buildings. You have my solemn pledge that we in the judicial branch shall disprove this adage for we shall not succumb to an edifice complex.

Because of the vital role played by three of the dreamers who have made this building a reality, I thought initially that the Federal Judiciary Building should more correctly have been denominated the "BMW" building, the acronym for Burger, Moynihan and White, not the well-tooled German automobile. Moreover, the "M" had the added utility of permitting two backbench dreamers to surreptitiously claim that the "M" also stood for Ralph Mecham and for my deputy Jim Macklin. Likewise, the "B" in BMW has a trio of added applications, namely to the building's great developer/architect team Boston Properties and Edward Larrabee Barnes as well as for the late Senator Quinton Burdick who until he died a few days ago, sadly, chaired the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. He has been replaced by Senator Moynihan.

Unfortunately, the "BMW" name while somewhat comprehensive left out many other important players such as all of you who supported the project over the years especially the Federal Judiciary Building Commission, members of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, and the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, to say nothing of the appropriations committees who played a critical role at a vital juncture and will continue to do so as the rental payments kick in 2 years from now. A number of leading House and Senate staffers ought to be mentioned but I shall single out just two as representative of many others. I all but took up residence for about a year and half beginning on July 17, 1985 in the offices of Harold Brayman then on the Senate staff and Dick Sullivan who for decades headed the House staff.

At the risk of making this sound like the Academy Award presentations, I am compelled to mention and indeed must thank the indefatigable project manager, Yong-Duk Chyun along with the distinguished architects, John M.Y. Lee and Ted Oldham of Oldham and Seltz. The Oscar winner for best supporting actor is Ray Karam, Assistant Director of the Administrative Office who did such an outstanding job managing our efforts, and for best supporting actress Kathy Bloom on his staff who has toiled effectively day and night for over a year.

We have already set up a special calendar of solemn, yet joyous, working-holidays that we shall observe here in this splendid new edifice. The first momentous observance will occur on March 17th when we shall give new meaning to St. Patrick's Day by adding to our hagiography the sainted name of Daniel Patrick Moynihan. By driving the snakes off Capitol Hill and from along Pennsylvania Avenue, he has made our building possible. On the next Saints Day, April 23rd, we shall honor as they do in the United Kingdom the memory of a new St. George; who else but Capitol Architect George White. He has slain the dragons and made our building a reality. Happily April 23rd is also my birthday, so once again I can sneak in the back door and bask in the vicarious light of these prime movers.

Then, we shall pay tribute on September 23rd to the United States Constitution, which is virtually holy writ in our Republic. I am delighted to point out that this is also the birthday of Chief Justice (Ret.) Warren Burger. To my knowledge there is no counterpart to St. Warren but we shall not let that deter us. Last but by no means least, we shall on October 1st do homage to Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist who made the planning for and the successful completion of this building his personal concern since he became Chief Justice in October of 1986.

I am pleased now to make way for the true titans of this project who most certainly win the starring role Oscars for their inspired performances. They, with you, have made possible this field of dreams for truly they have built it, and we have come. Our pain indeed will be eased. The ten lost tribes shall gather here in our new Jerusalem.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR TIM WIRTH

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to TIM WIRTH who will be retiring from the Senate at the end of this Congress.

Public service has been a way of life for TIM WIRTH for at least a quarter century. Starting with his White House fellowship in 1967, he continued his public service in posts at the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and then put in a dozen years in the House, before he was elected to the Senate in 1986.

He has focused on promoting economic development and has played a key role in infrastructure and transportation projects in his State. He also has been a tireless proponent of a rational national energy policy and he has worked hard to correct problems in banking and S&L industries.

I know TIM WIRTH best as a voice for environmental protection and as an effective advocate for clean air and water legislation and for the protection of conservation areas ranging from the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and Alaska's Tongass National Forest to Colorado's own wilderness areas.

He has worked hard on global warming, ozone depletion, and protection of rainforests around the world, but he also has provided critical leadership on international population issues and has fought hard for reproductive rights for women.

TIM WIRTH has been a tremendous asset to the Senate and the Nation. He is one of our colleagues who has been a force for reason and he has made a difference. I will be sorry to see him leave and I wish him well.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

PROTOCOL ON ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION TO THE ANTARCTIC TREATY

Mr. FORD. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to executive session to consider Executive Calendar 47, the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty.

I further ask unanimous consent that the treaty be considered as having been advanced through the various parliamentary stages up to and including the presentation of the resolution of ratification, that no amendments, provisos, understandings or reservations be in order; that any statements appear, as if read, in the RECORD, and that the Senate vote on the resolution of ratification without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The treaty will be considered to have passed through the various parliamentary stages up to and including the presentation of the resolution of ratification, which the clerk will state.

The resolution of ratification was read as follows:

Resolved, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty, with Annexes, done at Madrid October 4, 1991, and an Additional Annex done at Bonn October 17, 1991.

PROTOCOL ON ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION TO THE ANTARCTIC TREATY

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am delighted that the Senate is considering the protocol on environmental protection to the Antarctic Treaty. The protocol will enhance environmental protection in the Antarctic and should help ensure that the frozen continent remains pristine for years to come. It is a sound treaty and one that my colleagues should support.

I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge at the outset of my remarks, the outstanding, leadership role played by two of our colleagues in the Senate in shaping U.S. policy on the Antarctic: Senator GORE and Senator KERRY.

In 1988, the parties to the Antarctic Treaty concluded negotiation of the Convention on the Regulation of Antarctic Mineral Resource Activities or CRAMRA. That convention alarmed many people, who argued that it would not adequately protect the Antarctic environment.

Senator GORE quickly recognized the dangers in the convention, not only to the Antarctic environment, but also to one of the keystones of international cooperation on the continent, the principle of free and open exchange of scientific data gathered within Antarctica.

In September 1989, Senator GORE introduced Senate Joint Resolution 206 which declared Antarctica to be a "global ecological commons," called for a new agreement or protocol to provide comprehensive environmental protection for the Antarctic, and called upon the President not to submit CRAMRA to the Senate for its advice and consent pending entry into force of such an environment agreement. The measure was adopted by the Senate and signed into law in 1990.

In addition to this measure, Senator KERRY and Congressman Silvio O. Conte introduced, and the Congress passed, the Antarctic Protection and Conservation Act of 1990 which made it a crime for U.S. persons or entities "to engage in, finance, or otherwise knowingly provide assistance to any Antarctic mineral resource activity." It also called upon the Secretary of State to negotiate a new agreement providing permanent protection for the natural environment of Antarctica, including an indefinite ban on mineral resource activities.

Together, these distinguished Members of Congress brought about a change in course in U.S. policy on the Antarctica. And, it is in part due to their efforts that we are considering this protocol here today.

Let me now provide my colleagues with some brief background information on the Antarctic Treaty system and the major provisions of the protocol.

First, the background. For 30 years, activity in the Antarctic has been governed by the terms of the Antarctic Treaty of 1961 and associated conventions and recommendations. These include: the agreed measures for the conservation of antarctic fauna and flora, the Convention for the Conservation of Antarctic Seals, and the Convention for the Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. Collectively these agreements are known as the Antarctic Treaty system and apply to the area south of 60 degrees south latitude.

Three principles undergird the treaty and are incorporated in its articles; first, that Antarctic shall be used for peaceful purposes only; second, that the continent shall be open for cooperative scientific investigation; and third, that the treaty shall not derogate from or add to a party's territorial claim or potential claim.

As I noted earlier, in 1988, the parties to the Antarctic Treaty concluded negotiation of CRAMRA. Because of their concerns about the treaty, three nations—France, Australia, and, New Zealand—whose approval was necessary for the treaty to enter into force announced their opposition to the regime. Consequently the regime never took effect.

In late 1990, the parties to the Antarctic Treaty initiated a round of new negotiations to resolve the impasse over CRAMRA. The negotiations also aimed at achieving "further elaboration, maintenance and effective implementation of a comprehensive system for the protection of the Antarctic environment." These negotiations were completed on October 1991 and produced the Antarctic environment protocol. The central issue in this negotiation was mineral resources. France, Australia pushed for the adoption of a permanent ban on commercial mineral activities, a position the United States strongly opposed.

The protocol supplements the Antarctic Treaty of 1961 and does the following:

Designates Antarctica as a "natural reserve, devoted to peace and science";

Establishes environmental principles to guide the planning and conduct of activities in the Antarctic;

Establishes detailed mandatory rules for environmental protection in a system of five annexes on: environmental impact assessment, conservation of Antarctic fauna and flora; waste disposal and waste management; the prevention of marine pollution; and area protection and management;

Obligates parties to conduct environmental impact assessments for activities conducted in the Antarctic pursuant to procedures outlined in the annex on such assessments;

Establishes a Committee for Environmental Protection to assess the effectiveness of measures taken pursuant to the protocol and its annexes and to make recommendations to improve their implementation; and

Establishes compulsory dispute settlement procedures for controversies over the interpretation or application of, and compliance with, provisions relating to mineral resource activities; environmental impact assessment and response action as well as most aspects of the annexes to the protocol.

The issue receiving the most attention in the protocol's negotiations was the limitation on commercial mineral activity. The protocol places a 50-year moratorium on nonscientific mineral resource activity, unless there is unanimous agreement during that period to suspend the moratorium. Several countries advocated a permanent ban on mineral resource activities or a ban of at least 50 years that could only be lifted by the unanimous consent of the parties. The United States opposed both of these proposals.

After expiration of the moratorium, a party may propose an amendment to lift the moratorium. To enter into force, such an amendment would require the approval of three-fourths of the Antarctic Treaty consultative parties, or ATCP's, including all of the current ATCP's. The amendment's acceptance is also contingent upon entry into force of a binding legal regime which sets forth agreed means for determining whether, and, if so, under which conditions, any such mineral resource activities would be acceptable. If an amendment does not enter into force within three years of its adoption, a party may announce its withdrawal from the protocol, which would take place 2 years from the date of notification of the depositary.

This provision on minerals is notable also in that, for the first time in the history of the Antarctic Treaty, unanimous approval of the ATCP's has not been required.

The committee held a hearing on the protocol in early May, receiving testimony from the administration and public witnesses. The committee has found no opposition to the protocol and urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask for the division on a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division vote has been requested. Senators in favor of the resolution of ratification will rise and stand until counted. (After a pause.) Those opposed to the resolution of certification will rise and stand until counted.

On a division, two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative, the resolution of ratification is agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to reconsider the vote be tabled and that the President be notified of the Senate's action and the Senate return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume legislative session.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of calendar numbers 555, 556, 629, 708, 709, 718, 723, 724, 726, 733, 750, and 757 en bloc; that the amendment at the desk to the calender 723 and the committee substitute amendments and committee amendments, where appropriate, be agreed to, en bloc; that the several bills each be deemed read a third time, passed; that the motion to reconsider the passage of these items be laid upon the table en bloc; that the amendments to the titles where appropriate be agreed to; that the consideration of each bill be included separately in the Record; and that statements with respect to the passage of each bill be included in the Record where appropriate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

STATUS OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 1514) to resolve the status of certain lands relinquished to the United States under the act of June 4, 1987 (30 Stat. 11, 36), and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment on page 4, line 12, striking the word "conditionally" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Pursuant to the invitation and requirements contained in the 15th paragraph under the heading "Surveying the Public Lands" in the Act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. 11, 36), as amended or supplemented by the Acts of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. 588, 614), March 4, 1901 (31 Stat. 1010, 1037), and September 22, 1922 (42 Stat. 1067), certain landowners or entrymen within forest reserves acted to transfer their lands to the United States as the basis for an in lieu selection of other Federal lands (hereafter in this Act referred to as "lieu lands") in exchange for such lands within such reserves (hereafter in this Act referred to as "base lands").

(2) By the Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. 1264), Congress repealed the in lieu selection provisions of the Act of June 4, 1897, as amended, and terminated the right to select lieu lands, but expressly preserved the rights of land owners who had valid pending applications for in lieu selections, most of which have subsequently been granted.

(3) Other persons affected by the Acts cited in paragraphs (1) and (2) who acted to transfer base lands, or their successors in interest, have never obtained either (A) a patent to the lieu lands or any other consideration for their relinquishment, or (B) a quitclaim of their base lands, notwithstanding relief legislation enacted in 1922 and 1930.

(4) By the Act of July 6, 1960 (74 Stat. 334), Congress established a procedure to compensate persons affected by the Acts cited in paragraphs (1) and (2) who had not received appropriate relief under prior legislation. However, no payments of such compensation were made under that Act.

(5) Section 4 of the Act of July 6, 1960, further provided that lands with respect to which compensation under that Act were or could have been made, and not previously disposed of by the United States, shall be a part of any national forest, national park, or other area withdrawn from the public domain wherein they are located.

(6) Absent further legislation, lengthy and expensive litigation will be required to resolve existing questions about the title to lands covered by section 4 of the 1960 Act.

(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this Act is to resolve the status of the title to base lands affected by the past legislation cited in subsection (a).

SEC. 2. IDENTIFICATION AND QUITCLAIM OF FEDERAL INTEREST IN BASE LANDS.

(a) Quitclaim.—Except as otherwise provided by this Act, and subject to valid existing rights, but notwithstanding any other provision of law, the United States hereby quitclaims to the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the base lands described on a final list published pursuant to subsection (d)(1), effective on the date of publication of such list.

(b) Preparation of Initial Lists.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, with respect to lands under such Secretary's jurisdiction, and the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to National Forest System lands, shall each prepare an initial list of all parcels of base lands that were relinquished to the United States pursuant to the Act of June 4, 1897 (as amended), and for which selection or other rights under that Act or supplemental legislation were not realized or exercised.

(2) The initial lists prepared under paragraph (1) shall be based on information in the actual possession of the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture on the date of enactment of this Act, including information submitted to Congress pursuant to the directive contained in Senate Report No. 98–578, issued for the Fiscal Year 1985 Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation, as revised and updated. The initial lists shall be published and distributed for public review in accordance with procedures adopted by the Secretary concerned.

(3) For a period of 180 days after publication of a list pursuant to paragraph (2), persons asserting that particular parcels omitted from such a list should have been included may request the Secretary concerned to add such parcels to the appropriate list. The Secretary concerned shall add to the list any such parcels which the Secretary determines meet the conditions specified in paragraph (1).

(c) Nationally Significant Lands.—(1) During preparation or revision of an initial list under subsection (b), the Secretary concerned shall identify those listed lands which are located wholly or partially within any conservation system unit and all other listed lands which Congress has designated for specific management or which the Secretary concerned decides, in the concerned Secretary's discretion, should be retained in order to meet public, resource protection, or administrative needs. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "conservation system unit" means any unit of the National Park System, National Wildlife Refuge System, National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, National Trails System, or National Wilderness Preservation System, a national forest monument, or a national conservation area, a national recreation area, or any lands being studied for possible designation as part of such a system or unit.

(2) The provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to any lands identified by the Secretary concerned pursuant to paragraph (1). The Secretary concerned shall not include any such lands on any list prepared pursuant to subsection (d). Subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than those described in subsection (b)(1), any right, title, and interest in and to lands identified pursuant to paragraph (1) and not previously vested in the United States is hereby vested and confirmed in the United States.

(3) In the same manner as the initial list was published and distributed pursuant to subsection (b)(2), the Secretary concerned shall publish and distribute an identification of all lands in which right, title, and interest is vested and confirmed in the United States by paragraph (2).

(d) Final Lists.—(1) As soon as possible after considering any requests made pursuant to subsection (b)(3) and the identification of lands pursuant to subsection (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall each publish a final list, consisting of lands included on each Secretary's initial list not identified pursuant to subsection (c)(1). Unless a Secretary has published a final list on or before the date 18 months after the date of publication, pursuant to subsection (b)(2), of such Secretary's initial list, the initial list prepared by such Secretary shall be deemed on such date to be the final list required to be published by such Secretary, and thereafter no lands included on such initial list shall be excluded from operation of subsection (a).

(2) If a court makes a final decision that a parcel of land was arbitrarily and capriciously excluded from operation of subsection (a), such parcel shall be deemed to have been included on a final list published pursuant to paragraph (1), unless such parcel is located wholly or partially inside a conservation system unit or any other area which Congress has designated for specific management, in which case such parcel shall be subject to the provisions of subsection (c)(2).

(e) Issuance of Instruments.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this Act, no later than 6 months after the date on which the Secretary concerned publishes a final list of lands pursuant to subsection (d), the Secretary concerned shall issue deeds confirming the quitclaim made by subsection (a) of this section of all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands included on such final list, subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than a relinquishment to the United States of the type described in subsection (b). Each such confirmatory deed shall operate to estop the United States from making any claim of right, title, or interest of the United States in and to the base lands described in the deed, shall be made in the name of the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, and shall be in a form suitable for recordation and shall be filed and recorded by the United States with the recorder of deeds or other like official of the county or counties within which the lands covered by such confirmatory deed are located so that the title to such lands may be determined in accordance with applicable State law.

(2) The United States shall not adjudicate and, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, does not consent to be sued in any suit instituted to adjudicate the ownership of, or to quiet title to, any base land included in a final list and described in a confirmatory deed.

(3) Neither the Secretary of the Interior nor the Secretary of Agriculture shall be required to inspect any lands included on a final list nor to inform any member of the public regarding the condition of such lands prior to the issuance of the confirmatory deeds required by this subsection, and nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting any valid rights with respect to lands covered by a confirmatory deed issued pursuant to this subsection that were in existence on the date of issuance of such confirmatory deed.

(f) Waiver of Certain Claims Against the United States.—Any person or entity accepting the benefits of this Act or failing to act to seek such benefits within the time allotted by this Act with respect to any base or other lands shall be deemed to have waived any claims against the United States, its agents or contractors, with respect to such lands, or with respect to any revenues received by the United States from such lands prior to the date of enactment of this Act. All non-Federal, third party rights granted by the United States with respect to base lands shall remain effective subject to the terms and conditions of the authorizing document. The United States may reserve any rights-of-way currently occupied or used for Government purposes.

SEC. 3. OTHER CLAIMS.

(a) JURISDICTION AND DEADLINE.—(1) Subject to the requirements and limitations of this section, a party claiming right, title, or interest in or to land vested in the United States by section 2(c)(2) of this Act may file in the United States Claims Court a claim against the United States seeking compensation based on such vesting. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Claims Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction over such claim.

(2) A claim described in paragraph (1) shall be barred unless the petition thereon is filed within 1 year after the date of publication of a final list pursuant to section 2(d) of this Act.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as authorizing any claim to be brought in any court other than a claim brought in the United States Claims Court based upon the vesting of right, title, and interest in and to the United States made by section 2(c)(2) of this Act.

(b) LIMITATIONS, DEFENSES, AND AWARDS.—(1) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as diminishing any existing right, title, or interest of the United States in any lands covered by section 2(c), including but not limited to any such right, title, or interest established by the Act of July 6, 1960 (74 Stat. 334).

(2) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as precluding or limiting any defenses or claims (including but not limited to defenses based on applicable statutes of limitations, affirmative defenses relating to fraud or speculative practices, or claims by the United States based on adverse possession) otherwise available to the United States.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as entitling any party to compensation from the United States. However, in the event of a final judgment of the United States Claims Court in favor of a party seeking such compensation, or in the event of a negotiated settlement agreement made between such a party and the Attorney General of the United States, the United States shall pay such compensation from the permanent judgment appropriation established pursuant to section 1304 of title 31, United States Code.

(c) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—This Act does not include within its scope selection rights required to be recorded under the Act of August 5, 1955 (69 Stat. 534), regardless of whether compensation authorized by the Act of August 31, 1964 (78 Stat. 751) was or was not received.

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

SEC. 5. TIME EXTENSION.

Section 103(c) of the Wildfire Disaster Recovery Act of 1989 (16 U.S.C. 551 note) is amended in the first sentence by striking out "1991" and inserting in lieu thereof "1992".

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, the bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An Act to resolve the status of certain lands relinquished to the United States under the Act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. 11, 36), and for other purposes.".

MINUTE MAN NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK AMENDMENTS

The bill (H.R. 2896) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to revise the boundaries of the Minute Man National Historical Park in the State of Massachusetts, and for other purposes was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ISSUANCE OF SKI PERMITS ON NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM LANDS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2606) to further clarify authorities and duties of the Secretary of Agriculture in issuing ski permits on National Forest System lands, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and National Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) although ski areas occupy less than one-twentieth of 1 percent of national forest lands nationwide, in many rural areas of the United States, ski areas and investments by ski area permittees on national forest lands form the backbone of the local economy and preponderance of the employment base;

(2) ski area operations and their attendant communities provide revenues to the United States in the form of permit fees, income taxes, and other revenues which are extremely significant in proportion to the limited Federal acreage and Forest Service administration and contractual obligations required to support such operations;

(3) in addition to alpine skiing, many ski area permittees provide multiseason facilities and enhanced access to national forest lands which result in greater public use and enjoyment of such lands than would otherwise occur;

(4) unlike many other private sector users of Federal lands, ski areas in almost all cases finance, construct, maintain, and market all recreational facilities and improvements on such lands;

(5) many ski areas on Federal lands operate in a competitive environment which requires a continuing high level of capital investment to upgrade existing facilities and install new facilities to serve the public, including lifts, trails, snowmaking and trail grooming equipment, restaurants, and day care centers;

(6) despite an outward appearance of economic well-being resulting from an intensive capital infrastructure, many ski area operations are marginally profitable due to the competition and capital investments referenced in subparagraph (5), weather conditions, insurance premiums, the national economy, and other factors beyond their control;

(7) because of the aforementioned contributions of ski areas to the economy and rural communities and to the enhanced use and enjoyment of national forest lands, it is in the public interest for the United States, where consistent with national forest management objectives, to take actions with respect to such ski areas and associated communities as will assist their long-term economic health and stability; and

(8) the National Forest Ski Area Permit Act of 1986 has been of assistance to ski area operations on national forest lands by providing longer term tenure and stability to permittees, but further adjustments and policy direction are warranted to address problems related to permit fees and fee calculations and conflicts with certain mineral activities.

(b) In furtherance of the findings of subsection (a) of this section, it is the purpose of this Act to—

(1) legislate a ski area permit fee which returns fair market value to the United States and at the same time provides ski area permittees and the United States with a simplified, consistent, predictable, and equitable fee formula which is commensurate with long-term ski area, planning, financing and operation needs and which simplifies bookkeeping and other administrative burdens on ski area permittees and Forest Service personnel; and

(2) prevent future conflicts between ski area operations and mining and mineral leasing programs by withdrawing lands within ski area permit boundaries from the operation of the mining and mineral leasing laws.

SEC. 2. SKI AREA PERMIT FEE.

(a) The Secretary shall charge a fee for all ski area permits issued pursuant to the National Forest Ski Area Permit Act of 1986, the Act of March 4, 1915, and the Act of June 4, 1897, on National Forest System lands as set forth in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall require that fees for all existing ski area permits issued pursuant to the Act of March 4, 1915, and the Act of June 4, 1897, be calculated as set forth in subsection (b) of this section.

(b)(1) The ski area permit fee (SAPF) to be charged shall be calculated by adding the permittee's gross revenues from lift ticket/year-round ski area use pass sales plus revenue from ski school operations (LT+SS) and multiplying such total by the slope transport feet percentage (STFP) on National Forest System land. Add to that amount gross year-round revenue from ancillary facilities (GRAF) physically located on national forest land, including all permittee or subpermittee lodging, food service, rental shops, parking and other ancillary operations, to determine the adjusted gross revenue (AGR) subject to the permit fee. Calculate the final fee by multiplying adjusted gross revenue by the following percentages for each revenue bracket and adding the total for each revenue bracket:

(i) 1.5 percent of all adjusted gross revenue below $3,000,000;

(ii) 2.5 percent for adjusted gross revenue between $15,000,000 and $15,000,000;

(iii) 2.75 percent for adjusted gross revenue between $15,000,000 and $50,000,000; and

(iv) 4.0 percent for the amount of adjusted gross revenue that exceeds $50,000,000.

SAPF = (LT + SS STFP) + GRAF = AGR;
AGR % BRACKETS

(2) In cases where ski areas are only partially located on national forest lands, the slope transport feet percentage on national forest land referred to in subsection (b) of this section is hereby determined to most accurately reflect the percent of an alpine ski area permittee's total skier service capacity which is located on National Forest System land. It shall be calculated as generally described in the Forest Service Manual in effect as of January 1, 1992. Revenues from nordic ski operations shall be included or excluded from the fee calculation according to the percentage of trails physically located on national forest land.

(3) In order to insure that the fee legislated herein remains fair and equitable to both the United States and ski area permittees, the adjusted gross revenue figures for each revenue bracket in subparagraph (b)(1) (i)-(iv) shall be adjusted annually by the percent increase or decrease in the national Consumer Price Index for the preceding calendar year. No later than five years after the date of enactment of this Act and every ten years thereafter the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Agriculture and Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives a report analyzing whether the ski area permit fee system legislated by this Act is returning a fair market value rental to the United States together with any recommendations the Secretary may have for modifications in the system.

(c) The fee set forth in subsection (b) shall be due on June 1 of each year and shall be paid or pre-paid by the permittee on a monthly, quarterly, annual or other schedule as determined appropriate by the Secretary in consultation with the permittee. It is the intention of Congress that unless mutually agreed otherwise by the Secretary and the permittee, the payment or prepayment schedule shall conform to the permittee's schedule in effect prior to enactment of this Act. To simplify bookkeeping and fee calculation burdens on the permittee and the Forest Service, the Secretary shall each year provide the permittee with a standardized form and worksheets (including annual fee calculation brackets and rates) to be utilized for fee calculation and submitted with the fee payment. Information provided on such forms shall be compiled by the Secretary annually and kept in the Office of the Chief, U.S. Forest Service.

(d) The ski area permit fee legislated herein shall become effective on June 1, 1993, and cover receipts retroactive to June 1, 1992: Provided, however, That if a permittee has paid fees for the period June 1, 1992, to June 1, 1993, under the graduated rate fee system formula in effect prior to this Act, such fees shall be credited toward the new fee due on June 1, 1993. In order to insure increasing fee receipt levels to the United States during transition from the Graduated Rate Fee System formula to the formula of this Act, the fee paid by any individual permittee for the 1992–1993 permit year shall be either the fee paid for the preceding 1991–1992 base year or the fee calculated pursuant to this Act, whichever is higher. For the 1993–1994 permit year, the fee paid shall be either the fee paid for the 1991–1992 base year or the fee calculated pursuant to this Act, whichever is higher: Provided, however, That in the event an individual permittee's adjusted gross revenue for either the 1992–1993 or 1993–1994 permit years falls more than 10 percent below the 1991–1992 base year, the fee paid shall then be the fee calculated pursuant to this Act.

(e) Under no circumstances shall revenue, or subpermittee revenue (other than lift ticket, area use pass, or ski school sales) obtained from operations physically located on nonnational forest land be included in the ski area permit fee calculation.

(f) To simplify bookkeeping and administrative burdens on ski area permittees and the Forest Service, as used in this section, the terms "revenue" and "sales" shall mean actual income from sales and shall not include sales of operating equipment, refunds, rent paid to the permittee by sublessees, sponsor contributions to special events or any amounts attributable to employee gratuities or employee lift tickets, discounts, or other goods or services (except for bartered goods and complimentary lift tickets) for which the permittee does not receive money.

(g) In cases where an area of national forest land is under a ski area permit but the permittee does not have revenue or sales qualifying for fee payment pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, the permittee shall pay an annual minimum rental fee of $2 for each national forest acre under permit or a percentage of appraised land value, as determined appropriate by the Secretary.

SEC. 3. WITHDRAWALS.

SEC. 3. Subject to valid existing rights, all lands located within the boundaries of ski area permits issued prior to, on or after the date of enactment of this Act pursuant to authority of the Act of March 4, 1915, and the Act of June 4, 1897, or the National Forest Ski Area Permit Act of 1986 are hereby and henceforth automatically withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the mining laws and from disposition under all laws pertaining to mineral and geothermal leasing and all amendments thereto. Such withdrawal shall continue for the full term of the permit and any modification, reissuance, or renewal thereof. Unless the Secretary requests otherwise of the Secretary of the Interior, such withdrawal shall be canceled automatically upon expiration or other termination of the permit and the land automatically restored to all appropriation not otherwise restricted under the public land laws.

So the bill (S. 2606) was passed.

REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS ON CERTAIN LANDS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1925) to remove a restriction from a parcel of land owned by the city of North Charleston, SC, in order to permit a land exchange, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with amendment; as follows:

(The parts of the bill intended to be stricken are shown in boldface brackets and the parts of the bill intended to be inserted are shown in italic.)

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. REMOVAL OF RESTRICTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the condition described in paragraph (2), the Secretary of the Interior shall execute such instruments as are necessary to remove the restrictions described in subsection (b) to which the parcel of land described in subsection (c) is subject.

(2) CONDITION.—The condition referred to in paragraph (1) is that the City of North Charleston, South Carolina, exchange the parcel for—

(A) another parcel to be used as a park or recreation area; and

(B) such sums as are necessary to equalize the values of the parcels exchanged.

(3) Any sums received by the city pursuant to subparagraph (2)(B) shall be used only for park or recreation purposes.

(b) RESTRICTIONS.—The restrictions referred to in subsection (a) are those reservations, exceptions, restrictions, conditions, and covenants described in the Quitclaim Deed of the United States to the City of North Charleston, South Carolina, dated August 9, 1978 (Deed Books of Charleston County, South Carolina, book 1116, page [318]. 318): Provided, however, That the United States shall retain all mineral rights to the parcel described in subsection (c) as provided in such deed.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF LAND.—The parcel of land referred to in subsection (a)(1)—

(1) consists of approximately 21.60 acres;

(2) is located in Charleston County, South Carolina; and

(3) [has the legal description given] is described on page 318 of book 1116 of the Deed Books of Charleston County, South Carolina.

So the bill (S. 1925) was passed.

THE WENATCHEE NATIONAL FOREST TRANSFER ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1990) to authorize the transfer of certain facilities and lands in the Wenatchee National Forest, WA, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. LAND EXCHANGE, WENATCHEE NATIONAL FOREST, WASHINGTON.

(a) CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary of Agriculture may convey to the Public Utility District No. 1 of Chelan County, Washington (in this section referred to the "District"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to—

(1) the sewage collection and treatment system facilities located at the Lake Wenatchee Ranger District, Wenatchee National Forest, Washington; and

(2) a parcel of real property of approximately 60 acres of National Forest System land in the Wenatchee National Forest partially occupied by the existing treatment plant and ponds, as depicted on the map of record entitled "Chelan County Land Exchange 1" and dated June 24, 1992.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the conveyance authorized under subsection (a), the District shall convey to the United States a parcel of real property of approximately 110 acres owned by the District and depicted on the map of record entitled "Chelan County Land Exchange" and dated June 24, 1992.

(c) EQUALIZING THE VALUE OF THE EXCHANGE.—If the value of the real property to be conveyed by the Secretary of Agriculture under subsection (a) does not equal the value of the real property to be conveyed by the District under subsection (b), the value of the properties shall be equalized in the manner provided for in section 206(b) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1716(b)).

(d) APPRAISALS.—The value of the real property to be exchanged pursuant to this section shall be determined by appraisals conducted in the manner and within the time frame provided for in section 206(d) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1716(d)).

(e) LEGAL DESCRIPTION AND SURVEY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the property to be exchanged pursuant to this section shall be determined by surveys that are satisfactory to the Secretary of Agriculture. The cost of such surveys shall be shared equally by the Secretary and the District.

(f) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of Agriculture may require such other terms and conditions with respect to the conveyance as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

LAKE CUSHMAN, LAKE WENATCHEE AND THE OLYMPIC EXPERIEMENTAL STATE FOREST

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, today I ask the Senate to pass two bills on unanimous consent. The two bills are H.R. 4489 and S. 1990. The first, H.R. 4489, is identical to a Senate bill—S. 2353—that was reported by the Senate Energy Committee and placed on the Senate calendar Cal. No. 713. This bill will allow the National Park Service to exchange lands with the city of Tacoma, WA and adjust its boundary in order to avoid a trespass dispute with the Olympic National Park over the city's reservoir at Lake Cushman. The second, S. 1990, is a bill that has been reported by the Energy Committee and was placed on the Senate calendar, Cal. No. 709. S. 1990 will allow the Forest Service to transfer an important sewage facility to the Chelan County Public Utility District in order to place the private property owners at Lake Wenatchee on the sewage system.

Lake Wenatchee is a beautiful, glacier-fed lake in the Wenatchee National Forest in the eastern portion of Washington State. More than 300 private individuals own property on the lake and more than 100 make it their summer and winter vacation spot. The beauty of this spot, however, is deceiving. Below the surface lies evidence that these property owners are dumping most of their sewage directly into Lake Wenatchee. The residents of Lake Wenatchee need a sewage treatment system to replace their failing septic system.

The U.S. Forest Service operates a ranger station and campground of Lake Wenatchee. A small sewage treatment system, built in the 1920's, serves these facilities. Although this treatment system is relatively small, it can be expanded to serve the entire Lake Wenatchee area. In fact, Supervisor Sonny O'Neal and his staff have suggested that they are willing to transfer the sewage system and the underlying land to the Chelan County Pubic Utility District No. 1 for expansion and use by all the property owners at Lake Wenatchee. In order to accomplish this, however, Congress must authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make the transfer. In exchange, the PUD will transfer to the Forest Service up to 110 acres of land.

Supervisor O'Neal has taken steps to mitigate this problem during the short-term. He has issued a special-use permit that allows the PUD to operate the sewage treatment system. A permit does not, however, grant sufficient control to the PUD over the land upon which the treatment facility is situated. He still believes that the 80 acres of land that the facility occupies must be transferred, in fee, to the PUD. This transfer is the only long-term solution to the problem at Lake Wenatchee.

S. 1990 authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to transfer the sewage treatment facility and the underlying land to the PUD in exchange for up to 110 acres of land. For the sake of the health of Lake Wenatchee and the property owners there, I hope this amendment can be passed into law as soon as possible.

The other bill that I ask be passed by unanimous consent, H.R. 4489, is really two bills in one. It was originally a bill providing for the exchange of lands and the adjustment of a National Park boundary at Lake Cushman in Washington State. This bill is designed to resolve a long-standing dispute between the Olympic National Park and the city of Tacoma over the relicensing of a dam at Lake Cushman. The park contends that a few acres of its land lies beneath the surface of the lake at its normal water level. When Tacoma City Light recently lowered the reservoir to do work on the dam, the Park claimed that the acreage would be inundated if the reservoir were raised and that this would constitute an illegal trespass on park property. Tacoma offered to purchase the small parcel and the park demanded a land exchange instead. This legislation will establish a mechanism for completing that land exchange.

The residents of the Lake Cushman area, as well as the residents of the city who Tacoma who rely on power from the Lake Cushman Dam, have been anxiously awaiting the resolution of this dispute. The level of the reservoir was kept at an unreasonably low level, decreasing the generation of power from the dam and leaving docks high and dry. The park and the city of Tacoma have been negotiating a land exchange and, once those negotiations are completed, the park will adjust its boundaries. The only remaining step is the passage of this legislation.

The Lake Cushman legislation also contains legislation relating to the Olympic Experimental State Forest. This amendment will end 3 years of dispute over the management of State-owned lands on the Olympic Peninsula in Washington State. In 1989, a group of environmentalists, industry leaders, and community representatives came together to form the Commission on Old Growth Alternatives for Washington's Forest Trust Lands. That consensus group recommended, among other things, that a 260,000-acre experimental forest be established on the Olympic Peninsula and that its purpose be to produce a level of timber harvest comparable with contemporary forest practices and simultaneously to provide for ecological values.

The same year, the northern spotted owl was listed as a threatened species and the dream of creating an experimental forest was placed on hold. Today's legislation will free up the Olympic Experimental Forest to be the forest laboratory the Commission intended.

This Olympic Experimental State Forest bill will allow the State of Washington to submit a plan for the management of the forest to the Secretary of the Interior. If this plan is both sufficient to provide for the conservation of the northern spotted owl and is consistent with a final or draft recovery plan for the spotted owl, the Secretary shall approve the plan. If the plan is approved and the State complies with the plan, actions taken pursuant to the plan shall not be considered a prohibited taking under the Endangered Species Act.

The Olympic Experimental Forest is not only an ecological laboratory. It will also be a laboratory for experiments in commercial output. The Washington State Commissioner of Public Lands, Brian Boyle, estimates that under today's legislation the experimental forest will produce 143 million board feet of timber per year. This would provide a significant boost to a forest that produced just 81 million board feet last year as a result of spotted owl restrictions. This legislation will not return the area to pre-spotted owl harvest levels, nor do I advocate such a return. It will, however, allow the forest in that area to produce a reasonably certain level of timber production.

The people of Washington State, and particularly the Olympic Peninsula, have been waiting three years for Congress to solve a timber supply crisis in the Pacific Northwest. Today's legislation will not solve that crisis, but it is one part of the solution.

These various provisions are of great importance to the State of Washington. I ask the Senate to pass both H.R. 4489 and S. 1990 by unanimous consent.

So the bill (S. 1990) was passed.

USE AND OCCUPANCY OF CERTAIN LANDS IN YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2749) to grant a right of use and occupancy of a certain tract of land in Yosemite National Park to George R. Lange and Lucille F. Lange, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment on page 2, line 16, to strike "reasonable.", and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "reasonable: Provided, That the base rental rate as a percentage of the permittee's annual gross income shall not exceed the most recent American Housing Survey median monthly housing cost for renters inclusive of utilities, as a percentage of current income."

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. GRANT OF RIGHT OF USE AND OCCUPANCY IN YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary of the Interior shall grant George R. Lange and Lucille F. Lange a right of use and occupancy of the tract numbered 16–118 in Foresta, Yosemite National Park, California, for a term ending at the death of George R. Lange or the death of Lucille F. Lange, whichever is later.

(b) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The right granted pursuant to subsection (a)—

(1) shall be for such use and occupancy of the property as the Secretary of the Interior determines is reasonable;

(2) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior determines are necessary to ensure that the right does not unreasonably diminish the scenic, natural, historic, and other values for which Yosemite National Park was established; and

(3) shall be conditioned on the payment by the grantees of an annual fee that the Secretary of the Interior determines is reasonable: Provided, That the base rental rate as a percentage of the permittee's annual gross income shall not exceed the most recent American Housing Survey median monthly housing cost for renters inclusive of utilities, as a percentage of current income.

LIFETIME TENANCY IN YOSEMITE FOR MR. AND MRS. GEORGE LANGE

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2749, a bill to prevent the eviction of Mr. and Mrs. George Lange from their home in Yosemite National Park, CA.

Lucille and George Lange are both in their seventies and are the only year-round residents of Foresta, which is located in Yosemite National Park. The Langes bought the property on which they live in 1957. In 1976, they sold their cabin to the National Park Service with the understanding that they would be allowed to live on the property for the rest of their lives. Unfortunately, that agreement, along with the Langes future at Foresta, is in peril.

Following the disastrous 1990 fires in Foresta, when more than 80 homes and 13 units of park ranger housing were destroyed, the Park Service notified the Langes that they would be evicted from their home.

The Park Service claims it needs the Langes' cabin for additional ranger housing. I understand, Mr. President, ranger housing is a very real problem in the National Park System. I fail to see, however, how evicting an elderly couple from their only home—a 600-square-foot A-frame—is going to constructively address Yosemite's housing shortage.

I first became aware of the Langes' plight when they contacted my office late last year and requested my assistance with their problem. We were unsuccessful in attempting to work out a solution with the Park Service, and it became apparent that the Langes would not get relief from their eviction notice without congressional action. I therefore introduced S. 2749 to instruct the Park Service to grant the couple a lifetime tenancy in Yosemite.

When I introduced S. 2749 in May, the Park Service agreed to hold off on eviction proceedings until October to give the Congress time to act on my bill. During hearings on S. 2749 in the Senate Energy Committee, the Park Service testified that it does not oppose my legislation.

I am pleased that the Senate will act to prevent the Langes' eviction from their home, and I urge the House to consider this bill before adjournment.

So the bill (S. 2749) was passed.

BIG THICKET NATIONAL PRESERVE ADDITION ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 1592) to increase the size of the Big Thicket National Preserve in the State of Texas by adding the Village Creek Corridor unit, the Big Sandy Corridor unit, the Canyonlands unit, the Sabine River Blue Elbow unit, and addition to the Lower Neches Corridor unit, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Big Thicket National Preserve Addition Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. ADDITIONS TO THE BIG THICKET NATIONAL PRESERVE.

(a) ADDITIONS.—Subsection (b) of the first section of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the establishment of the Big Thicket National Preserve in the State of Texas, and for other purposes", approved October 11, 1974 (16 U.S.C. 698), hereinafter referred to as the "Act". is amended as follows:

(1) Strike out "map entitled 'Big Thicket National Preserve'" and all that follows through "Secretary of the Interior (hereafter referred to as the 'Secretary')" and insert in lieu thereof "map entitled 'Big Thicket National Preserve', dated October 19, 1990 and numbered 20031 C, which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, and the offices of the Superintendent of the preserve. After advising the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives, in writing, the Secretary of the Interior (hereafter referred to as the 'Secretary') may make minor revisions to the boundaries of the preserve when necessary by publication of a revised drawing or other boundary description in the Federal Register. The Secretary".

THE BIG THICKET NATIONAL PRESERVE ADDITION ACT OF 1992

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I rise to support H.R. 1592, the Big Thicket National Preserve Addition Act of 1992, with Senate amendments. On April 9, 1991, I introduced S. 780, the Big Thicket National Preserve Act of 1991. Additionally, Senator BENTSEN introduced separate legislation, S. 1105, the Big Thicket National Preserve Act of 1991. Since that time, Senator BENTSEN and I have worked to improve upon the original legislative proposals and have agreed upon this compromise which is before the Senate today.

Mr. President, I am pleased to report that H.R. 1592, as reported by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, proposes a logical conclusion to the long standing debate on how to expand the Big Thicket National Preserve in southeast Texas. Because I believe that property ownership is a sacred right, one of my primary goals in this debate has been to ensure the protection of individuals' private property rights. In that regard, it is important to note that no provision in the bill may be used to take privately owned property through condemnation procedures.

Mr. President, this legislation proposes to protect the Village Creek corridor, Big Sandy corridor, and the Canyonlands unit by exchanging U.S. Forest Service lands for 10,766 acres of land in these three units. These areas, which I have visited firsthand, would be added to the existing 86,115-acre Big Thicket National Preserve in the State of Texas. The Big Thicket area is often referred to as a "biological crossroads" due to the unique ecosystem which exists in the preserve. Addition of these three units will enhance the diversity of the preserve and future recreation opportunities. Mr. President, I urge adoption of this measure.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An Act to modify the boundaries of the Big Thicket National Preserve in the State of Texas by adding the Village Creek Corridor unit, the Big Sandy Corridor unit, and the Canyonlands unit.".

GREAT EGG HARBOR RIVER ACT OF 1992

The bill (H.R. 5853) to designate segments of the Great Egg Harbor River and its tributaries in the State of New Jersey as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE GREAT EGG HARBOR RIVER DESIGNATION AS PART OF THE WILD AND SCENIC RIVER SYSTEM

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased that today the Senate has passed H.R. 5853, which designates the Great Egg Harbor River as part of the Nation's Wild and Scenic River System. With this Senate action, we can now forward this legislation to the President. In the very near term, I am confident, this legislation will become public law.

This legislation represents the final state in a process initiated long ago. The late Warren Fox spent many years of his long and productive life championing the unique qualities of the Great Egg. Six years ago, Congress called for a Federal study of this river.

Every river community has played a role. Literally hundreds of citizens have taken part in public hearings and in the development of a river management plan which is crucial to this process. Each of the affected communities—Winslow, Corbin City, Hammonton, Buena Vista, Weymouth, Estell Manor, Egg Harbor, Somers Point, Monroe, Folsom, and Hamilton Townships—cooperated fully.

Unlike many of the western rivers that make up the bulk of those in the National Wild and Scenic River Systems, the Great Egg River flows through no Federal land. Without a solid commitment to preservation by the grassroots, this effort be doomed. But such a commitment does exist. Those who live along the river deserve our highest compliments for their vision, their sense of history and willingness to maintain the natural beauty that they've inherited for the generations to come.

The Great Egg Harbor River is located in a largely undeveloped area of southern New Jersey. A large portion of the river is within the Pinelands National Reserve. The main stem of the river is 60 miles in length. It rises in urbanized Camden County and flows through Gloucester and Atlantic Counties before it empties into the Atlantic Ocean behind the barrier island of Ocean City.

The Great Egg Harbor River is one of New Jersey's greatest and most beautiful natural resources. Those who live in south Jersey would like to ensure that the river's water quality and recreational opportunities are maintained through sound planning and management.

The Wild and Scenic Rivers Act has been successful in preserving a number of our Nation's free-flowing rivers. The Great Egg Harbor River is an ideal candidate for inclusion with these natural wonders as the Park Service clearly stated during the study process.

We're at a crossroad: Our actions will determine what this river will look like in the future. The natural qualities I've described have always been here. But they will only continue to be here if the citizens of this area decide positively that they commit themselves to a pristine future for the river.

This legislation is geared to provide environmental protection within the river communities and by the surrounding communities. Government has got to be willing to lend a hand to many citizens who wrestle everyday with creating a future beauty, health and opportunity. With our action today, we indicate our intentions to help those on the Great Egg River. I am proud that the Senate has acted today and commend my colleagues, especially Senators BUMPERS and his staff and Congressman BILL HUGHES for their support.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar numbers 567, 710, 711, 715, 728, 730, 731, 736, and 737 en bloc; that the committee substitute amendments and the committee amendments, where appropriate, be agreed to, en bloc; that the several bills and joint resolution each be deemed read a third time, passed; that the preamble where appropriate be agreed to; that the motion to reconsider the passage of these items be laid upon the table en bloc; that the title amendments where appropriate be agreed to; that the consideration of each bill be included separately in the RECORD; and that statements with respect to the passage of each bill be included in the RECORD where appropriate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL TRAILS SYSTEM ACT AMENDMENTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 3011) to amend the National Trails System Act to designate the American Discovery Trail for study to determine the feasibility and desirability of its designation as a national trail, which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF AMERICAN DISCOVERY TRAIL AS A STUDY TRAIL.

Section 5(c) of the National Trails System Act (18 U.S.C. 1244(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(34) American Discovery Trail, extending from Pt. Reyes, California, across the United States through Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, to Cape Henlopen State Park, Delaware; to include in the central United States a northern route through Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, and Indiana and a southern route through Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, and Indiana.".

SEC. 2. DESIGNATION OF ALA KAHAKAI TRAIL AS A STUDY TRAIL.

Section 5(c) of the National Trails System Act (16 U.S.C. 1244(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(35) Ala Kahakai Trail in the State of Hawaii, an ancient Hawaiian trail on the Island of Hawaii extending from the northern tip of the Island of Hawaii approximately 175 miles along the western and southern coasts to the northern boundary of Hawaii Volcanoes National Park.".

TO DESIGNATE THE AMERICAN DISCOVERY TRAIL STUDY

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, today I would like to rise in support of legislation to authorize the study of our Nation's first coast-to-coast hiking trail, the American Discovery Trail. While the Appalachian, Continental Divide, and Pacific Crest Trails each provide hiking opportunities traversing the United States from north to south, we lack an east-west backbone with which to link up these trails. The ADT would serve as this backbone, totaling nearly 5,500 miles in length.

The American Discovery Trail will give the American people greater access to some of our country's most beautiful scenic vistas. People all across this country would be able to hike, bike, horseback, or simply walk along such historic trails as the Pony Express route and Santa Fe National Trail which played an important part in America's history.

The trail begins at Point Reyes National Seashore near San Francisco, and travels eastward through Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, and Maryland, ending at Cape Henlopen State Park in Delaware. By linking over 17 existing scenic and historic trails, the ADT will form a national network of trails encompassing 27 States and over 30,000 trail miles.

In Colorado, the American Discovery Trail is routed through some of the State's most beautiful and historic areas. On the west slope, hikers would pass through the Colorado National Monument and cross the Grand Mesa and Gunnison National Forests. Heading north, the route would scale the Collegiate Peaks and then hitchup with the Colorado Trail. Once the trail descends from the Rockies into the suburban areas of Denver, it follows along the foothills of the front range through Cripple Creek to Canon City and then heads west to hook up with the Santa Fe Trail.

Support for such a comprehensive system of trails has been spectacular. In fact, members of the Nebraska delegation contacted me to specifically request that a northern leg of the trail following the South Platte River through Nebraska and Iowa be studied for possible inclusion in the ADT. This has been included in the bill reported by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Thanks to the efforts of the American Hiking Society, Backpacker magazine, as well as many other State and local trails organizations, a three-person team successfully led a scouting expedition in June of 1990 from California to Delaware in order to determine a feasible route for the ADT. Nearly 2 years later, this expedition completed much of the groundwork for the ADT utilizing existing trails wherever possible.

In addition, committees in each State participated to make sure that local interest existed for such a trail and that potential conflicts were avoided.

Because of this groundwork, the cost of studying the proposed route for designation will be small. Within 3 years, the National Park Service must conduct the study and provide its recommendations to Congress. At that time, additional legislation will provide for the actual designation of the trail.

Because the ADT has been purposefully routed in and around major metropolitan areas to link up with urban greenways and rail-to-trail conversions, the ADT also helps achieve the goal set forth by the President's Commission on Americans Outdoors—that everyone live within 15 minutes of a trail. This same commission found that walking for pleasure is the No. 1 activity for Americans. In addition, the presence of trails has been shown to positively impact real estate property value, small business revenues, and tourism.

Mr. President, I was happy to sponsor this legislation. In these times of physical awareness and fiscal restraint, the American Discovery Trail provides healthy, inexpensive entertainment opportunities for all age groups.

It is my hope that the trail also will foster increased appreciation of and responsibility for our public lands, as well as heightened awareness of our cultural heritage.

So the bill (H.R. 3011) was passed.

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE DEVELOPMENT ACT

The bill (H.R. 4999) to authorize additional appropriations for implementation of the development plan for Pennsylvania Avenue between the Capitol and the White House, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Res. 271) authorizing the Go For Broke National Veterans Association Foundation to establish a memorial in the District of Columbia or its environs to honor Japanese-American patriotism in World War II, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADAMHA REORGANIZATION TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1992

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 3366, a bill introduced earlier today by Senators KENNEDY and HATCH, the ADAMHA Reorganization Technical Amendments Act of 1992; that the bill be read a third time and passed; the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements thereon appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place as though read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE ADAMHA TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1992

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the bill we have just passed consists of minor and technical amendments to the ADAMHA Reorganization Act (Public Law 102–321), which was enacted into law on July 10 of this year. An earlier set of technical amendments, primarily concerning the new block grant formula, was included in Public Law 102–352.

I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis of these additional technical amendments be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Short title.

Section 2(a)(1). Exempts protection and advocacy grants from the requirement of state review. The state review requirement was inluded in the Reorganization Act to facilitate coordination and state involvement in federal treatment and prevention funding. That goal is inapplicable to the protection and advocacy program because of the unique nature of protection and advocacy activities.

Section 2(a)(2). Makes clear that the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) will maintain separate clearinghouses for substance abuse and mental health.

Section 2(a)(3). Provides for the appointment of an Associate Administrator for AIDS Policy and Programs within SAMHSA.

Section 2(b). Eliminates an unnecessary limitation on members of the general public who may sit on advisory councils.

Section 2(c). Eliminates references to the promulgation of regulations in regard to the peer review process of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. This section also exempts from the peer review requirement protection and advocacy grants because of their unique nature.

Section 2(d). Provides that states may receive demonstration grants under section 506 of the Public Health Service Act so that they may in turn provide grants to political subdivisions and non-profit entities within the state.

Section 2(e). Provides that grantees under section 508 may provide treatment services to women with dependent children who are neither pregnant nor post-partum. The primary purpose of section 508 is to provide comprehensive services to pregnant and post-partum substance abusers. This focus exists because of the immediate physiological danger to the fetuses and infants of substance abusers. Nonetheless, the incidental expenditure of funds for women with dependent children who are neither pregnant or post-partum is not prohibited.

Section 2(f). Specifies that violation of the confidentiality requirement set forth in section 543 is a class A misdemeanor.

Section 2(g). Revises the amount of money that must be spent on technical assistance under the childhood mental health program.

Section 3(a). Conforming amendment.

Section 3(b). Clarifies the definition of "pharmacotherapeutics" within the medications development program and revises a study deadline.

Section 4. Expands the scope of certain CDC grant-making authority in light of the fact that there are certain geographic regions in which non-profit mammography screening units may not exist.

Section 5(a). Conforming amendment.

Section 5(b). Clarifies that the cost of services index in the block grant formula is to be recalculated for fiscal year 1995 and every three years thereafter.

Section 5(c). Revises the section requiring certain coordinated drug treatment and HIV services so that the latter may be provided off-site.

Section 5(d). Corrects an incorrect statutory reference.

Section 5(e). Corrects an incorrect statutory term.

Section 5(f). Permits capacity expansion funds to be used for inpatient hospital treatment to the same extent as under the substance abuse block grant.

Section 6(a). Extends the deadline for obligation of FY92 block grant funds.

Section 6(b). Requires additional consultation on a study.

Section 6(c). Repeals an unnecessary provision of law.

So the bill (S. 3366) was passed as follows:

S. 3366

THE 100TH HAWAII ANNIVERSARY AND APOLOGY

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 804, Senate Joint Resolution 335, a joint resolution acknowledging the 100th anniversary of the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii; that the resolution be read for a third time and passed; that the preamble be agreed to; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements be placed in the appropriate place in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S.J. Res. 335) to acknowledge the 100th anniversary of the January 17, 1893 overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii, and to offer an apology to native Hawaiians on behalf of the United States for the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii, which had been reported from the Select Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The amendment were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

S.J. RES. 335

Whereas, prior to the arrival of the first Europeans in 1778, the Native Hawaiian people lived in a highly organized, self-sufficient, subsistent social system based on communal land tenure with a sophisticated language, culture, and religion;

Whereas a unified monarchical government of the Hawaiian Islands was established in 1810 under Kamehameha I, the first King of Hawaii;

Whereas, from 1826 until 1893, the United States recognized the independence of the Kingdom of Hawaii, extended full and complete diplomatic recognition to the Hawaiian Government, and entered into treaties and conventions with the Hawaiian monarchs to govern commerce and navigation in 1826, 1842, 1849, 1875, and 1887;

Whereas the Congregational Church (now known as the United Church of Christ), through its American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, sponsored and sent more than 100 missionaries to the Kingdom of Hawaii between 1820 and 1850;

Whereas, on January 14, 1893, John L. Stevens (hereafter referred to in this Resolution as the "United States Minister"), the United States Minister assigned to the sovereign and independent Kingdom of Hawaii conspired with a small group of non-Hawaiian residents of the Kingdom of Hawaii, including citizens of the United States to overthrow the indigenous and lawful Government of Hawaii;

Whereas, in pursuance of the conspiracy to overthrow the Government of Hawaii, the United States Minister and the naval representatives of the United States caused armed naval forces of the United States to invade the sovereign Hawaiian nation on January 16, 1893, and to position themselves near the Hawaiian Government buildings and the Iolani Palace to intimidate Queen Liliuokalani and her Government;

Whereas, on the afternoon of January 17, 1893, a Committee of Safety that represented the American and European sugar planters, descendents of missionaries, and financiers deposed the Hawaiian monarchy and proclaimed the establishment of a Provisional Government;

Whereas the United States Minister thereupon extended diplomatic recognition to the Provisional Government that was formed by the conspirators without the consent of the Native Hawaiian people or the lawful Government of Hawaii and in violation of treaties between the two nations and of international law;

Whereas, soon thereafter, when informed of the risk of bloodshed with resistance, Queen Liliuokalani issued the following statement yielding her authority to the United States Government rather than to the Provisional Government:

"I Liliuokalani, by the Grace of God and under the Constitution of the Hawaiian Kingdom, Queen, do hereby solemnly protest against any and all acts done against myself and the Constitutional Government of the Hawaiian Kingdom by certain persons claiming to have established a Provisional Government of and for this Kingdom.

"That I yield to the superior force of the United States of America whose Minister Plenipotentiary, His Excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the Provisional Government.

"Now to avoid any collision of armed forces, and perhaps the loss of life, I do this under protest and impelled by said force yield my authority until such time as the Government of the United States shall, upon facts being presented to it, undo the action of its representatives and reinstate me in the authority which I claim as the Constitutional Sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.".

Done at Honolulu this 17th day of January, A.D. 1893.;

Whereas, without the active support and intervention by the United States diplomatic and military representatives, the insurrection against the Government of Queen Liliuokalani would have failed for lack of popular support and insufficient arms;

Whereas, on February 1, 1893, the United States Minister raised the American flag and proclaimed Hawaii to be a protectorate of the United States;

Whereas the report of a Presidentially established investigation conducted by former Congressman James Blount into the events surrounding the insurrection and overthrow of January 17, 1893, concluded that the United States diplomatic and military representatives had abused their authority and were responsible for the change in government;

Whereas, as a result of this investigation, the United States Minister to Hawaii was recalled from his diplomatic post and the military commander of the United States armed forces stationed in Hawaii was disciplined and forced to resign his commission;

Whereas, in a message to Congress on December 18, 1893, President Grover Cleveland reported fully and accurately on the illegal acts of the conspirators, described such acts as an "act of war, committed with the participation of a diplomatic representative of the United States and without the authority of Congress", and acknowledged that by such acts the government of a peaceful and friendly people was overthrown;

Whereas President Cleveland further concluded that a "substantial wrong has thus been done which a due regard for our national character as well as the rights of the injured people requires that we should endeavor to repair" and called for the restoration of the Hawaiian monarchy;

Whereas the Provisional Government protested President Cleveland's call for the restoration of the monarchy and continued to hold state power and pursue annexation to the United States;

Whereas the Provisional Government successfully lobbied the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate (hereafter referred to in this Resolution as the "Committee") to conduct a new investigation into the events surrounding the overthrow of the monarchy.

Whereas the Committee and its chairman, Senator John Morgan, conducted hearings in Washington, D.C., from December 27, 1893, through February 26, 1894, in which members of the Provisional Government justified and condoned the actions of the United States Minister and recommended annexation of Hawaii;

Whereas, although the Provisional Government was able to obscure the role of the United States in the illegal overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy, it was unable to rally the support from two-thirds of the Senate needed to ratify a treaty of annexation;

Whereas, on July 4, 1894, the Provisional Government declared itself to be the Republic of Hawaii;

Whereas, on January 24, 1895, while imprisoned in Iolani Palace, Queen Liliuokalani was forced by representatives of the Republic of Hawaii to officially abdicate her throne;

Whereas, in the 1896 United States Presidential election, William McKinley replaced Grover Cleveland;

Whereas, on July 7, 1898, as a consequence of the Spanish-American War, President McKinley signed the Newlands Joint Resolution that provided for the annexation of Hawaii;

Whereas, through the Newlands Resolution, the self-declared Republic of Hawaii ceded sovereignty over the Hawaiian Islands to the United States;

Whereas the Republic of Hawaii also ceded 1,800,000 acres of crown, government and public lands of the Kingdom of Hawaii, without the consent of or compensation to the Native Hawaiian people of Hawaii or their sovereign government;

Whereas the Congress, through the Newlands Resolution, ratified the cession, annexed Hawaii as part of the United States, and vested title to the lands in Hawaii in the United States;

Whereas the Newlands Resolution also specified that treaties existing between Hawaii and foreign nations were to immediately cease and be replaced by United States treaties with such nations;

Whereas the Newlands Resolution effected the transaction between the Republic of Hawaii and the United States Government;

Whereas the indigenous Hawaiian people never directly relinquished their claims to their inherent sovereignty as a people or over their national lands to the United States, either through their monarchy or through a plebiscite or referendum;

Whereas, on April 30, 1900, President McKinley signed the Organic Act that provided a government for the territory of Hawaii and defined the political structure and powers of the newly established Territorial Government and its relationship to the United States;

Whereas, on August 21, 1959, Hawaii became the 50th State of the United States;

Whereas the health and well-being of the Native Hawaiian people is intrinsically tied to their deep feelings and attachment to the land;

Whereas the long-range economic and social changes in Hawaii over the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries have been devastating to the population and to the health and well-being of the Hawaiian people;

Whereas, the Native Hawaiian people are determined to preserve, develop and transmit to future generations their ancestral territory, and their cultural identity in accordance with their own spiritual and traditional beliefs, customs, practices, language, and social institutions;

Whereas, in order to promote racial harmony and cultural understanding, the Legislature of the State of Hawaii has determined that the year 1993 should serve Hawaii as a year of special reflection on the rights and dignities of the Native Hawaiians in the Hawaiian and the American societies;

Whereas the Eighteenth General Synod of the United Church of Christ in recognition of the denomination's historical complicity in the illegal overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii in 1893 directed the Office of the President of the United Church of Christ to offer a public apology to the Native Hawaiian people and to initiate the process of reconciliation between the United Church of Christ and the Native Hawaiians; and

Whereas it is proper and timely for the Congress on the occasion of the impending one hundredth anniversary of the event, to acknowledge the historic significance of the illegal overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii, to express its deep regret to the Native Hawaiian people, and to support the reconciliation efforts of the State of Hawaii and the United Church of Christ with Native Hawaiians: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ACKNOWLEDGEMENT AND APOLOGY.

The Congress—

(1) on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the illegal overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii on January 17, 1893, acknowledges the historical significance of this event which resulted in the suppression of the inherent sovereignty of the Native Hawaiian people;

(2) recognizes and commends efforts of reconciliation initiated by the State of Hawaii and the United Church of Christ with Native Hawaiians;

(3) apologizes to Native Hawaiians on behalf of the people of the United States for the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii on January 17, 1893 with the participation of agents and citizens of the United States, and the deprivation of the rights of Native Hawaiians to self-determination;

(4) expresses its commitment to acknowledge the ramifications of the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii, in order to provide a proper foundation for reconciliation between the United States and the Native Hawaiian people; and

(5) urges the President of the United States to also acknowledge the ramifications of the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii and to support reconciliation efforts between the United States and the Native Hawaiian people.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Joint Resolution, the term "Native Hawaiian" means any individual who is a descendent of the aboriginal people who, prior to 1778, occupied and exercised sovereignty in the area that now constitutes of the State of Hawaii.

SEC. 3. DISCLAIMER.

Nothing in this Joint Resolution is intended to serve as a settlement of any claims against the United States.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to support Senate Joint Resolution 335, a joint resolution I introduced with Senators INOUYE and SIMON which would acknowledge the 100th anniversary of the January 17, 1893 overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii and offer an apology to Native Hawaiians on behalf of the United States for its complicity in this event.

While Senate Joint Resolution 335 seeks to educate Congress and the American public on the events surrounding the 1893 overthrow and the impact that this action has had on the destiny of the Native Hawaiian people, the resolution would also provide the proper foundation for reconciliation between the United States and native Hawaiians.

As the 100th anniversary of the overthrow approaches, many individuals and organizations are reevaluating the events of 1893. A good example of this is the action taken by the Church of Christ in June 1991, during its 18th General Synod. As many of you know, the United Church of Christ, which now has 110 churches in the State of Hawaii, through its American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, sent the first 100 missionaries to the Kingdom of Hawaii between 1820 and 1850. In recognition of the denomination's historical complicity in the 1893 overthrow of Queen Liliuokalani, the 18th General Synod directed the office of the president of the United Church to offer a public apology to the Native Hawaiian people and to initiate the process of reconciliation between the United Church of Christ and native Hawaiians. This action was a significant gesture by the United Church of Christ and has had a profound impact upon the United Church of Christ churches in Hawaii and native Hawaiians.

Mr. President, our Nation must also begin the healing process. The 100th anniversary of the January 17, 1893 overthrow of Queen Liliuokalani provides the proper occasion for a U.S. apology for its complicity in this event. Because of this episode in U.S. history, the political relationship between Native Hawaiians and the United States remains unresolved.

Not until our Nation understands the significance of the events surrounding the 1893 overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii will the American people appreciate the meaning of the native Hawaiian rights movement which grows stronger every day.

Nearly a century ago, President Grover Cleveland, in a message to Congress on December 18, 1893, courageously acknowledged U.S. complicity in the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii and stated, "A substantial wrong has thus been done which a due regard for our national character as well as the rights of the injured people requires we should endeavor to repair." Mr. President, January 17 of next year will mark the 100th anniversary of that substantial wrong, yet no official apology has ever been made by the United States to the native Hawaiian people nor has there ever been an attempt by the United States to develop a Federal policy addressing their rights.

Support of Senate Joint Resolution 335 would be the first step toward Federal reconciliation with the native Hawaiian people. I ask my colleagues to support this important gesture of good faith and contribute to the healing process.

CANCER REGISTRIES AMENDMENT ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 3312.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Page 14, line 6, strike [there are authorized to be appropriated] and insert in lieu thereof "the Secretary may use"; and

Page 14, line 8, strike [appropriated] and insert in lieu thereof "used".

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Cancer Registries Amendment Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) cancer control efforts, including prevention and early detection, are best addressed locally by State health departments that can identify unique needs;

(2) cancer control programs and existing statewide population-based cancer registries have identified cancer incidence and cancer mortality rates that indicate the burden of cancer for Americans is substantial and varies widely by geographic location and by ethnicity;

(3) statewide cancer incidence and cancer mortality data, can be used to identify cancer trends, patterns, and variation for directing cancer control intervention;

(4) the American Association of Central Cancer Registries (AACCR) cites that of the 50 States, approximately 38 have established cancer registries, many are not statewide and 10 have no cancer registry; and

(5) AACCR also cites that of the 50 States, 39 collect data on less than 100 percent of their population, and less than half have adequate resources for insuring minimum standards for quality and for completeness of case information.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to establish a national program of cancer registries.

SEC. 3. NATIONAL PROGRAM OF CANCER REGISTRIES.

Title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 241 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART M—NATIONAL PROGRAM OF CANCER REGISTRIES

"SEC. 399H. NATIONAL PROGRAM OF CANCER REGISTRIES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Centers for Disease Control, may make grants to States, or may make grants or enter into contracts with academic or nonprofit organizations designated by the State to operate the State's cancer registry in lieu of making a grant directly to the State, to support the operation of population-based, statewide cancer registries in order to collect, for each form of in-situ and invasive cancer (with the exception of basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma of the skin), data concerning—

"(1) demographic information about each case of cancer;

"(2) information on the industrial or occupational history of the individuals with the cancers, to the extent such information is available from the same record;

"(3) administrative information, including date of diagnosis and source of information;

"(4) pathological data characterizing the cancer, including the cancer site, stage of disease (pursuant to Staging Guide), incidence, and type of treatment; and

"(5) other elements determined appropriate by the Secretary.

"(b) MATCHING FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make a grant under subsection (a) only if the State, or the academic or nonprofit private organization designated by the State to operate the cancer registry of the State, involved agrees, with respect to the costs of the program, to make available (directly or through donations from public or private entities) non-Federal contributions toward such costs in an amount that is not less than 25 percent of such costs or $1 for every $3 of Federal funds provided in the grant.

"(2) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF NON-FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION; MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—

"(A) Non-Federal contributions required in paragraph (1) may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. Amounts provided by the Federal Government, or services assisted or subsidized to any significant extent by the Federal Government, may not be included in determining the amount of such non-Federal contributions.

"(B) With respect to a State in which the purpose described in subsection (a) is to be carried out, the Secretary, in making a determination of the amount of non-Federal contributions provided under paragraph (1), may include only such contributions as are in excess of the amount of such contributions made by the State toward the collection of data on cancer for the fiscal year preceding the first year for which a grant under subsection (a) is made with respect to the State. The Secretary may decrease the amount of non-Federal contributions that otherwise would have been required by this subsection in those cases in which the State can demonstrate that decreasing such amount is appropriate because of financial hardship.

"(c) ELIGIBILITY FOR GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No grant shall be made by the Secretary under subsection (a) unless an application has been submitted to, and approved by, the Secretary. Such application shall be in such form, submitted in such a manner, and be accompanied by such information, as the Secretary may specify. No such application may be approved unless it contains assurances that the applicant will use the funds provided only for the purposes specified in the approved application and in accordance with the requirements of this section, that the application will establish such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure proper disbursement and accounting of Federal funds paid to the applicant under subsection (a) of this section, and that the applicant will comply with the peer review requirements under sections 491 and 492.

"(2) ASSURANCES.—Each applicant, prior to receiving Federal funds under subsection (a), shall provide assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that the applicant will—

"(A) provide for the establishment of a registry in accordance with subsection (a);

"(B) comply with appropriate standards of completeness, timeliness, and quality of population-based cancer registry data;

"(C) provide for the annual publication of reports of cancer data under subsection (a); and

"(D) provide for the authorization under State law of the statewide cancer registry, including promulgation of regulations providing—

"(i) a means to assure complete reporting of cancer cases (as described in subsection (a)) to the statewide cancer registry by hospitals or other facilities providing screening, diagnostic or therapeutic services to patients with respect to cancer;

"(ii) a means to assure the complete reporting of cancer cases (as defined in subsection (a)) to the statewide cancer registry by physicians, surgeons, and all other health care practitioners diagnosing or providing treatment for cancer patients, except for cases directly referred to or previously admitted to a hospital or other facility providing screening, diagnostic or therapeutic services to patients in that State and reported by those facilities;

"(iii) a means for the statewide cancer registry to access all records of physicians and surgeons, hospitals, outpatient clinics, nursing homes, and all other facilities, individuals, or agencies providing such services to patients which would identify cases of cancer or would establish characteristics of the cancer, treatment of the cancer, or medical status of any identified patient;

"(iv) for the reporting of cancer case data to the statewide cancer registry in such a format, with such data elements, and in accordance with such standards of quality timeliness and completeness, as may be established by the Secretary;

"(v) for the protection of the confidentiality of all cancer case data reported to the statewide cancer registry, including a prohibition on disclosure to any person of information reported to the statewide cancer registry that identifies, or could lead to the identification of, an individual cancer patient, except for disclosure to other State cancer registries and local and State health officers;

"(vi) for a means by which confidential case data may in accordance with State law be disclosed to cancer researchers for the purposes of cancer prevention, control and research;

"(vii) for the authorization or the conduct, by the statewide cancer registry or other persons and organizations, of studies utilizing statewide cancer registry data, including studies of the sources and causes of cancer, evaluations of the cost, quality, efficacy, and appropriateness of diagnostic, therapeutic, rehabilitative, and preventative services and programs relating to cancer, and any other clinical, epidemiological, or other cancer research; and

"(viii) for protection for individuals complying with the law, including provisions specifying that no person shall be held liable in any civil action with respect to a cancer case report provided to the statewide cancer registry, or with respect to access to cancer case information provided to the statewide cancer registry.

"(d) RELATIONSHIP TO CERTAIN PROGRAMS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—This section may not be construed to act as a replacement for or diminishment of the program carried out by the Director of the National Cancer Institute and designated by such Director as the Surveillance, Epidemiology, and End Results Program (SEER).

"(2) SUPPLANTING OF ACTIVITIES.—In areas where both such programs exist, the Secretary shall ensure that SEER support is not supplanted and that any additional activities are consistent with the guidelines provided for in subsection (c)(2)(C) and (D) and are appropriately coordinated with the existing SEER program.

"(3) TRANSFER OF RESPONSIBILITY.—The Secretary may not transfer administration responsibility for such SEER program from such Director.

"(4) COORDINATION.—To encourage the greatest possible efficiency and effectiveness of Federally supported efforts with respect to the activities described in this subsection, the Secretary shall take steps to assure the appropriate coordination of programs supported under this part with existing Federally supported cancer registry programs.

"(e) REQUIREMENT REGARDING CERTAIN STUDY ON BREAST CANCER.—In the case of a grant under subsection (a) to any State specified in section 399K(b), the Secretary may establish such conditions regarding the receipt of the grant as the Secretary determines are necessary to facilitate the collection of data for the study carried out under section 399C.

"(2) OTHER ENTITIES.—For the purpose described in paragraph (1), the Secretary may make grants to public entities other than States and to nonprofit private entities. Such a grant may be made to an entity only if the State in which the purpose is to be carried out has certified that the State approves the entity as qualified to carry out the purpose.

"(b) APPLICATION.—The Secretary may make a grant under subsection (a) only if an application for the grant is submitted to the Secretary, the application contains the certification required in subsection (a)(2) (if the application is for a grant under such subsection), and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 9. GRANTS FOR PROMOTING INDEPENDENCE AND PREVENTING SECONDARY DISABILITIES IN PERSONS WITH ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE.

Section 445C of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 285e-5) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) The director of the Institute may develop, or make grants to develop—

"(1) model techniques to—

"(A) promote greater independence, including enhanced independence in performing activities of daily living and instrumental activities of daily living, for persons with Alzheimer's disease and related disorders; and

"(B) prevent or reduce the severity of secondary disabilities, including confusional episodes, falls, bladder and bowel incontinence, and adverse effects of prescription and over-the-counter medications, in such persons; and

"(2) model curricula for health care professionals, health care paraprofessionals, and family caregivers, for training and application in the use of such techniques.".

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, Alzheimer's disease is something that touches the lives of many Americans—many Hoosiers in my home State of Indiana. Alzheimer's is not just an elderly disease; it strikes people in their twenties, thirties, and forties as well. It's a diseases that places a tremendous burden on both the patient and the family.

We must expand and improve services to help relieve the emotional strain and to enable families to continue giving love and support for victims of Alzheimer's disease. For this reason, I am pleased to support H.R. 3082, the Alzheimer's Disease Research, Training, and Education Amendments of 1991. H.R. 3082 makes a positive step by authorizing needed funding for fiscal year 1993 for concentrated efforts in education, training, and research for individuals, and professionals who provide services for those with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

Presently, there are nearly 56,000 individuals in Indiana afflicted with Alzheimers disease—nearly 4 million nationwide. By the year 2050, this number will more than triple. Statistics show us that one out of every five people will be affected nationwide by Alazheimer's by the year 2050.

I believe Federal and local governments must work together to effectively help those in need of research, training, and education about Alzheimer's. The current estimates of the cost of providing care for people inflicted with Alzheimer's disease is $80 billion annually. Our changing demographics—an ever increasing elderly population—will require increased funding for Alzheimer's patients. This problem will be particularly acute when the baby boomers become elderly. Only through cooperative efforts between the Federal Government, universities, the medical community, companies, and the patient will we be able to effectively improve the lives of the many Americans who suffer from Alzheimer's.

A disease so severe and widespread must be addressed by each and every one of us. Today, I join my colleagues in support of an effort to help those who are unable to help themselves.

MINORITY BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH CONSTRUCTION ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Labor Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 3256, a bill to authorize grants for construction of certain historically black colleges and universities for biomedical research; that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration; that the bill be deemed read the third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements thereon appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the bill (S. 3256) was deemed read the third time and passed as follows:

(The text of S. 3256, as passed will appear in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of this legislation. There are over 200 medical, dental, and veterinary schools in this country, 50 of which are minority institutions—including historically black colleges and universities [HCBS's]. These institutions have trained a large portion of health care professionals who serve in minority communities, and I commend them for their tremendous efforts in this area. But because these schools tend to devote their resources to training health care practitioners rather than research personnel, minority researchers remain markedly under-represented.

The National Institutes of Health [NIH] has, for many years, managed research programs targeted to disadvantaged and minority students to encourage them to obtain higher degrees in the biomedical sciences and to introduce them to biomedical research—the Minority Biomedical Research Support [MBRS] and the Minority Access to Research Careers [MARC] Programs, for example. Still, in order to expand the universe of research scientists, we must first provide the facilities, the capability to conduct quality research projects. Facility construction is critical in order for institutions to conduct and keep up with state-of-the-art biomedical research.

A 1990 report by the NIH titled, "The Status of Biomedical Research Facilities," shows that only 29 percent of research facilities at HCBU's were considered "suitable for the most highly developed and scientifically sophisticated research." Less than half were considered effective for "most purposes."

This bill will give institutions the resource they need to develop a strong infrastructure, to prepare a top notch environment for attracting more researchers, and, ultimately, to help these schools become strong centers for research—particularly on diseases that disproportionately affect minority populations.

S. 3256 is a priority of Secretary Sullivan and of great importance to these institutions which rely so heavily on public support. I hope that you will realize the sound benefits of this legislation, and vote "yes."

COMPETITIVENESS POLICY COUNCIL ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Commerce Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 2936, the Competitiveness Council reauthorization, and that the Senate then proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2936) to amend the Competitiveness Policy Council Act to provide for reauthorization, to rename the Council, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, the substitute amendment I have offered with Senator RIEGLE to S. 2936 reflects the agreement reached with the Office of Management and Budget on this matter. I would like to thank Senator HOLLINGS and Senator DANFORTH for their support and assistance. The amendment is identical to language that has passed both the House and Senate attached to various other measures. It reauthorizes and renames the Competitiveness Policy Council, which was established in the 1988 Trade Act. The new name, the National Competitiveness Policy Commission, is designed to avoid confusion with either the White House Council on Competitiveness or the private-sector, nonprofit organization also called the Council on Competitiveness. This amendment also makes various technical changes including designating the Commission as an agency within the meaning of section 3132(a)(1) of title 5, United States Code.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3429) was agreed to.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, it is my pleasure to present to the Senate the Agricultural Credit Improvement Act of 1992. This bill incorporates much of my bill, S. 3310, entitled the Agricultural Credit Amendment Act of 1992, which was designed to provide credit to beginning farmers and ranchers, as well as H.R. 4906, a similar bill in the House.

The bill before the Senate today establishes a downpayment loan program under the Farmers Home Administration [FmHA]. Under this proposal, a beginning farmer or rancher who wishes to purchase land may receive a 10-year, low-interest FmHA loan for 30 percent of the value of that land if the beginning farmer provides a 10-percent downpayment, and a commercial cooperative or other lender makes a loan for the remaining 60 percent. When the beginning farmer or rancher has repaid the FmHA loan at the end of 10 years, he or she will have at least 40 percent equity in the land, which should provide an adequate asset base on which to obtain future private credit and operate a successful farm operation.

This bill also establishes a beginning farmer operating loan program which ensures a borrower a reliable source of FmHA-assisted operating credit for up to 10 years if the borrower develops and meets a long-term operating plan.

Mr. President, I would like to explain the intent of a number of provisions in this bill to guide the administration, in particular, the Department of Agriculture, in their interpretation of the provisions contained in the bill.

Federal-State beginning farmer partnership: Section 5 establishes a new partnership between the Farmers Home Administration [FmHA] and beginning farmer programs in the States. It is the intent of the committee that FmHA notify States of this new partnership as soon as possible after enactment. It is further the intent of the committee that FmHA respond quickly and positively to requests from a State beginning farmer program for assistance, including but not limited to downpayment loans to be used in conjunction with State financing of the remainder of the loan and Federal guarantees of State aggie bond and other types of State beginning farm loans. The committee hopes that this change in policy will spur many additional States to revive or establish beginning Farmer programs. With respect to the Advisory Committee on Beginning Farmers and Ranchers, the committee encourages the Secretary to establish this group as quickly as possible, at no cost to the Government if necessary, so that it can assist in developing the program and program regulations.

Downpayment Loan Program: Section 7 establishes the time period for downpayment loans at 10 years, or less at the option of the borrower. It is the intent of the committee that, should the need arise, the downpayment borrowers will be subject to the same loan servicing the debt restructuring options as any other farm ownership borrower.

Special assistance to qualified beginning farmers and ranchers: Section 8 establishes a special assistance option for beginning farmer and ranchers that requires FmHA to provide assistance for a 10 year commitment period. Beginning farmers and ranchers may apply as regular operating loan borrowers, if they so choose.

This section also requires the applicant to submit a plan of farm operation. It is the intent of the committee that the Secretary in coordinating this program with borrower training, loan assessment, supervised credit, and market placement, devise a single planning instrument to eliminate unnecessary paperwork.

This section also provides that the farm plan contain specific goals that the applicant projects to meet in order to progress toward graduation as expeditiously as possible. It is the intent of the committee that such goals are to be guidelines for each individual borrower, with assistance from the Secretary, to progress toward graduation. The goal during the commitment period, is to move the borrower thoughout the continuum of assistance, ranging from reduced interest rate direct loans, regular interest rate direct loans, subsidized guaranteed loans, and unsubsidized guaranteed loans, and ultimately graduation to private credit. Depending on the applicant's particular circumstances and farm plan, one or more of these options may be used during the commitment period. It is the intent of the committee that this process take place in conjunction with the loan assessment program established by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-624). Section 8 limits beginning farmers and ranchers who choose to participate in the special operating loans assistance program to not more than 8 years of direct loans within the 10 year commitment period. It is the intent of the committee that this limit does not preclude the borrower from receiving another 2 years of direct loans, if necessary, under the regular operating loan program, consistent with the overall graduation requirement in Section 9.

This section also provides that the Secretary "shall revoke any commitment for assistance made to an applicant under this section if the operation of the applicant fails, for 2 consecutive years, to meet the goals specified in the plan, unless the failure is due to circumstances beyond the control of the applicant and has not materially reduced the likelihood of the operation becoming financially viable." It is the intent of the committee that "goals specified in the plan" refers to the general financial and farm income goals identified in the plan, but does not include the details of the plan such as projections concerning crop selection, yields, production methods and practices, conservation measures, equipment, specific income and expense figures, specific credit needs, and farm sites. It is not the intent of the committee that production choices are locked in by the plan nor is it the intent of the committee that income and credit projections will be used as an absolute measure of success.

Definition of qualified beginning farmer or rancher: Section 19 changes the current majority of labor and management test to "substantial day-to-day labor and management of the State or county in which the farm or ranch is located." This change is intended to apply only to beginning farmers and ranchers. The committee does not intend this change to apply to other applicants and does not intend to signal that any application of this change beyond this specific instance would be acceptable.

This section also establishes the definition of qualified beginning farmer or rancher to be applied to all farmer loan and inventory sale and lease programs. These requirements are in addition to, and do not supersede, existing eligibility requirements for each program. The committee intends that a farmer or rancher who previously farmed or ranched and is restarting in agriculture shall be considered a beginning farmer or rancher if they otherwise satisfy the terms of the definition.

This section applies the definition of qualified beginning farmer or rancher to all farm loan and inventory sale and lease programs. These requirements are in addition to, and do not supersede, existing eligibility requirements for each program. The committee intends that a farmer or rancher who previously farmed or ranched and is restarting in agriculture shall be considered a beginning farmer or rancher if they otherwise satisfy the terms of the definition.

Equal access to FmHA assistance by gender: The intention of Section 21 is to take all feasible steps to ensure that there is no discrimination or perception of discrimination by gender in administering FmHA's farm loan programs.

It is the intention that this section will increase the number of farm ownership and operating loans made to female farmers. To meet current and future needs for credit, the managers expect that the Secretary will determine the current number of female farmers in each State and add to that number an estimated number reflecting the trend towards increased numbers of female farmers in the State, instead of setting the loan participation rates by gender at a static level.

This targeted rate of loanmaking by gender could be further adjusted as research data on the credit needs of female farmers, as well as recordkeeping on female farmer applicants by gender, becomes available.

I urge my colleagues to support passage of this bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I speak today to alert my colleagues to a growing problem not only in Iowa, but in the rest of the Nation, and I urge my colleagues to move quickly to enact legislation that would stem an alarming new threat to the family farm and and America's rural communities.

Mr. President, the House of Representatives recently passed the Beginning Farmer and Rancher Credit Act. This bill would assist young people interested in farming by creating a new downpayment loan option for farm ownership loans. This provision is designed to leverage private financing with limited Farmers Home Administration funds. As I will detail in a moment, with the average age of the farming community continuing to rise at an alarming rate, we desperately need legislation not only to aid the struggling beginning farmer and rancher, but also to encourage our young People to enter the profession. I submit that the transfer of productive agricultural assets with the resulting changing demographics of our rural communities, may be the single most important agriculture issue we will face in the coming years.

I have long been concerned about this trend and have been active in providing incentives that would encourage young people to take up farming. Most notably, I worked hard to get tax-exempt status for State-issued bonds designed to assist beginning farmers to acquire agricultural property.

This has helped thousands, but we need to do more.

And that is why I, in concert with Congressman TIM PENNY, have introduced the Beginning Farmer and Rancher Credit Act. With time running out for the American farmer, I sincerely hope that, during these waning days of the 102d Congress, this Chamber support this measure.

That quick action is needed is demonstrated by 1990 census data and a recent survey conducted by Iowa State University. In Iowa alone, the number of farms dropped by 15,000 between 1980 and 1990, and in fact 32,000 farmers either left the land or found a different primary source of income. During that same time period, the farm population of Iowa declined by 135,000. Many economists believe that steeper declines are expected in the future.

Yet these numbers don't tell the whole story. Census data suggests that the relatively rapid decline in the number of farms during the 1980's was to a large degree due to the dramatic drop in new, beginning farmers. While the numbers of farmers who leave the land have remained relatively stable year-in and year-out, those who enter farming as a career have dropped off precipitously during the past two decades. The economic research service of the Department of Agriculture confirms this, finding that there has been a 50-percent reduction in the number of farmers under the age of 25, and a 30-percent reduction in the total number of farmers between the ages of 25 and 34. Indeed, the only age group that increased was that of farmers 65 and older. And since most of these farmers are expected to retire in the near future, it is critical to move quickly to encourage young people to get into farming.

To be sure, young people interested in farming face many obstacles: the cost of equipment, seed, livestock and other inputs means that help with annual operating loans is a necessity. Furthermore, the costs of renting or purchasing farmland has escalated in recent years, and the reduced availability of credit, and cautious lenders, are making it more and more difficult to obtain much-needed credit. Much of the available credit from public and private sources is redirected to existing financially strapped farmers, leaving even less assistance for beginning farmers.

But with the average age of the farmer at 55 years, with many planning to retire in the next 4 years, it is clear that the very foundation of the family farm is being threatened by the barriers to entry that make farming too risky, or too expensive, for young people interested in the profession.

Mr. President, one in five Iowa farmers will retire in the next 5 years. I have to believe that the numbers for the Nation are comparable. Mr. President, I ask who will take their place? Unless credit is made available for the next generation of farmers, I am afraid that more and more of our agricultural production will be placed in fewer and fewer hands.

A country can ill afford to ignore its food production, and this chamber must not miss this opportunity to address the changing face of the American farm. In the past, we have all worked hard to stabilize the farm economy and raise the standard of living of our farmers and ranchers. But to a certain extent our efforts have been primarily "reactive." We need the vision to pass this pro-active piece of legislation now. We need to ensure that retiring farmers are replaced by aspiring farmers.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to put aside any differences that might hinder the enactment of this legislation. Our action during the 102d Congress is crucial not only the viability of America's family farmers, but also the future of all of rural America.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I appreciate the interest shown by the Senator from North Dakota in closely investigating the issue of program participation criteria at the Rural Electrification Administration. He understands the importance of looking at participation criteria at the REA to determine whether a priority system needs to be established in order to best distribute funds to the most needy and deserving borrowers.

In my view, smaller cooperatives that need low-interest loans in order to maintain services to rural customers are often left to "stand in line" behind large cooperatives with big loan requests which drain the annual loan fund. I also believe that the lending system currently employed at the REA does little to improve the debt load of the U.S. Government, nor does it offer real assistance to those borrowers who need it most.

I am concerned that in this time of great need, a first-come-first-served loan policy may severely restrict the flow of Government funds to the truly needy. I believe the development and future implementation of eligibility criteria would go farther than any other approach to improve the integrity and efficiency of the Rural Electrification Administration.

I know that my colleague from North Dakota understands my position on this issue. I, in turn, appreciate the Senator's view that "cash on hand" should not be used as the sole criteria for participation.

I would like to inquire whether the Senator would consider working closely with me in the future—regardless of the outcome of the activities on November 3—with regard to the restructuring of the REA in order to better address rural America's needs. I would also inquire about whether the Senator from North Dakota can speak as to the senate Agriculture Committee's willingness to address this issue as soon as possible after the next Congress convenes.

Mr. CONRAD. We are willing to do that. Regardless of election year activities, I agree to work with the Senator on this important matter. I also appreciate his understanding of my position that general funds is not an appropriate sole criteria for REA Program participation. Within my abilities, I will encourage the Senate Agriculture Committee to hold hearings next year on the issue of program participation criteria for REA borrowers. In fairness, I will also encourage other Senate committees with the appropriate jurisdictions to hold hearings on the issue of program participation criteria for the Federal assistance that is given to the other electric utilities in this country. I shall look forward to arranging a public forum in order to examine further this important issue.

PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION LEASE SETTLEMENTS ACT OF 1992

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3367, a bill introduced earlier today by Senator JEFFORDS, providing for the treatment of settlement agreements reached with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation; that the bill be deemed read the third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements thereon appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place as though read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the bill (S. 3367) was deemed read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 3367

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation Lease Settlements Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. TREATMENT OF SETTLEMENT LEASES WITH THE PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION.

Section 4062 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) TREATMENT OF LEASES.—In the case of any settlement for liability under title IV of this Act entered into by the corporation and one or more other parties, if—

"(1) such settlement was entered into before the date of the enactment of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation Lease Settlements Act of 1992,

"(2) one party to such settlement was a debtor under title 11, United States Code, and

"(3) the corporation is a party-in-interest to an agreement being entered into as part of such settlement, which agreement provided that it is to be treated as a lease, then, for purposes of such title 11, such agreement shall be treated as a lease for purposes of section 1110 of such title 11.".

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise to offer a bill to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act. It will solidify a recent settlement made by the Government Agency that insures defined benefit pension plans, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation [PBGC], and Eastern Airlines. Since October 1990, Eastern Airlines has owed the PBGC nearly $700 million in unpaid pension plan contributions. Recently, the PBGC and Eastern Airlines have come to a settlement of PBGC's claim on Eastern's pension liabilities. The agreement has been approved by the court and Eastern's other creditors are not opposed to it.

The settlement will bolster the retirement security of over 60,000 Eastern Airlines pensioners. It will also protect the PBGC, the agency that insures defined benefit pensions, from further financial ruin.

However, due to the novelty of the arrangement, some legal questions remain outstanding. My bill would resolve this issue by specifically permitting in law, what has already been agreed to by the parties involved. It clarifies that the PBGC, which obtained 15 planes in the settlement, can lease back these planes to Eastern Airline's parent company, Continental Airlines.

This will enable the PBGC to obtain the maximum amount it can from Continental Airlines. The more money the PBGC can obtain for Eastern's pension debt, the less money that will have to be obtained through raising the PBGC premiums paid by other plan sponsors. PBGC premiums have already risen 700 percent over the last 10 years. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

CLARIFICATION OF FAIR USE DOCTRINE

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 4412, a bill to clarify the application of the fair use doctrine to unpublished copyrighted materials received from the House, that the bill be deemed read three times, passed and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; that a statement jointly signed by Senators SIMON, LEAHY, KENNEDY, GRASSLEY, METZENBAUM, and KOHL be insert in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There being no objection, the joint statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATORS SIMON, LEAHY, KENNEDY, GRASSLEY, METZENBAUM, AND KOHL

Last September, the Senate approved S. 1035, a bill introduced by Senator Leahy and Senator Simon, that clarified the application of the fair use doctrine to unpublished, copyrighted, materials. In August of this year, the House approved a similar bill, H.R. 4412, which is before us now for consideration.

We endorse the House bill. H.R. 4412 serves the same goals and achieves the same objectives as S. 1035. While the House version contains slightly different language, the effects of the two bills are identical. Thus, the Senate Report interpreting the objectives of S. 1035 and discussing the history of fair use can be applied in all respects to H.R. 4412, as well.

In order to remove any question about the scope of the bill, a few additional comments may be helpful. As Senators Leahy and Simon noted when they introduced the Senate version in May of 1991, the fair use bill was triggered by two Second Circuit decisions, Salinger v. Random House, 811 F.2d 90 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 890 (1987), and New Era v. Henry Holt, 873 F.2d 576 (2d Cir.), reh'g denied, 884 F.2d 659 (2d Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S.Ct. 1168 (1990), that severely narrowed the scope of the fair use doctrine as applied to unpublished works. These cases threatened to establish a virtual per se rule against the fair use of any unpublished materials, such as letters or diaries. As the court said in New Era, unpublished works "normally enjoy complete protection" against copying.

Since the vast majority of publishing and magazine companies are based in the Second Circuit's jurisdiction, the effect of the Salinger and New Era decisions has been profound, resulting in chilling uncertainty and serious apprehension in the publishing community regarding fair use of unpublished works. We think it no exaggeration to say that if the trend were to continue, it could severely damage the ability of journalists and scholars to use unpublished primary materials. This would be a crippling blow to accurate scholarship and reporting.

H.R. 4412, like its Senate counterpart, is thus designed to undo the harm caused by the overly restrictive standards adopted in Salinger and New Era, and to clearly and indisputably reject the view that the unpublished nature of the work triggers a virtual per se ruling against a finding of fair use. While the fact that a work is unpublished is "an important element which tends to weigh against a finding of fair use," the unpublished nature of the copyrighted material is not necessarily determinative of whether or not a particular use is considered a fair use.

By rejecting the per se approach, this bill serves to reaffirm the general principles regarding fair use of unpublished works as set forth in the Supreme Court's landmark decision Harper & Row v. Nation Enterprises, 471 U.S. 539 (1985). That decision makes clear that, rather than considering only one factor, a finding of fair use must be made upon a full consideration of all the factors under section 107 of the copyright laws. The review of these factors must be complete and meaningful. A more detailed discussion of Harper is set forth in the Senate report.

To some observers, one Second Circuit decision handed down after the Senate's passage of S. 1035, Wright v. Warner Books, 953 F. 2d 731 (2d. Cir. 1991), seems to portend a more reasonable approach by the Second Circuit. However, since the Wright decision did not explicitly disavow the narrow formulation of the fair use doctrine espoused in Salinger and New Era, the pall that the latter two cases cast over the publishing world remains. Moreover, as the Senate noted in its report: "[S. 1035] is intended to overrule the overly restrictive language of Salinger and New Era with respect to the use of unpublished materials and to return to the law of fair use as it was expressed in Harper & Row." S. Rep. 102-141, 102nd Cong., 1st Sess., at 5. Consequently, the bill rejects dicta in Wright to the extent that such dicta is premised upon the disapproved language of Salinger and New Era. The bill requires the courts to make a carefully reasoned and complete consideration of each of the fair use factors set forth in Section 107 of the Copyright Act.

Finally, as the Senate Report makes clear, this legislation does nothing to broaden the fair use of unpublished computer programs. Nor does it reduce the protection afforded to secure tests. And, the legislation is effective on the date of enactment. It applies to uses of letters, diaries and other unpublished copyrighted works created before, on or after that date. It governs all lawsuits filed on or after that date, whether the conduct at issue occurred before, on or after that date.

The bill (H.R. 4412) was deemed to have been read three times and passed.

TITLE VI—EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by this Act shall not apply with respect to cases commenced under title 11 of the United States Code before the date of the enactment of this Act.

AMENDMENT NO. 3431

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator HEFLIN I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House with a substitute amendment that I now send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD], for Mr. HEFLIN, proposes an amendment numbered 3431.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate and House have resolved their differences on bankruptcy reform legislation. This bill accomplishes a number of significant changes to the Bankruptcy Code that should improve the administration of bankruptcy cases as well as make the Code fairer for all parties.

There are two provisions in this bill that I would especially like to address. The first is reimbursement of the expenses of members of creditors' and equity security holders' committees and the second concerns money orders.

Creditors' and equity security holders' committees were created to play significant roles in chapter 11 bankruptcies. Congress created these committees to protect the interest of small unsecured creditors who are often underrepresented in a bankruptcy action.

Section 113 of S. 1985 clarifies that the members of official creditors' and equity security holders' committees can be reimbursed for their actual and necessary expenses incurred during a chapter 11 proceeding. However, they cannot recover compensation for services rendered as members of these committees. I believe this provision will encourage the active participation of creditors' and equity security holders' committees and will provide for a more efficient and cost effective system.

Section 309 of the bill seeks to clarify that money order proceeds are not the property of the bankruptcy estate. This change ensures the continued widespread availability and low cost of money orders to consumers. Currently, when a business that sells money orders on behalf of a money order issuer files bankruptcy, the money order proceeds may not be released to the money order issuer. The money order issuer, however, must still pay the outstanding money orders.

Most money order issuers have agreements with the selling locations requiring that the proceeds collected from money order purchasers be held in trust and not commingled. However, problems have arisen when courts have failed to recognize this agreement if it was violated by the debtor, even if the issuer was not aware of the violation.

Given the large number of locations selling money orders, detecting violations is difficult. This section provides protection in those circumstances as long as the issuer has taken action to make it clear that compliance is required. Under this section, the proceeds of money orders sold during the 14 days prior to a bankruptcy filing are not considered part of the estate and are available to the money order issuers.

I would like to thank Senator HEFLIN and his staff for their untiring efforts to secure passage of this bill. This is a good bill which makes many needed changes to the Code.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise to congratulate my colleague and friend Senator HEFLIN—chairman of the Courts Subcommittee—for his leadership on the Bankruptcy Amendments of 1992. Without his personal attention to moving this legislation we would not have passed a bill. Additionally, I congratulate Senators GRASSLEY and METZENBAUM for their contributions during this long process.

This is compromise legislation worked out between the House and the Senate. And as with most compromises, additions to, and deletions from the original bill were necessary to move forward. In the end I believe we have a good bankruptcy bill—one with provisions which will assist both debtors and creditors, and which will expedite the overall bankruptcy process. Of particular note are three sections that I helped craft and I will speak to them in more detail.

The first of the these provisions aids the Nation's air and rail industries in accessing affordable financing for essential equipment. This amendment would resolve ambiguities in the current law and is supported by all sectors of the air and rail equipment financing industries—including airlines, railroads, manufacturers, and financing parties.

Congress enacted sections 1110 and 1168 of the Bankruptcy Code to ensure affordable capital for the transportation industry by protecting those who finance air, shipping and rail equipment. Recent airline bankruptcies have produced continuing uncertainty as to the availability of sections 1110 and 1168. Lenders and lessors seek assurance that the protection of these sections will apply to their transactions. Because this assurance does not exist, financing costs have increased to compensate for additional risk. These increased costs adversely affect not only the airlines and railroads, but also the manufacturers of air and rail equipment, and ultimately the passengers and businesses that rely on our Nation's airlines and railroads.

The uncertainty surrounding sections 1110 and 1168 has had an immediate and ongoing impact on the air and rail industries at a time when they are in severe need of affordable capital. The modifications to sections 1110 and 1168 reflect the realities of modern financing and, without the clarifications in this amendment, the problem will continue to drive up capital costs for the transportation industry.

It should be emphasized again that all parties involved in these industries agree that clarification of sections 1110 and 1168 is urgently needed. Furthermore, all agree that this amendment would resolve many of the ambiguities in the law, while upsetting the delicate balance of fairness and equity between the air and rail industries, the equipment manufacturers and the parties financing the equipment.

The second provision, section 307, addresses a problem threatening the value of real estate lease agreements. After a recent third circuit court opinion, it is unclear whether the sale of a real estate lease by a chapter 11 tenant is permanent or not. This amendment would clarify that a valid, good faith sale of a lease by a tenant in bankruptcy would not be affected by a later court order, unless a party challenging the sale obtains a court order halting the sale during the appeal. This clarification will go a long way in eliminating lease purchasers' fears that their purchase might be revoked long after a bankruptcy court approval, and after they have invested their time and money in reliance on that approval.

In the 1990 third circuit opinion of In re Joshua Slocum, Ltd., 922 F.2d. 1081, the court considered the finality of orders in section 365 lease assignments. Slocum held that a landlord's appeal of a bankruptcy court's order authorizing a chapter 11 tenant's assignment of a real estate lease to a good faith assignee for value was not subject to mootness and could be reversed on appeal. This ruling came in spite of the parties having consummated the assignment and the good faith assignee having taken possession of the premises almost 2 years prior to the third circuit's opinion. The third circuit refused to interpret mootness principles currently embodied in sections 363(m) and 364(e) to reach a similar result in connection with the appeal of consummated lease assignments under section 365.

In order to prevent what could be significant finality problems if other courts adopt the Slocum ruling, this amendment modifies section 365 to include a provision similar to those contained in sections 363(m) and 364(e).

Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Alan Gordon, an attorney in Philadelphia, and a member of the American Bankruptcy Institute's Task Force on Asset Sales. Mr. Gordon first brought this issue to the attention of my staff and, without his help and that of the ABI, this provision would not have been included in the bill.

Finally Mr. President, there is one other section I will mention, section 107, which would allow State pension funds and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation [PBGC] to sit on creditor committees in chapter 11 reorganizations. Under present law the U.S. Trustee appoints committees of unsecured claim holders. Ordinarily, the creditor and equity holders committee are composed of persons or institutions holding the seven largest claims of the kind represented by that committee. So, for example, an equity security holders' committee would be composed of those persons holding the seven largest amounts of equity securities. These committees have a broad range of powers to ensure their interests are protected during a bankruptcy reorganization.

Currently, State pension funds and the PBGC are precluded from participating as voting members of these committees. The unique interests of retirement funds, as long-term investors, are not represented by other creditor and equity holder committee members, who may have different goals or shorter investment horizons. These interests are thus put at an unintended fiscal disadvantage. Section 107 would allow State pension funds and the PBGC to serve on these committees, as long as they meet all the other appropriate criteria. It would not give them any special treatment; rather it would simply lift an unintended burden from their shoulders.

In my home State, the State of Wisconsin Investment Board acts as the investment manager for the $22 billion Wisconsin Retirement System. That $22 billion represents the retirement funds for 360,000 participants—school teachers, policemen, firefighters, and other state employees. These are the people that keep Wisconsin running. Simply put, it seems unfair that when decisions regarding their retirement funds are being made during a chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization, their interests are not represented. Section 107 will eliminate that unfairness and allow them a place at the table and a voice in the decision.

Mr. President, this is not a panacea for all the problems existing in the Bankruptcy Code. However, it does address many of the concerns that have been raised by both creditors and debtors. It is a good bill, and I hope the House acts on this as soon as it is sent to that body.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased to support S. 1985. This bill represents the collective wisdom of the Senate and the House concerning needed bankruptcy reforms. As an original cosponsor of the Senate-passed bill, I would have preferred that the Senate bill could have been enacted in its entirety. Nonetheless, compromise is the key to enact just about anything, and I can support this compromise bill as a good effort to improve our Nation's bankruptcy laws. Indeed, several of the provisions of the House bill were an improvement on the Senate language, and the bill before us adopts some of those House provisions.

At this time, I would like to address a number of the issues covered by this legislation. First, I am pleased that chapter 12, which governs family farmer bankruptcies, will be extended for 2 years. Chapter 12 was enacted in 1986 because other provisions of the code did not adequately reflect the unique circumstances of family farmers. In the ensuing period, chapter 12 has worked well, permitting thousands of family farmers to continue to work the land who would have otherwise been devastated. Now facing an October 1993 sunset, chapter 12 will be extended 2 years by S. 1985.

I am also very pleased that the House has agreed to create a bankruptcy review commission. Since the enactment of the present code in 1978, the code has not changed nearly as much as the economy and other laws. Although the code largely has functioned well, no one in 1978 could have foreseen the changed circumstances that now confront our bankruptcy system. This year, more than 1 million new bankruptcy petitions will be filed. Since 1978, the world economy has become more international in scope, and a boom in part financed through debt has led to a multitude of bankruptcies in the 1990's. Additionally, new laws have been enacted whcse relation to bankruptcy has not been carefully evaluated. And despite the 1984 legislation in response to the Northern Pipeline decision, the constitutionality of the current bankruptcy system is now certain. The blue-ribbon commission established by this bill will evaluate the code's deficiencies, substantively and operationally, and make recommendations to the Congress for legislative change. Thus, while S. 1985 will improve the bankruptcy system, its greatest contribution will be as a result of the commission it creates.

The bill will also address the treatment of mortgages in chapter 13. Under the bill, first mortgages in chapter 13 will not be able to be crammed down to the fair market value of the loan, nor will other terms of those mortgages be able to be modified. Junior liens will be entitled to a lesser degree of protection.

Finally, the bill amends section 550 of the code relating to the recovery of preferences to insiders. Section 547 of the Bankruptcy Code authorizes trustees to require preferential payments made to creditors within 90 days prior to a bankruptcy filing. Because of the concern that corporate insiders, such as officers and directors, who are creditors of their own corporation have an unfair advantage over outside creditors, section 547 of the Bankruptcy Code further authorizes trustees to recapture preferential payments made to such insiders in their creditors a full year prior to a bankruptcy filing. Several recent court decisions have allowed trustees to recapture payments made to noninsider creditors a full year prior to the bankruptcy filing, if an insider benefits from the transfer in some way. See Levit v. Ingersoll Rand Financial Corp. (in re V.N. Deprizio Construction Co.), 874 F. 2d 1186 (7th Cir. 1989); Ray v. City Bank & Trust Co. (in re C-L Cartage Co.), 899 F. 2d 1490 (6th Cir. 1990); Manufacturers Hanover Leasing Corp. v. Lowrey (in re Robinson Brothers Drilling), 892 F. 2d 850 (10th Cir. 1989). Although the creditor is not an insider in these cases, the courts have reasoned that because the repayment benefited a corporate insider, namely the officer who signed the guarantee, the noninsider transferee should be liable for returning the transfer to the bankrupt estate as if it were an insider as well. This section overrules the Deprizio line of cases and clarifies congressional intent that non-insider transferees should not be subject to the preference provisions of the Bankruptcy Code beyond the 90-day statutory period. The anticipated result of this clarification would be to encourage commercial lenders and landlords to extend credit to smaller business entities.

I wish to commend Senator HEFLIN for his persistent efforts to see to it that we enact these necessary reforms. I look forward to studying the report of the Bankruptcy Review Commission to determine what further efforts should be made to strengthen the operation of the Bankruptcy Code.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs I am very pleased that the Senate is about to take final action on landmark legislation—the proposed Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992—to bring greater fairness to the Department of Veterans Affairs' system of survivors' compensation and to improve VA's program of educational assistance and vocational rehabilitation and training.

The pending measure, H.R. 5008 as amended by a House amendment to the Senate amendment to the bill, represents a compromise agreement that the Veterans' Affairs Committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate have reached on bills relating to survivors' benefits and veterans' educational assistance, rehabilitation, and employment programs.

This compromise agreement would, as would the original House and Senate versions in somewhat different ways, revise VA's system of dependency and indemnity compensation [DIC] benefits for the survivors of those who die from service-connected conditions, require VA to conduct a study to determine the adequacy of veterans' survivors' benefits, and increase certain VA insurance benefits.

The compromise agreement also would provide much-needed cost-of-living adjustments in Montgomery GI bill [MGIB] benefits and in the subsistence allowance paid to service-disabled veterans participating in vocational rehabilitation, provide for automatically indexed COLA's in both MGIB benefits and the vocational rehabilitation subsistence allowance in the future, make other improvements in VA educational and vocational assistance programs, and extend or expand three cost-saving provisions from the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, Public Law 101-508, to offset completely the costs of the benefits improvements contained in this bill.

Mr. President, the House passed this compromise bill on October 3, 1992, and I urge the Senate to approve this measure and thus send it to the White House for signature.

Because I will submit for the RECORD an explanatory statement prepared by the two Veterans' Affairs Committees that describes in detail the provisions in this measure, at this point, I will only briefly summarize the provisions of the compromise agreement and then discuss certain provisions in the bill.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS

TITLE I—REFORM OF DEPENDENCY AND INDEMNITY COMPENSATION PROGRAM

Title I of the compromise agreement contains provisions that would:

First, provide surviving spouses with a basic monthly rate of dependency and indemnity compensation [DIC] of $750.

Second, provide additional monthly DIC of $165 to survivors of veterans who were rated 100-percent disabled while married to the surviving spouse for a continuous period of at least 8 years immediately preceding the veteran's death. A 100-percent rating based on "individual unemployability" would qualify the same as a rating based on physical disability.

Third, exempt from section 8004 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, Public Law 101-508 [OBRA], which eliminated reinstated entitlement for survivors' benefits for formerly remarried surviving spouses whose disqualifying marriage terminated after November 1, 1990, those formerly remarried surviving spouses who had initiated legal proceedings to terminate the remarriage prior to the effective date of section 8004.

Fourth, require the Comptroller General of the United States, as head of the General Accounting Office, to submit to Committees on Veterans' Affairs by April 1, 1994, a report on the most appropriate combination of survivors' benefits. GAO would be required to determine the adequacy of current and anticipated benefits to meet the financial, healthcare, educational, and other needs of survivors of those who die on active duty or as a result of a service-connected disability.

TITLE II—LIFE INSURANCE PROGRAMS

Title II of the compromise agreement contains provisions that would:

First, increase from $100,000 to $200,000 the maximum amount of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance [SGLI], which service members and certain members of the Reserves can purchase at low monthly premiums.

Second, increase from $100,000 to $200,000 the maximum amount of Veterans' Group Life Insurance [VGLI] available to eligible veterans and allow VA to offer VGLI on a renewable, 5-year term basis, rather than the single 5-year term allowed under current law, convertible to a commercial insurance policy upon termination of a VGLI term.

Third, provide eligibility for up to $20,000 in additional Service Disabled Veterans' Insurance [SDVI] for totally disabled veterans who qualify for a waiver of premium. The veteran must apply for the additional coverage within the 1-year period beginning on the month after the committee bill is enacted or within 1 year after VA notified or notifies the veteran that he or she is eligible for a waiver of premiums, whichever is later. The veteran would have to pay the regular premium for the additional amount of SDVI.

Fourth, increase the maximum Veterans' Mortgage Life Insurance from $40,000 to $90,000.

TITLE III—EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Title III of the compromise agressment contains provisions that would:

First, increase the MGIB monthly full-time-study educational benefits to: One, $400 for those serving on active duty for 3 years or more; two, $325 for those serving 2 years on active duty, and three, $190 for reservists, with rates for part-time study increased proportionally, and provide for indexing to the Consumer Price Index [CPI] future MGIB increases.

Second, restore, effective October 28, 1986, MGIB eligibility for an individual who, due to interrupted service, was not on active duty on October 19, 1984, but who had active duty service sometime during the period beginning on October 19, 1984, and ending on July 1, 1985, and continued on active duty without a break for the period required to establish entitlement under the MGIB.

Third, restore MGIB eligibility to an individual who was on active duty on August 2, 1990, and did not complete the requirements of a secondary school diploma—or equivalency certificate—before leaving active duty, but who completes those requirements within 24 months after the date of enactment.

Fourth, provide that individuals who are discharged by reason of disability, hardship, or reduction-in-force after less than 12 months of active duty and later re-enter on active duty would be deemed to have served a continuous period of active duty equal to the total of the two periods of active duty.

Fifth, provide that a period during which an MGIB participant is assigned full-time by the Armed Forces to a civilian institution for a course of education would not be considered a break in the continuity of the individual's active-duty service for purposes of MGIB eligibility.

Sixth, provide, in the case of MGIB participants who leave their initial period of active-duty service to enroll in a service academy or service-academy preparatory school, drop out of the academy or preparatory school, and reenter active duty, that they would be able to merge their second active-duty period with the initial period so that the aggregate length of the two periods will be considered a continuous period of service for purposes of MGIB eligibility.

Seventh, provide that an individual who was initially obligated to serve only 2 years of active duty but actually serves a continuous period of 3 years on active duty is eligible for the same level of MGIB benefits as one who performs an initial obligated period of active-duty service of 3 years.

Eighth, extend eligibility for the death benefit—an amount equal to the amount by which a participant's pay is reduced for purposes of MGIB participation minus the total of the amount of educational assistance that was paid to the individual—to the survivors of an MGIB participant who dies of a service-connected cause within one year of discharge from active duty.

Ninth, provide MGIB entitlement to individuals who enrolled in the program during the "open period" between December 1, 1988, and June 30, 1989, and who separated from the service early due to certain physical or mental conditions.

Tenth, permit active-duty participants in the MGIB to receive educational allowances and advance payments of allowances at the same rate as veterans.

Eleventh, authorize, for the last two years of the current 4-year program under which veterans may use VA educational benefits for flight training, the use of those benefits for solo flying hours up to the minimum required for the rating or certification being pursued.

Twelfth, limit advance payments to work-study participants to the amount they would be paid for the first 50 hours of each work-study contract.

Thirteenth, for VA purposes: repeal to requirement that an elementary or secondary school furnish a copy of a catalog in applying for approval of an accredited course; add a requirement that schools that have and enforce standards of attendance submit those standards for approval, and allow nurses' aide courses to be approved for VA educational assistance when such courses have been approved by a State under regulations established by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Fourteenth, prohibit the use of VA educational benefits for nonaccredited independent study.

Fifteenth, provide that the termination of an educational assistance allowance by reason of the death of the payee of an advance payment is effective as of the end of the period for which the advance payment was made.

Sixteenth, bar payment of VA educational assistance for a course paid for under the Government Employees Training Act.

Seventeenth, replace the statutory measurement system used in evaluating courses at an educational institution for the payment of VA education benefits with the institution's measurement system.

Eighteenth, provide that the limitations on changes of programs by students using VA educational assistance do not apply to a student beginning a new program of education after successfully completing another program; a student not changing his or her vocational objective, and a student transferring back to a former program without loss of credit for that program.

Nineteenth, permit reservists to receive tutorial assistance under the MGIB.

Twentieth, provide VA with administrative authority to withhold the training assistance allowance of a participant in the MGIB Selected Reserve program pursuing a program of apprenticeship or other on-job training until VA has received a certification of attendance from the person and the training establishment.

TITLE IV—VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION AND PENSION PROGRAMS

Title IV of the compromise agreement contains provisions that would:

First, make permanent the programs of 12-month trial-work periods and vocational rehabilitation outreach for service-disabled veterans who have total disability ratings based on individual unemployability.

Second, amend section 1524 of title 38 to extend the temporary vocational training program for VA pension recipients through December 31, 1995; eliminate the limitation on the number of program participants who may be evaluated annually, and amend the program for veterans under age 45 who are awarded pension during the program period so as to first, require the Secretary, based on information on file with VA, to make a preliminary finding whether the veteran, with the assistance of a VA vocational training program, has a good potential for achieving employment, second, if that potential is found to exist, require the Secretary to solicit from the veteran an application for VA vocational training, and third, if the veteran applies for training, require the Secretary to provide and evaluation to determine whether the achievement of a vocational goal is reasonably feasible.

Third, maintain the 3-year protection of VA health-care eligibility for veteran pension recipients participating in a program of vocational training who lose their pension due to employment income.

Fourth, provide VA rehabilitation program entitlement to a veteran who has a 10-percent service-connected disability and a serious employment handicap.

Fifth, increase by 10 percent the subsistence allowance for veterans with service-connected disabilities who participate in a VA vocational rehabilitation program, and provide for indexing to the CPI future increases in the subsistence allowance.

TITLE V—JOB COUNSELING, TRAINING, AND PLACEMENT SERVICES FOR VETERANS

Title V of the compromise agreement contains provisions that would:

First, expand the formula for the appointment of disabled veterans outreach program specialists to include, in addition to Vietnam-era veterans and disabled veterans, veterans who first entered on active duty after the end of the Vietnam era, May 7, 1975.

Second, repeal the limitation on veterans employment and job-training programs under chapters 41 and 42 of title 38 that provides that, after December 31, 1994, no veteran would be eligible for those programs on the grounds that his or her service occurred during the Vietnam era.

Third, establish as the first priority for disabled veteran outreach program specialists' services to "special disabled veterans" as defined in section 4211(1) of title 38 to include those who have service-connected disabilities that are rated at either 30 percent or more, or in the case of those who have been determined to have a service-employment handicap for purposes of chapter 31, at 10 or 20 percent, or were discharged or released from active duty because of a service-connected disability.

Fourth, strike the requirement that veterans organizations represented on the Advisory Committee on Veterans Employment and Training be chartered.

Fifth, reinstate the Veterans' Readjustment Appointments [VRA] authority for all veterans of the Vietnam era until December 31, 1995, or 10 years after the veterans' date of last discharge or release from active duty, whichever is later.

Sixth, renumber the sections of chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, to conform with the renumbering scheme required in Public Laws 102-40 and 102-83.

TITLE VI—OTHER VETERANS' PROGRAMS

Title VI of the compromise agreement contains provisions that would:

First, extend from September 30, 1992, to September 30, 1997, the $90-a-month limit on pension payments for Medicaid-eligible veterans receiving VA needs-based pension who have no dependents and who are in nursing homes participating in Medicaid.

Second, effective October 1, 1992, through September 30, 1997, expand the nursing-home pension-reduction provision to cover similarly situated veterans' survivors who receive VA pensions.

Third, effective through September 30, 1997, require that the amount of the reduction, under current section 5503(a)(1)(B) of title 38, to $90 a month of pension paid to a veteran or veteran's survivor in a VA nursing home be deposited in a revolving fund at the VA medical facility that furnished nursing care to the veteran, to help defray the operating expenses of that facility.

Fourth, extend through September 30, 1997, the requirement that VA verify eligibility for VA needs-based benefits using income data from the Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service.

Fifth, amend the Right to Financial Privacy Act to authorize VA to obtain from financial institutions the current mailing addresses of certain VA beneficiaries whose benefits are deposited by direct deposit, provided that the information is necessary to administer veterans' benefits programs and cannot be obtained by a reasonable search of VA records. Information disclosed by the financial institution under this provision could be used solely for the purpose of administering veterans' benefits programs.

Sixth, amend title 38 to require the Secretary to determine and certify that the information is necessary to administer veterans' benefits programs and cannot be obtained from VA records.

Seventh, extend from September 30, 1993, to July 31, 1994, VA's authority to recover from third parties, under a veteran's health-plan contract, the cost of medical care provided by VA for the treatment of a non-service-connected disability of a service-disabled veteran.

Eighth, extend from September 30, 1992, to September 30, 1997, the requirement that VA collect a copayment of $2 for each 30-day supply of medication for outpatient treatment of non-service-connected conditions.

Ninth, exempt from the $2 medication copayment requirement veterans whose income, if taken alone, would qualify them for VA needs-based pension.

Tenth, extend from September 30, 1992, to September 30, 1997, amendments to chapter 17 of title 38 made by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 that established the current "mandatory" and "discretionary" categories of veterans eligible for VA care and services and the copayments and deductibles certain veterans are required to pay for certain types of care.

DEPENDENCY AND INDEMNITY COMPENSATION REFORM

Mr. President, as I discussed in my statement when the Senate passed S. 2323 on September 22, 1992, which appears in the RECORD beginning on page S14662, VA pays dependency and indemnity compensation [DIC] to the survivors of servicemembers or veterans who died from a disease or injury incurred or aggravated during military service. Survivors eligible for DIC include surviving spouses, unmarried children under the age of 18, certain helpless children age 18 or older, and children between the ages of 18 and 23 who are enrolled in school. As of May 1992, VA was paying DIC benefits to, or on behalf of, 275,857 surviving spouses, and 37,628 children.

The basic purpose of the compromise agreement is to reform the DIC Program for surviving spouses and dependent children. The bill we are considering today represents the product of over a year of hard work on the very difficult issues involved in DIC reform. I have listened and responded to the concerns of all those involved with the DIC Program, including the veterans organizations, VA, other members of the Veterans' Affairs Committees, organizations representing survivors of those who died on active duty, and military organizations. I particularly note the contributions of the veterans organizations, who presented to our committee a historic compromise proposal for DIC reform that challenged us to address the problems with the current system and guided us in crafting this bill.

I am convinced that the compromise represents a reasonable, fair, and long-overdue reform of the DIC system and I am especially pleased that this compromise achieves my fundamental goal for DIC reform: that compensation provided to a surviving spouse of a veteran who was severely disabled for an extended period recognize the lasting financial impact of the deceased veteran's disability. The disability add-on of $165 per month provided under the compromise agreement is close to the maximum level that I proposed in the Senate bill, $200 per month, as compared to the much smaller disability add-on that the House bill would have provided, $50 per month. With the higher basic monthly rate we have been able to provide in the compromise agreement, $750, the maximum total DIC rate for the surviving spouse of a long-term, totally disabled veteran under the compromise agreement—$915—is very close to the $925 maximum rate that the Senate bill would have provided.

Mr. President, the compromise agreement would protect current DIC beneficiaries by prohibiting any reduction in benefits as a result of DIC reform. Moreover, current DIC beneficiaries who would receive higher payments under the new DIC system automatically will receive the increased benefits.

Mr. President, I want to make it clear that I and others on the two Committees intend that Congress, consistent with past practice, will provide annual cost-of-living adjustments [COLAs] in the base and add-on rates and, after the phased in increases are completed in fiscal year 1995, in the additional compensation for dependent children. We also intend that Congress will continue to provide COLA's for current DIC beneficiaries who continue to receive DIC under the existing program. I note that the Congressional Budget Office assumed these COLA's in its cost estimate of this legislation.

Mr. President, I am very disappointed that the compromise agreement does not contain a provision that was in the Senate bill that would have provided an additional amount of DIC based on the length of the deceased veteran's service. The House was adamantly opposed to this provision and, in order to reach an agreement with the House on DIC reform, we in the Senate had no choice but to yield on this point and I did so most reluctantly.

INSURANCE PROVISIONS

Mr. President, I am pleased that the compromise agreement contains four provisions that would improve VA insurance benefits. I have been working on two of these provisions, which increase the amounts of Service Disabled Veterans Life Insurance [SDVI] and Veterans' Mortgage Life Insurance [VMLI], for over 2 years. I first proposed increasing SDVI and VMLI in S. 2100 of the 101st Congress, which was reported by our Committee on July 19, 1990, but not considered by the full Senate.

Adequate life insurance allows an individual to provide for his or her survivors and is a vitally important part of any person's estate. Disabled veterans often are unable to obtain commercial insurance. As a result, life insurance provided through the VA administered programs is often the only reasonably priced coverage available to these individuals.

The provisions in the compromise agreement relating to life insurance programs would increase insurance coverage available to servicemembers and disabled veterans, and are an important component in the overall effort of this legislation to improve the entire package of financial benefits for veterans' survivors so as to help them to maintain an adequate standard of living.

EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Mr. President, I am very pleased that title III of the compromise agreement contains a number of provisions that would revise and improve educational assistance for veterans and members of the Armed Forces, including increases in veterans' educational and vocational rehabilitation allowances.

Mr. President, the compromise agreement would increase the monthly full-time-study benefits under the MGIB to $400 for those serving on active duty for 3 years or more, $325 for those serving 2 years on active duty, and $190 for reservists, with rates for part-time study increased proportionally. The compromise agreement would also provide automatic annual MGIB COLA's liked to the Consumer Price Index in fiscal year 1994 and later years.

Mr. President, as temporarily increased by title III-C of Public Law 102-25, the Persian Gulf War Veterans' Benefits Act of 1991, the levels of MGIB educational assistance for full-time study currently are $350 per month for active-duty participants who serve an initial obligated period of active duty of 3 years or more, $275 per month for those who serve an initial obligated period of 2 years, and $170 per month for participants in the selected Reserve program. In all cases, proportionally reduced amounts are provided for part-time study. Under current law, for fiscal year 1994, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs must choose one of three options with respect to MGIB rates: First, continue the current rates; second, provide for a COLA in those rates; or third, allow the rates to revert to their original levels—before the enactment of Public Law 102-25—of $300 per month for participants obligated for 3 years or more, $250 per month for those who are obligated for 2 years, and $140 per month for participants in the selected Reserve program. For each following fiscal year, the Secretary is authorized to continue to pay the monthly rates that were paid during the previous fiscal year or provide a COLA.

Mr. President, it is difficult to quantify the importance of an education, especially for those members of our Armed Forces and selected Reserves who have foregone completing their formal education in order to serve their country and will be returning to civilian life in the near future. However, we are better able to quantify the costs of education and how the rising cost of education has chipped away at the value of MGIB educational assistance.

Since the original MGIB payment rates were established in 1984, inflation as measured by the CPI has been 31 percent and the cost of education at a 4-year public college has increased by 42.5 percent. Last year's 16.7-percent increase in MGIB benefits, enacted in the Persian Gulf War Veterans' Benefits Act of 1991, marked the only rate increase in the program's history. It fell far short of the increase in the cost of education since 1984 mainly because of the limits that were inherent in the special nature of the funding of that legislation.

Mr. President, the Committees on Veterans' Affairs desire to bring the MGIB benefits more closely abreast of the rising costs of higher education by raising the basic monthly educational allowance for active duty and Reserve participants. Thus, effective April 1, 1993, section 301 of the compromise agreement would provide an increase of approximately 15 percent in the MGIB rates. Also, as I proposed in the Senate and the House had earlier proposed, effective October 1, 1993, section 301 of the compromise agreement would provide automatic COLA's in MGIB rates based on the increase in the CPI.

Veterans and active-duty participants have watched the value of their educational benefits slowly dwindle as prices rose and their MGIB rates stayed the same. The compromise agreement would ensure that the MGIB rates keep pace with the times and that our veterans and active-duty participants receive the educational benefits they deserve.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION AND PENSION PROGRAMS

Mr. President, title IV of the compromise agreement includes several provisions to improve the VA program of vocational rehabilitation for service-disabled veterans. These provisions are designed to make it possible for more service-disabled veterans to use their existing talents and develop new ones to support themselves and their families. These improvements are a sound investment in enabling service-disabled veterans to return to work. We should encourage and support their efforts to do so. Productive work gives disabled veterans a renewed sense of self-worth and purpose as well as helping the government reduce expenditures over the long-term.

Current law provides vocational-rehabilitation entitlement to a veteran who has a service-connected disability that is compensable at a rate of 20 percent or more and is determined by the Secretary to be in need of rehabilitation because of an employment handicap. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 increased the requisite disability rating from 10 percent to 20 percent.

Mr. President, many veterans with service-connected disabilities rated at 10 percent have a serious employment handicap resulting either from their service-connected disabilities alone or from those disabilities in conjunction with non-service-connected disabilities.

Thus, I am pleased that the compromise agreement includes my proposal to reopen the vocational rehabilitation program for these veterans who, by reason of having a serious employment handicap, are clearly in need of vocational rehabilitation services to improve their ability to return to the work force.

Mr. President, the subsistence allowance provided to veterans pursuing a rehabilitation program was last increased in January, 1990, under Public Law 101-237. That increase, of 7.5 percent, did not adequately cover the nearly 20-percent increase in the CPI that had occurred since the previous adjustment 6 years earlier in October 1984. The CPI has increased another 9.8 percent in fiscal years 1990 and 1991.

A recent General Accounting Office study of the effectiveness of the VA vocational rehabilitation and counseling program [GAO/HRD-92-100, September 1992] revealed that 71 percent of all applicants for vocational rehabilitation drop out of the program before obtaining suitable employment. The study indicated that one reason for attrition is that the subsistence allowance is too low to provide a decent living for program participants. At its current levels, the subsistence allowance has lost approximately 22 percent of its value due to the increase in the CPI since 1984.

Mr. President, the compromise agreement would, effective October 1, 1993, increase the subsistence-allowance rates by 10 percent in order to bring its value more in line with the rising cost of living. While a 10-percent increase falls short of the full measure of the inflationary rise, this increase would be useful in helping service-disabled veterans maintain a reasonable standard of living while pursuing programs of rehabilitation.

In order to prevent further slippage of the value of this allowance in future years, the compromise agreement contains my proposal to index future increases to changes in the CPI. Service-disabled veterans should be encouraged to participate in vocational rehabilitation and training to find suitable employment, not discouraged by having their subsistence allowance fall farther and farther behind the cost of living.

JOB COUNSELING, TRAINING, AND PLACEMENT SERVICES FOR VETERANS

Mr. President, the compromise agreement also includes, in title V, several provisions to improve job counseling, training, and placement services for veterans, and I will highlight two of these provisions.

The compromise agreement includes my proposal to update and strengthen the Disabled Veterans' Outreach Program [DVOP] administered by the Department of Labor to provide job counseling, training, and placement services for veterans. Most importantly, it would stabilize the staffing of this program, which in recent years has existed in the shadow of a sunset provision that threatened to reduce its employment base to an unworkable level.

Currently, section 4103A of title 38 provides for the appointment of one DVOP specialist for each 5,500 veterans of the Vietnam era and disabled veterans residing in each State. This formula now requires 1,885 DVOP specialists. However, section 4211 of title 38, provides, that for the purpose of the DVOP formula, no veterans may be considered to be veterans of the Vietnam era after December 31, 1994, which would cause the number of DVOPs in the statutory formula to drop to 433 after that date. Last year, when I proposed to extend the sunset provision regarding the definition of veterans of the Vietnam era from 1991 to 1994, in what became Public Law 102-16, I promised to review the concept of the formula. The proposed changes in the compromise agreement reflect this review.

Thus, Mr. President, the compromise agreement would delete the sunset provision, thereby allowing Vietnam-era veterans to be a permanent part of the DVOP formula. This measure would also recognize that veterans who entered active duty after the Vietnam era also need and are eligible for the employment assistance provided by DVOP's and should be considered in calculating available DVOP staffing. As a beginning point, I was interested in approximating the size of the current DVOP force, with a number of DVOP specialists added in recognition of their increased involvement in the Transition Assistance Program, administered under section 1144 of title 10, United States Code. I also wanted to use a formula rather than a fixed figure in order to allow for program growth to meet the projected new workload expected to result from the military downsizing. Additionally, I believe the formula should continue to distribute DVOP specialists to States in proportion to the States' veteran employment workloads. The result is a revised formula that would provide for the appointment of one DVOP specialist for each 6,900 veterans residing in a State who are either veterans of the Vietnam era, veterans who first entered on active duty as a member of the Armed Forces after May 7, 1975, or who are disabled veterans. This formula would provide for approximately 1906 DVOP specialists as compared to the 1885 under the current formula for fiscal year 1993.

Mr. President, I have long valued very highly the services being provided for veterans by the State Employment Security Agencies. This legislation is designed to eliminate the uncertainty that has too long plagued the DVOP program and to provide a stronger, more realistically sized work force.

Mr. President, I am pleased that the compromise agreement includes a provision that would reinstate Veterans' Readjustment Appointment [VRA] eligibility for certain Vietnam-era veterans who did not have a full 10-year opportunity to use this program. Under section 505, all Vietnam-era veterans qualifying for the VRA program would be eligible for appointments through December 31, 1995, or 10 years after the veteran's date of last discharge or release from active duty, whichever is later.

All veterans of the Vietnam era were eligible for VRA's—limited noncompetitive appointments that can lead to full civil service status—in the Federal Government through December 31, 1989, at which time the statutory authority for these appointments expired. Public Law 101-237, the Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989, extended the VRA authority to December 31, 1993, but appointment was limited to Vietnam-era veterans who were service-disabled or had received a campaign badge, which means they served in the Southeast Asia theater of operations, and to post-Vietnam-era veterans. Post-Vietnam-era veterans included only those who first entered on active duty after May 7, 1975.

Public Law 102-16 made the VRA authority permanent but limited eligibility for Vietnam-era veterans to those covered by Public Law 101-237. For Vietnam-era veterans who received a campaign badge, Public Law 102-16 also extended their VRA eligibility to 10 years after the date of their last discharge or release from active duty, or December 31, 1993, whichever is later.

Thus, since January 1, 1990, Vietnam-era veterans who are not service disabled nor authorized a campaign badge have not been eligible for a VRA appointment, even those who are leaving the service at the same time as post-Vietnam-era veterans who have such eligibility.

Mr. President, we all know that the Vietnam era has been over for many years and recognize that most of those who served their country during that period and who were discharged shortly thereafter have long ago successfully made the transition into the civilian workplace. For them, readjustment is not an issue. However, for some Vietnam-era veterans, including those who remained on active duty after the Vietnam era or who joined the Selected Reserves and were activated during Desert Storm, employment may very well be a major concern in today's economy. This population of Vietnam-era veterans—those who recently have been released or who are scheduled to soon be released under the Department of Defense's down-sizing plans, but who are not eligible for a VRA appointment—would be assisted by this provision.

The compromise agreement would provide VRA eligibility to all Vietnam-era veterans through December 31, 1995, or 10 years after the veteran's date of last discharge or release from active duty, whichever is later.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, I express my appreciation to the distinguished ranking Republican member of the Senate Committee, Mr. SPECTER, and all other members of the committee, as well as the chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Mr. MONTGOMERY and Mr. STUMP, for their cooperation on this measure.

Mr. President, I also want to express my deep gratitude to the committee staff members who worked on this legislation—on the minority staff, Quentin Kinderman, Charlie Battaglia, and Tom Roberts, and on the majority staff, Neil Koren, Michael Cogan, Tom Hart, Chuck Lee, Bill Brew, and Ed Scott—and the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs staff—John Brizzi, Jill Cochran, Pat Ryan, and Mack Fleming for the majority and for the minority, Sue Forrest, Kingston Smith, and Carl Commenator.

Mr. President, I also note the fine work of the staff of the two Offices of Legislative Counsel, Charlie Armstrong in the Senate, and Bob Cover in the House. They provided their usual excellent assistance as we prepared this legislation.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to give its unanimous approval to this measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the explanatory statement to which I referred earlier, and which takes the place of a joint explanatory statement in a conference report, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TITLE I—REFORM OF DEPENDENCY AND INDEMNITY COMPENSATION PROGRAM

REFORM IN PAYMENT FORMULA

Current law: Under section 1310 of title 38, United States Code, VA pays dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC) to surviving spouses of servicemembers or veterans who died from a disease or injury incurred or aggravated during military service.

Under section 1311(a) of title 38, the surviving spouse's basic compensation rate is determined by the deceased veteran's military pay grade (service rank). Under section 1311(b), compensation for surviving spouses with dependent children under 18 year of age is increased by $71 a month for each child.

House bill: Section 101(a) would, effective January 1, 1993, provide surviving spouses eligible for DIC with basic monthly compensation of $750. The basic rate would be increased by $50 for survivors of servicemembers who die on active duty and for survivors of a veteran who had a disability rated totally disabling for a continuous period of at least five years or continuously from the date of the veteran's discharge until the veteran's death.

Surviving spouses of veterans who died before January 1, 1993, would receive compensation under the current system or the new formula, whichever would provide the greater benefits.

Section 101(b) would increase the additional amount payable to a surviving spouse with dependent children of the deceased veteran from the current level of $71 a month for each child to $100 a month, beginning on December 1, 1993; to $150 a month, during FY 1994; and to $200 a month after FY 1994.

Senate amendment: Section 2(a) and (b) would, effective December 1, 1992, establish a basic monthly DIC rate of $725. Surviving spouses would be eligible for additional amounts of compensation based on either the length and severity of the veteran's disability or the length of the veteran's service, whichever factor would provide greater benefits.

Survivors of veterans rated 100-percent for at least one, but less than 5, years while married to the veteran would qualify for an additional $50 a month. The add-on would increase to $150 a month for a period of at least 5, but less than 10, years and to $200 for a period of 10 years or more. A rating of total disability based on "individual unemployability" under section 4.16 of title 38, Code of Federal Regulations, would qualify the survivor for benefits on the same basis as a 100-percent schedular rating.

The additional monthly DIC based on the length of the deceased veteran's military service would be $100 a month for 30 or more years of service; $70 for at least 20, but less than 30, years of service; $40 for at least 10, but less than 20, years; and $20 for at least 5, but less than 10, years.

Surviving spouses of veterans who died before December 1, 1993, would receive compensation under the current system or the new formula, whichever would provide greater benefits.

Section 2(b) also would, effective December 1, 1992, provide a special transitional rate of DIC for the month after the veteran's death equal to either 50 percent of the disability compensation paid to the deceased veteran for the last full month before the veteran's death or the amount of DIC calculated under the new DIC provisions, whichever is greater.

Section 2(c) would increase the additional amount payable to a surviving spouse with dependent children of the deceased veteran from the current level of $71 a month for each child to $100 a month, beginning on October 1, 1993; to $150 a month, during FY 1994; and to $200 a month after FY 1994.

Section 2(d) would provide for up to $5 million of the costs of implementing the DIC reform provisions of the Senate bill during FY 1993 to be paid from VA's Compensation and Pension account.

Compromise agreement: Section 102(a) would provide, effective January 1, 1993, a basic monthly DIC rate of $750, plus an additional amount of compensation for survivors of veterans rated totally disabled while married to the surviving spouse, including a rating based on individual unemployability. The add-on would be $165 a month for veterans so rated for a continuous period of at least 8 years immediately preceding the veteran's death.

Surviving spouses of veterans who die before January 1, 1993, would receive compensation under the current system or the new formula, whichever would provide greater benefits.

Section 102(b) would increase the additional amount payable to a surviving spouse with dependent children of the deceased veteran from the current level of $71 a month for each child to $100 a month, beginning on January 1, 1993; to $150 a month, during FY 199; and to $200 a month thereafter.

Section 102(d) would provide for the costs of implementing the DIC reforms in FYs 1993 and 1994 to be paid from VA's Compensation and Pension account.

The Committees intend and expect that Congress will continue to provide annual cost-of-living adjustments, through separate annual legislation, in the DIC rates under the current system, and the basic-rate and the disability-based add-on contained in the compromise agreement. The Committees also intend and expect that Congress will provide annual COLAs in the additional compensation for surviving spouses with dependent children after the phased-in increases take full effect in FY 1995.

EXCEPTION TO OPERATION OF OBRA PROVISION

Current law: Under section 101(3) of title 38, the term "surviving spouse" is defined in such a way that an individual is no longer considered a surviving spouse upon remarriage and thus looses eligibility for veteran's survivors' benefits when he or she remarries. Prior to the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-508) (OBRA), remarried surviving spouses' VA benefits eligibility could be restored when the disqualifying remarriage ended, through divorce or the death of the subsequent spouse. Section 8004 of OBRA, the application of which was modified by section 502 of the Veteran' Benefits Programs Improvements Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-86), eliminated the restored eligibility for a survivor whose disqualifying remarriage terminated after October 31, 1990.

House bill: Section 102(a) would provide that amendments made by section 8004 of OBRA shall not apply to survivors' benefits to formerly remarried surviving spouses who, before November 1, 1990, had initiated legal proceedings to terminate their remarriage.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 103 follows the House provision.

GAO REPORT RELATING TO THE PROVISION OF BENEFITS TO SURVIVORS OF VETERANS AND MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES

House bill: Section 102(b) would require VA to conduct a study, beginning within 90 days of enactment, in consultation with the Secretaries of Defense and Health and Human Services, to evaluate the effect of section 8004 of OBRA (described above) on formerly remarried surviving spouses denied survivors' benefits because of that provision. The Secretary would be required to survey a representative sample of those affected by the OBRA provision and report the results of the study to Committees on Veterans' Affairs by September 1, 1993.

Senate amendment: Section 3 would require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to establish a "Commission on the Study of Survivor Benefits," comprised of three independent experts, and representatives of VA, the Department of Defense, a veterans service organization, and an organization representing surviving spouses. The Commission would be required to determine the most appropriate combination of survivors' benefits and report to the Secretary on its recommendations. The Commission would be required to base its findings on data to be provided by the National Academy of Sciences (or another entity) in a study conducted under contract with VA. NAS (or another entity) would be required to submit its report to the Commission by October 1, 1993. The Commission would be required to report to the Secretary by December 1, 1993, and the Secretary would be required to report to the Committees by March 1, 1994.

Compromise agreement: Section 104 follows the Senate provision, except that the Comptroller General of the United States (as head of the General Accounting Office) would perform the functions of the National Academy of Sciences and the independent commission. The Comptroller General would be required to conduct the study and make the recommendations for legislation, if appropriate, that would have been required by the Senate amendment. The Comptroller General would be required to submit a report on the study to the Committees by April 1, 1994.

TITLE II—LIFE INSURANCE PROGRAMS

SERVICEMEN'S GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

Current law: Subchapter III of chapter 19 of title 38, United States Code, provides for the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) program. Under subchapter III, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs is authorized to purchase from commercial life insurance companies a policy or policies of group life insurance to insure against death any active duty servicemember and certain members of the Ready Reserve and Retired Reserve. Eligible servicemembers and reservists who do not decline coverage automatically are provided $100,000 of SGLI coverage and the monthly premiums are deducted from their basic pay. Servicemembers may elect coverage of less than $100,000 or not to participate in the program.

SGLI coverage is provided free of charge for 120 days following separation from active duty.

House bill: Section 202 would permit servicemembers and Reservists to purchase additional amounts of SGLI up to an additional $100,000, thereby increasing from $100,000 to $200,000 the maximum amount of SGLI, which eligible servicemembers and Reservists could purchase in $10,000 increments.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 201 follows the House provision, except that, under section 205, it would be effective December 1, 1992.

VETERANS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

Current law: Subchapter III of chapter 19 of title provides for the Veterans' Group Life Insurance (VGLI) program. Under subchapter III, veterans who participated in the SGLI program (described above) may participate in the VGLI program after separation from active duty.

VGLI provides five-year term group life insurance of up to $100,000. A veteran may not obtain more insurance under VGLI than the veteran had under the SGLI program. At the end of the five-year term, the veteran has the right to obtain an individual life insurance policy at a standard rate from any company participating in the VGLI program.

House bill: Section 202 would (a) increase from $100,000 to $200,000 the maximum amount of VGLI available to eligible veterans, and (b) provide that coverage under VGLI shall be on a renewable, five-year term basis.

Senate amendment: No provision.

SUPPLEMENTAL SERVICE DISABLED VETERANS' INSURANCE FOR TOTALLY DISABLED VETERANS

Current law: Section 1922(a) of title 38 requires VA to provide $10,000 in life insurance at standard rates to any veteran released from active duty after April 24, 1951, who is suffering from a service-connected disability rated at least 10-percent disabling that renders the veteran uninsurable according to the standards of good health established by the Secretary. The veterans must apply for the policy within two years after VA determines the service-connection of such disability.

Section 1912(a) of title 38 provides that, upon application by the veteran, and under regulations promulgated by the Secretary, the Secretary may waive premiums payments on the insurance if the insured continuously is rated totally disabled for six or more consecutive months and that disability began (1) after the date of the insured's application for insurance, (2) while the insurance was in force under premium-paying conditions, and (3) before the insured's sixty-fifth birthday.

House bill: Section 201 would provide supplemental SDVI coverage, at standard premiums, of up to $10,000, to veterans eligible for a waiver of premiums due to total disability.

Senate amendment: Section 4 is substantively identical to the House provision, except it would provide supplemental coverage of $20,000 and would specify that a veteran not currently eligible for waiver of premiums of SDVI must apply for the additional coverage within one year after either the end of the first full month following enactment or the date VA notifies the veteran that the veteran is eligible for a waiver of premiums, whichever is later.

Compromise agreement: Section 203 follows the Senate provision, except that, under section 205, it would be effective December 1, 1992.

INCREASE IN AMOUNT OF VETERANS' MORTGAGE LIFE INSURANCE

Current law: Under section 2106 of title 38, VA automatically provides $40,000 of Veterans' Mortgage Life Insurance (VMLI) to veterans who qualify for a specially adapted housing grant under chapter 21 of title 38.

House bill: Section 202 would increase the maximum amount of VMLI available under section 2106 of title 38 from $40,000 to $90,000.

Senate amendment: Section 5 is substantively identical to the House provision, except that it includes a technical correction to the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 21.

Compromise agreement: Section 204 follows the Senate provision, except that, under section 205, it would be effective December 1, 1992.

TITLE III—EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

INCREASE IN AMOUNT OF MONTGOMERY GI BILL BASIC EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current law: Section 3015(f) of title 38, United States Code, temporarily establishes the current amounts of educational assistance under the Montgomery GI Bill (MGIB) program for full-time study at $350 per month for active-duty participants whose initial obligated period is three years or more and at $275 per month for those whose initial obligated period of active duty is two years. Section 2131(b)(2) of title 10 establishes the full-time-study benefit at $170 per month for participants in the Selected Reserve program. In all cases, proportionally reduced amounts are provided for part-time study. For FY 1994, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs is authorized to (a) continue these rates, (b) continue these rates and provide for a cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) increase, or (c) allow the monthly rates to revert to the original payment rates of $300 per month for full-time active-duty participants, $250 per month for those who are obligated for two years, and $140 per month for full-time participants in the Selected Reserve program. With respect to any fiscal year after FY 1994, the Secretary is authorized to (a) continue to pay the monthly rates that are paid during the previous fiscal year, (b) provide a COLA in those rates, or (c) allow the monthly rates to revert to the original payment rates.

House bill: Section 301 of H.R. 5008 would, effective April 1, 1993, increase the monthly full-time-study benefits to (1) $400 for those serving on active duty for three years or more, and (2) $325 for those serving two years on active duty, and (3) to $190 for reservists. Part-time-study rates would be increased proportionately. Beginning in fiscal year 1994, future increases would be indexed to changes in the Consumer Price Index. This section would repeal the Secretary of Veterans Affairs' authority, under section 3015(f), to modify the educational assistance rates and index future increases to changes in the Consumer Price Index.

Senate amendment: Section 101 is substantively identical to the House bill, but effective September 1, 1993.

Compromise agreement: Section 301 follows the House bill.

MONTGOMERY GI BILL ENTITLEMENT DATES

Current law: Sections 3011 and 3012 of title 38 provide that an individual who on December 31, 1989, was eligible for benefits under the Vietnam-era GI Bill is eligible to convert to the MGIB if the individual was on active duty October 19, 1984, had no break in service after that date, and served three years of continuous active duty after June 30, 1985.

House bill: Section 8 of H.R. 5087 would, effective October 28, 1986, restore MGIB eligibility for an individual who, due to interrupted service, was not on active duty on October 19, 1984, but who had active-duty service sometime during the period beginning on October 19, 1984, and ending on July 1, 1985, and continued on active duty without a break for the period required to establish entitlement under MGIB.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 302 follows the House bill.

EXTENSION OF PERIOD FOR COMPLETING REQUIREMENTS FOR SECONDARY SCHOOL DIPLOMA

Current law: Sections 3011(a)(2) and 3012(a)(2) of title 38 require, as a condition of eligibility under the MGIB active-duty program, that the individual complete the requirements of a secondary school diploma (or equivalency certificate) before leaving active duty.

House bill: Section 1 of H.R. 5087 would allow an individual who was on active duty on August 2, 1990, and who does not complete the requirements of a secondary school diploma (or equivalency certificate) before leaving active duty to do so within 12 months after the date of enactment of this measure.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 303 follows the House bill with an amendment extending to 24 months after leaving active duty the time within which the individual must complete the requirements of a secondary school diploma (or equivalent certificate).

TREATMENT OF CERTAIN ACTIVE-DUTY SERVICE TOWARD ELIGIBILITY FOR EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current law: Under chapter 30 of title 38, eligible servicemembers generally can earn 36 months of MGIB benefits if they undergo prescribed basic pay reductions of $100 per month for 12 months at the outset of their initial obligated period of active duty. Servicemembers who are discharged or released due to hardship, disability, or reduction-in-force prior to the completion of 12 months of payroll deductions are eligible to receive only one month of educational assistance for each month of continuous service following their initial entry into active duty. If such an individual re-enters active duty, he or she is not eligible to re-enter the MGIB program in order to obtain full benefits by resuming his or her payroll deductions.

House bill: Section 2 of H.R. 5087 would provide that any initial period of active duty beginning after June 30, 1985, would not be considered as an individual's obligated period of active duty for purposes of the MGIB if (a) that period is one year or less in length, (b) the individual is discharged or released by reason of disability, hardship, or reduction-in-force, and (c) the individual subsequently completes a period of active duty that is at least one month longer in duration than the previous active-duty period and would have established MGIB entitlement if he or she had not served the earlier period. Upon reentry on active duty, the individual would establish entitlement to the MGIB by undergoing the 12 months of basic pay reductions, but would be credited with basic-pay reductions made during the previous period of active duty.

Senate amendment: Section 103 would provide that, for MGIB purposes, a servicemember who, after a period of continuous active duty of not more than 12 months, is discharged or released from active duty by reason of disability, hardship, or reduction-in-force, and then reenlists or re-enters on active duty, would be deemed to have served a continuous period of active duty equal in length to the total of those two periods of active duty. The provision would take effect as if enacted on June 30, 1985, and apply to payment of assistance for education and training pursued on or after October 1, 1993.

TREATMENT OF CERTAIN ASSIGNMENTS OF INDIVIDUALS FOR PURPOSES OF ELIGIBILITY UNDER MONTGOMERY GI BILL PROGRAM

Current law: Section 3011 of title 38 requires as a condition of MGIB eligibility that a servicemember serve an initial obligated period of active duty of at least three years of continuous active duty or, in the case of an individual whose initial period of obligated active duty is less than three years, at least two years of continuous active duty. A break in the initial period of service disqualifies a participant from receiving the full amount of educational assistance. The term "active duty," as defined in section 3002(6)(A) of title 38, excludes any period during which a servicemember was assigned full time by the Armed Forces to a civilian institution for a course of education. Therefore, if a servicemember, whose pay has been reduced for MGIB purposes but who has served less than the required period of initial active-duty service accepts full-time civilian-study assignment as part of his or her active-duty service, he or she incurs a break in active-duty service for MGIB purposes and thus becomes ineligible for MGIB benefits.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 104 would repeal the provision that requires an assignment to a civilian educational institution to be considered a break in active-duty service.

Compromise agreement: Section 305 follows the Senate amendment.

TREATMENT OF PURSUIT OF EDUCATION AT SERVICE ACADEMIES AND CERTAIN EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS FOR PURPOSES OF ELIGIBILITY UNDER MONTGOMERY GI BILL PROGRAM

Current law: Under section 3011(a)(1)(A) of title 38, MGIB eligibility criteria include a requirement that (a) the individual serve as his or her initial obligated period of active duty at least three years of continuous active duty—or, in the case of an individual whose initial period of active duty is less than three years, that the period of continuous active duty be at least two years—or (b) the individual be discharged or released for a disability, hardship, or reduction-in-force. Section 3002(6)(B) of title 38 defines "active duty" as not including any period during which an individual served as a cadet or midshipman at one of the service academies.

Currently, a servicemember participating in the MGIB can lose MGIB eligibility if he or she leaves active duty during his or her initial period of service to pursue a course of education at a service academy or a service-academy preparatory school before completing the period of continuous service mandated for MGIB eligibility, fails to complete the course of education at the academy or preparatory school, and is required to re-enter active duty. Such an individual would be (1) not entitled to MGIB educational assistance because the statutory period of continuous service was interrupted before being satisfactorily completed, and (2) not eligible to re-enter the MGIB program because the period of active duty marked by the re-entry was not the individual's initial period.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 105 would amend section 3011 to provide that MGIB participants who enroll in a service academy or a service-academy preparatory school during their initial period of active-duty service, drop out of the academy or school, and re-enter active duty would be able to merge their second active-duty period with their initial period so that the aggregate length of the two periods would be considered one continuous period of service. This provision would take effect as if enacted on June 30, 1985, and would apply to the payment of educational assistance for education or training pursued on or after October 1, 1993.

Compromise agreement: Section 306 follows the Senate amendment.

EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE FOR CERTAIN PERSONS WHOSE INITIAL PERIOD OF OBLIGATED SERVICE WAS LESS THAN THREE YEARS

Current law: Section 3015 of title 38 provides that MGIB participants who serve at least three years of continuous active duty as their initial obligated period of active duty are entitled to educational assistance at a rate higher than is paid to those whose initial obligated period of active duty is two years. If a servicemember whose initial obligated period of active duty is two years reenlists without a break in service for an additional year or more, he or she is currently denied the full educational benefits offered to servicemembers whose initial obligated period of active duty is for three or more continuous years.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 105 would amend section 3015 to grant full MGIB benefits to participants who serve their initial obligated period of two years and continue on active duty for an additional year or more without a break in service. The amendment to section 3015 would take effect as if enacted on June 30, 1985, and apply to the payment of educational assistance for education or training pursued on or after September 1, 1993.

Compromise agreement: Section 307 follows the Senate amendment.

DEATH BENEFIT

Current law: Section 3017 of title 38 provides for the payment of a death benefit to the survivors of an MGIB participant who dies of a service-connected cause on active duty. The death benefit is equal to the amount by which the participant's pay was reduced for purposes of MGIB participation minus the total of the amount of educational assistance that was paid to the individual.

House bill: Section 7 of H.R. 5087 would extend eligibility for the death benefit to the survivors of those who die of service-connected causes within one year of discharge from active duty.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 308 follows the House bill.

CLARIFICATION OF OPPORTUNITY TO WITHDRAW ELECTION NOT TO ENROLL IN MONTGOMERY GI BILL PROGRAM

Current law: Section 3011(c)(1) of title 38 provides that a servicemember who, at the time he or she initially enters on active duty, makes an election not to receive educational assistance under the MGIB is not entitled to MGIB benefits. As an exception to that rule, section 3018 of title 38 established the period between December 1, 1988, and June 30, 1989, as an "open period" during which certain servicemembers had the opportunity to withdraw an election not to receive educational assistance under the MGIB program and thereby become participants in the program. However, the general exception to MGIB length-of-service requirements for those who are separated early from service due to a physical or mental condition that is not characterized as a disability and did not result from the person's own willful misconduct but did interfere with the person's performance of duty does not currently apply to section 3018.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 107 would apply to individuals who enrolled in the MGIB during the "open period" the exception of length-of-service requirements for those who are separated early from the service for physical or mental conditions not characterized as disabilities.

Compromise agreement: Section 309 follows the Senate amendment.

USE OF EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE FOR SOLO FLIGHT TRAINING

Current law: Sections 3034(d) and 3241(b) of title 38 and section 2136(c) of title 10 provide that veterans participating in the MGIB or Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Educational Assistance programs may use VA benefits for flight training during fiscal year 1991 through 1994 if (1) the training is generally accepted as necessary for the attainment of a recognized vocational objective in the field of aviation; (2) the individual possesses a valid private pilot's license and meets the medical requirements necessary for a commercial license; and (3) the flight school courses meet Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) standards and are approved by the State approving agency.

Sections 3032(f) and 3231(f) of title 38 and section 2131(g) of title 10 provide that the educational assistance allowance is to be paid in an amount equal to 60 percent of the established charges for tuition and fees. Tuition and fees for solo flying hours are specifically excluded.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 109 would, for the remainder of the current temporary program under which veterans may use VA educational assistance for flight training, authorize the use of benefits for solo flying hours. The number of solo hours for which benefits could be used would be limited to the minimum required by the Federal Aviation Administration for the rating or certification being sought.

Compromise agreement: Section 310 follows the Senate amendment, but with an effective date of October 1, 1992.

LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF ADVANCE PAYMENT OF WORK-STUDY ALLOWANCE

Current law: Section 3485(a)(1) of title 38 requires that 40 percent of the total amount agreed to be paid to a work-study participant under a work-study contract must be paid in advance of the performance of any service. The remaining allowance is paid after services are performed.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 110 would limit advance payments by VA to work-study participants to payments for the first 50 hours of each work-study contract.

Compromise agreement: Section 311 follows the Senate amendment.

REVISION OF REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO APPROVAL OF ACCREDITED COURSES

Current law: Section 3675 of title 38 requires an educational institution that desires its courses to be approved for VA benefits purposes to submit an application for approval of the courses to the appropriate State approving agency (SAA). In making application for approval, the institution must transmit to the SAA copies of its catalog or bulletin. Elementary and secondary schools frequently do not publish catalogs and, as a result, their courses are denied SAA approval. Additionally, sections 3474 and 3524 of title 38 require that educational benefits be terminated for any recipient who fails to comply with any attendance standards that his or her school applies. However, section 3675 of title 38 does not require schools that have and enforce standards of attendance to include these standards in their applications for course approval.

No provisions of current law deal specifically with the use of MGIB benefits for nurses' aide training. VA Regulations for Vocational Rehabilitation and Education state, "[E]nrollment in an institutional course for the objective of nurse's aide . . . . will not be authorized" (38 CFR 21.4265(b)(3)).

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 111(a) would modify the requirements for the approval of an accredited school by an SAA by (a) repealing the requirement that an elementary or secondary school furnish a copy of a catalog in applying for approval of an accredited course, and (b) adding a requirement that other institutions that have and enforce standards of attendance include these standards in each catalog or bulletin that they submit to the SAA.

Section 111(b) would amend section 3675(a)(1) of title 38 to allow a State approving agency to approve a nurses' aide course for MGIB purposes when it is approved by the State as meeting the requirements of regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under sections 1819(f)(2)(A)(i) and 1919(f)(2)(A)(i) of the Social Security Act (title 42, United States Code, sections 1395i-3(f)(2)(A)(i) and 1396r(f)(2)(A)(i)).

Compromise agreement: Section 312 follows the Senate amendment.

DISAPPROVAL OF NONACCREDITED INDEPENDENT STUDY

Current law: Section 3676 of title 38 provides that educational assistance may be granted to a veteran for enrollment in nonaccredited courses, including independent study, if certain conditions specified in that section are met.

House bill: Section 5 of H.R. 5087 would limit approval of independent study to courses that are part of an accredited degree program.

Senate amendment: Section 112 is substantively identical to the House bill.

TREATMENT OF ADVANCE PAYMENTS OF CERTAIN ASSISTANCE TO VETERANS WHO DIE

Current law: Section 3680(e) of title 38 provides that, when a veteran or eligible person entitled to educational benefits dies, benefits are discontinued effective the last day of attendance. Thus, any advance payment made toward a student's education covering a time period after the death of the student is considered an overpayment by VA and constitutes a liability to the student's estate.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 113 would make inapplicable the requirement in section 3680(e) for the recovery of advance payments for a course of education where the failure to enroll in or pursue a course is due to the individual's death.

Compromise agreement: Section 314 follows the Senate amendment.

BAR OF ASSISTANCE FOR PERSONS WHOSE EDUCATION IS PAID FOR AS FEDERAL EMPLOYEE TRAINING

Current law: Section 3681(a)(2) of title 38 generally prohibits payment of VA educational benefits to an individual for a course of education or training paid for under the Government Employees Training Act (GETA) and whose full salary is being paid while so training. A November 26, 1991, VA General Counsel opinion (O.G.C. Precedent 72-91) construed section 3681(a)(2) as permitting payment of VA educational assistance to a veteran or other eligible person training under the GETA if the training were received during periods of the day other than those for which the person's salary is paid.

House bill: Section 4 of H.R. 5087 would clarify that payment of VA education benefits may not be made to an individual for pursuit of a course of education that is paid for by the Government under the GETA.

Senate amendment: Section 114 is substantively identical to the House bill.

REVISION IN MEASUREMENT OF COURSES

Current law: Section 3688 of title 38 establishes a complex system of measuring and valuing courses of education for the purpose of benefit payments. Some programs provide for five different payment levels. For nondegree training at a vocational school, there is a distinction between accredited and nonaccredited facilities and between shop practice and classroom training. Maximum rest periods and supervised study periods are defined. Nondegree training at colleges is measured in three different ways—credit-hour measurement, clock-hour measurement, and a combination of credit hours and clock hours, known as "mixed" measurement. There is a distinction between courses taken in residence and courses taken by independent study or open circuit television. Some courses are considered to be a combination of resident training and independent study. Payment for independent study and open circuit television courses are reduced in some instances. For some participants, the rate of payment can change each week because of changes in the student's scheduled classroom training.

House bill: Section 6 of H.R. 5087 would (a) eliminate the benefit differential for accredited and non-accredited noncollege-degree courses; (b) base benefit payments for concurrent pursuit of graduate and undergraduate training on the training time certified by the school rather than on the conversion computations in current law; (c) make uniform the measurement of refresher courses and part-time training under the MGIB, Post-Vietnam Era Educational Assistance program, and the survivors' and dependents' educational assistance program; and (d) delete statutory measurement requirements in section 3688 of title 38 so as to (1) eliminate the benefit differential for independent study and other nontraditional types of training in accredited undergraduate degree programs that have been approved by SAAs, and (2) eliminate the standard class-session criterion.

Senate amendment: Section 114 is substantively identical to the House bill, but contains an effective date of September 1, 1993.

Compromise agreement: Section 316 follows the House bill, but with an effective date of July 1, 1993.

CLARIFICATION OF PERMITTED CHANGES IN PROGRAMS OF EDUCATION

Current law: Section 3691 of title 38 generally allows a veteran or other eligible person receiving VA-administered educational assistance one change of program of education without seeking the Secretary's approval. The Secretary generally may approve additional changes if the Secretary finds that the proposed program is suitable to the person's aptitudes, interests, and abilities. However, if the student's interruption or failure to make progress in an education program was due to the person's own misconduct or neglect, or lack of application, a change is not permitted unless the Secretary finds that a reasonable likelihood exists that there will not be a recurrence of such an interruption or failure of progress. The Secretary may also approve additional changes if the Secretary finds that they are necessitated by circumstances beyond the person's control.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 116 would provide that the limitations on changes of program by students using VA educational assistance do not apply to (a) a student beginning a new program of education after successfully completing another program, (b) a student not changing his or her vocational objective, and (c) a student transferring back to a former program without loss of credit for that program.

Compromise agreement: Section 317 follows the Senate amendment.

AUTHORITY OF MEMBERS OF SELECTED RESERVE TO RECEIVE TUTORIAL ASSISTANCE

Current law: Currently, members of the Selected Reserve who are eligible for MGIB educational assistance under chapter 106 of title 10 are not entitled to receive individualized tutorial assistance as are participants in the MGIB who serve on active duty (under chapter 30 of title 38) and survivors and dependents who receive educational assistance under chapter 35 of title 38.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 117 would provide that members of the Selected Reserve participating in the MGIB could receive—as do other MGIB participants and eligible survivors and dependents—a tutorial assistance allowance of up to $100 per month for a maximum of 12 months, or until a maximum of $1,200 is utilized. The criteria and restrictions relating to this benefit would be the same as those applied to the tutorial benefits now available to other MGIB participants and to survivors and dependents.

Compromise agreement: Section 318 follows the Senate amendment.

REQUIREMENT OF ATTENDANCE CERTIFICATION IN APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM UNDER THE MONTGOMERY GI BILL SELECTED RESERVE PROGRAM

Current law: Section 2131(d)(2) of title 10, United States Code, requires a reduction in a reservist's payments under the MGIB Selected Reserve program in any month in which he or she, while pursuing a program of apprenticeship or other on-the-job training, fails to complete 120 hours of training. Section 2136(b) of title 10, in listing title 38 provisions that do not apply to the administration of the MGIB Selected Reserve program, specifically precludes VA from exercising its authority under section 3680(c) of title 38 to require a certification of attendance of a program of apprenticeship or other on-job training from either the student or training establishment.

House bill: Section 4 of H.R. 5087 would amend section 2136(b) to delete the exception of section 3680(c) and thereby provide VA with administrative authority to withhold the training assistance allowance of an individual pursuing a program of apprenticeship or other on-job training until VA has received a certification of attendance from the person and the training establishment.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 319 follows the House bill.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

Current law: Chapter 106 of title 10, United States Code, authorizes the use of the MGIB program by members of the Selected Reserve and makes numerous references to the program as set forth in title 38. Public Law 102–40, enacted May 7, 1991, and Public Law 102–83, enacted August 6, 1991, changed section numbers in title 38, and thus made the title 38 references in title 10 inaccurate.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 118 would update title 10 references to title 38 to match the current section numbers.

Compromise agreement: Section 320 follows the Senate amendment.

PERMANENT AUTHORITY FOR PROGRAM OF VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION FOR CERTAIN SERVICE-DISABLED VETERANS

Current law: Section 1163 of title 38, United States Code, provides a temporary program for trial-work periods and vocational rehabilitation services to service-disabled veterans. Under section 1163, a veteran who has a service-connected disability not rated as total but who has been awarded a rating of total disability by reason of an individual determination that he or she is unable to secure or follow a substantially gainful occupation as a result of that disability—an individual unemployability (IU) rating—and who starts a substantially gainful occupation before December 31, 1992, may not have his or her disability rating reduced on the basis of having obtained and continued the employment unless he or she maintains that employment for 12 consecutive months.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 201 would make permanent the program of 12-month trial-work periods and vocational rehabilitation services for veterans who have total service-connected disability ratings based on an IU rating.

Compromise agreement: Section 401 follows the Senate amendment.

EXTENSION OF PROGRAM OF VOCATIONAL TRAINING FOR CERTAIN PENSION RECIPIENTS

Current law: Section 1524 provides for a temporary vocational training program—until December 31, 1992—for not more than 3,500 veterans during any 12-month period who are pension recipients.

A veteran under the age of 45 who is awarded a pension during the program period must be evaluated with respect to his or her potential for rehabilitation. The evaluation must include a personal interview by a VA employee trained in vocational counseling. If the veteran refuses to participate in the evaluation, the veteran's pension is suspended until the veteran participates in an evaluation. Participation in the vocational training itself is voluntary.

For a veteran pension recipient who is 45 years of age or older, the program of vocational training is totally voluntary. If such a veteran-pensioner applies to participate and VA makes a preliminary finding on the basis of information in the application that, with the assistance of a vocational training program, the veteran has a good potential for achieving employment, VA may, upon the veteran's request, evaluate the veteran to further determine whether the achievement of a vocational goal is reasonably feasible.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 202 would amend section 1524(a) to (1) make the program permanent; (2) make the program totally voluntary for all pension recipients, regardless of age; (3) eliminate the limitation on the number of program participants who may be evaluated annually; (4) expressly provide that the Secretary may determine what training is necessary for a VA employee to be able to conduct personal interviews of veterans under this program; and (5) authorize VA not to conduct an evaluation if the Secretary determines that it is not feasible or is not necessary in order to determine whether the achievement of a vocational goal is reasonably feasible.

Compromise agreement: Section 402 would (1) extend the temporary vocational training program through December 31, 1995; (2) eliminate the limitation on the number of program participants who may be evaluated annually; and (3) amend the program for veterans under age 45 who are awarded pension during the program period so as to (A) require the Secretary, based on information on file with VA, to make a preliminary finding whether the veteran, with the assistance of a VA vocational training program, has a good potential for achieving employment, (B) if that potential is found to exist, require the Secretary to solicit from the veteran an application for VA vocational training, and (C) if the veteran applies for training, require the Secretary to provide an evaluation to determine whether the achievement of a vocational goal is reasonably feasible.

PERMANENT AUTHORITY FOR PROTECTION OF HEALTH-CARE ELIGIBILITY FOR CERTAIN PENSION RECIPIENTS

Current law: Section 1525 of title 38 provides a veteran with protection of his or her VA health-care eligibility for a period of three years following the termination of pension benefits due to "income from work or training"—that is, as a result of the veteran's receipt of earnings from activity performed for renumeration or with gain, but only if the veteran's annual income from sources other than such earnings would, taken alone, not result in the termination of the veteran's pension. Under current law, these provisions are scheduled to expire on December 31, 1992.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 203 would make this health-care eligibility protection permanent.

Compromise agreement: Section 403 follows the Senate amendment.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION FOR CERTAIN SERVICE-DISABLED VETERANS WITH SERIOUS EMPLOYMENT HANDICAPS

Current law: Section 3102 of title 38 provides vocational-rehabilitation entitlement under chapter 31 of title 38 to a veteran who has a service-connected disability that is compensable at a rate of 20 percent or more and is determined by the Secretary to be in need of rehabilitation because of an employment handicap. The current eligibility requirement of a rating of 20 percent or more was established by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (OBRA 90), enacted November 1, 1990. Prior to OBRA 90, the requirement was for at least a 10-percent rating.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 204 would restore entitlement to vocational rehabilitation, effective October 1, 1993, to a veteran who has a service-connected disability that is compensable at a rate of 10 percent if he or she also has a serious employment handicap.

Compromise agreement: Section 404 follows the Senate amendment.

INCREASE IN SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE FOR VETERANS PARTICIPATING IN A REHABILITATION PROGRAM

Current law: Section 3108 of title 38 provides for a subsistence allowance for veterans pursuing rehabilitation under the chapter 31 program of rehabilitation for veterans with service-connected disabilities.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 205 would, effective October 1, 1993, increase the subsistence-allowance rates by 10 percent and index future increases to changes in the Consumer Price Index.

Compromise agreement: Section 405 follows the Senate amendment.

IMPROVEMENT OF DISABLED VETERANS' OUTREACH PROGRAM

Current law: Section 4103A(a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, provides for the appointment in each State of one disabled veterans' outreach program (DVOP) specialist for each 5,300 veterans of the Vietnam era and disabled veterans residing in the State. According to the Department of Labor (DoL), application of the current formula results in 1,885 DVOP-specialist positions. Although Vietnam-era and disabled veterans are the population cohorts for the present DVOP staffing formula, DVOP employment assistance is available to all eligible veterans.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 301 would expand the statutory formula for the appointment of DVOP specialists to provide for one specialist for each 6,900 veterans residing in a State who are either Vietnam-era veterans, veterans with service-connected disabilities, or veterans who first entered on active duty after the end of the Vietnam ear (May 7, 1975).

Compromise agreement: Section 501 follows the Senate amendment.

The Committees note that in FY 1993 the change in the formula would add 21 additional DVOP-specialist positions to the 1,885 positions now determined by DoL to be derived from the current statutory formula. The Committees believe the additional staffing is necessary for implementation of the transition assistance program under section 1144 of title 10.

REPEAL OF DELIMITING DATE RELATING TO TREATMENT OF VETERANS OF THE VIETNAM ERA FOR DISABLED VETERANS' OUTREACH PROGRAM PURPOSES

Current law: Section 4211(2)(B) of title 38 provides that, after December 31, 1994, no veteran may be considered to be a "veteran of the Vietnam era" for purposes of various employment and training programs in chapter 41 and 42 of title 38 except for the veterans readjustment appointment authority in section 4214. Veterans of the Vietnam era are the major population cohort used in the calculation of disabled veterans' outreach program (DVOP) positions under section 4103A(a)(1). Under the current formula, the elimination of this cohort after December 31, 1994, would cause the number of mandatory DVOP positions to drop from 1,885 to 433.

House bill: Section 5 of H.R. 4342 would extend the definition of Vietnam-era veterans for one year to December 31, 1995, for purposes of various veterans' employment and training programs under chapters 41 and 42 of title 38.

Senate amendment: Section 302 would make permanent the consideration of a veteran of the Vietnam era under chapters 41 and 42 of title 38 by repealing the expiration date of December 31, 1994, for that consideration.

Compromise agreement: Section 502 follows the Senate amendment.

DISABLED VETERANS' OUTREACH PROGRAM PRIORITIES

Current law: Section 4103A(b)(1) of title 38 specifies that DVOP specialists shall be assigned only those duties directly related to meeting the employment needs of eligible veterans, with first priority being the provision of services to disabled veterans of the Vietnam era who are participating in or have completed a program of vocational rehabilitation under chapter 31, followed by services to other disabled veterans and then services to other eligible veterans.

House bill: Section 2 of H.R. 4342 would amend section 4103A(b)(1)(A) by expanding the first item in the priority listing of DVOP responsibilities to include veterans who served during the Persian Gulf War.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 503 amends section 4103A(b)(1)(A) to establish as the first priority for DVOP specialists services to "special disabled veterans" as defined in section 4211(1) of title 38 to include those who (a) have service-connected disabilities that are rated at either 30 percent or more or, in the case of those who have been determined to have a service-employment handicap for purposes of chapter 31, at 10 or 20 percent, or (b) were discharged or released from activity duty because of a service-connected disability.

The Committees recognize the importance of a close relationship between DVOP specialists and local VA staff administering the training and rehabilitation program for veterans with service-connected disabilities under chapter 31 of title 38. By this amendment, the Committees do not in any way intend to dilute this relationship so important to the furnishing of effective employment services to those service-disabled veterans who have participated in a VA vocational rehabilitation program.

REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT THAT TO BE REPRESENTED ON ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON VETERANS EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

A veterans organization must have a federal charter

Current law: Section 4110(c)(a)(A) of title 38 requires that to be represented on the Advisory Committee on Veterans Employment and Training a veterans organization must have a Federal charter. However, the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee has adopted a policy of not reporting legislation granting such charters.

House bill: Section 6 of H.R. 4342 would modify section 4110(c)(a)(A) of title 38 by striking the requirement that veterans organizations represented on the Advisory Committee on Veterans Employment and Training be chartered.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 504 follows the House bill.

EXPANSION AND EXTENSION OF VETERANS' READJUSTMENT APPOINTMENTS WITH THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Current law: Section 4214 of title 38 establishes a program of veterans' readjustment appointment (VRA) under which certain veterans are eligible for limited non-competitive appointments that can lead to career civil service status in the Federal government.

Section 4214(b)(2) provides VRA eligibility to (a) Vietnam-era veterans who (1) are entitled to VA disability compensation or who were discharged or released from active duty for a disability incurred or aggravated in line of duty, or (2) received a campaign badge for service in a combat theater of operations; and (b) post-Vietnam-era veterans, that is, those who entered active duty after May 7, 1975. A Vietnam-era veteran with eligibility based on a service-connected disability rated at less than 30 percent or receipt of a campaign badge has VRA eligibility for 10 years after the date of his or her last discharge or release from active duty, or December 31, 1993, whichever is later. A post-Vietnam-era veteran generally has VRA eligibility within the 10-year period following the later of the date of his or her last discharge or release from active duty, or December 18, 1989 (the effective date of Public Law 101-237, the law that initially gave post-Vietnam-era veterans VRA eligibility). There is no time limitation on the VRA eligibility for a veteran who has a service-connected disability rated at 30 percent or more.

Under Public Law 101-237, since January 1, 1990, Vietnam-era veterans who are not service disabled nor authorized a campaign badge have not been eligible for a VRA appointment.

House bill: Section 1 of H.R. 4342 would amend section 4214(b)(2)(A) to restore VRA eligibility for all veterans of the Vietnam era.

Section 3 of H.R. 4342 would provide that all Vietnam-era veterans qualifying for the VRA program would be eligible for appointments through December 31, 1999, or 10 years after the veteran's date of last discharge or release from active duty, whichever is later.

Senate amendment: Section 303 would restore VRA eligibility for veterans of the Vietnam era who are not otherwise eligible and who were discharged or released from active duty after December 31, 1979 (the date being 10 years prior to the December 31, 1989, expiration of previous eligibility), under conditions other than dishonorable. Such veterans would be eligible to receive such a VRA appointment during the period ending 10 years after the date of their last discharge or release from active duty, or December 31, 1993, whichever is later.

Compromise agreement: Section 505 follows the House bill, except that Vietnam-era veterans would be eligible for appointments through December 31, 1995 (rather than 1990), or 10 years after the veteran's date of discharge, whichever is later.

REDESIGNATION OF SECTIONS OF CHAPTER 43

Current law: Public Law 102-40, enacted May 7, 1991, and Public Law 102-83 enacted August 6, 1991, renumbered the sections of title 38, United States Code, in order to reflect the chapters in which the sections appear. Prior to the enactment of these laws, Congress was in the process of rewriting chapter 43 of title 38 which provides veterans' reemployment rights; consequently, the sections of chapter 43 were not renumbered in Public Laws 102-40 and 102-83.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: S. 1095 as reported by the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs would revise chapter 43 of title 38, including changing the section numbers to conform with the change made by Public Laws 102-40 and 102-83.

Compromise agreement: Section 506 would renumber the sections of chapter 43 to conform with the renumbering scheme required in Public Laws 102-40 and 102-83.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR CERTAIN EMPLOYMENT, JOB TRAINING, AND OTHER ASSISTANCE

Current law: Section 1144 of title 10 requires the Department of Labor, in conjunction with VA and the Department of Defense, to establish and maintain a transition assistance program (TAP) to furnish counseling, assistance in identifying employment and training opportunities, help in obtaining employment and training, and other related information and services to members of the Armed Forces who are being separated from active duty and their spouses. The services are to be provided to a member during the 180-day period before separating from active duty. Subsection (e) of section 1144 authorizes DoL appropriations of $9 million for each of fiscal years 1992 and 1993, and VA appropriations of $4 million for each of those years.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 303 would authorize an increase in the FY 1993 appropriation for TAP and would extend the authorization for the TAP appropriation by two years—through FY 1995—at the following levels: $11 million for FY 1993 and $8 million for each of FYs 1994 and 1995 for the DoL, and $6.5 million for each of FYs 1993-1995 for VA.

Compromise agreement: No provision.

The Committee note that similar provisions are included in section 4470 of the conference report (H. Rept. No. 102-966) on H.R. 5006, the National Defense Authorization Act for FY 1993.

TITLE VI—OTHER VETERANS' PROGRAMS

EXTENSION OF LIMITATION ON PENSION FOR VETERANS RECEIVING MEDICAID-COVERED NURSING HOME CARE; APPLICABILITY TO SURVIVING SPOUSES; AND FACILITY EXPENSES

Current law: Section 5503(f) of title 38, United States Code, which expires on September 30, 1992, limits to $90 a month the maximum amount of VA needs-based pension payable to Medicaid-eligible veterans who are in nursing homes that participate in Medicaid and who have no dependents. Section 5502(f)(3) of title 38 protects this $90 monthly VA pension payment from State Medicaid rules limiting the medicaid-nursing-home beneficiary's personal allowance to less than $90 per month.

Section 5503(a)(1)(B) of title 38 reduces to $90 the maximum monthly pension payable to certain veterans being furnished nursing home care by VA. The reduction takes effect after the end of the third full calendar month following the month of admission.

House bill: Section 302 would extend the expiration date of section 5503(f) by five years, from September 30, 1992, to September 30, 1997, and, effective October 1, 1992, would expand that provision to cover veterans' Medicaid-eligible survivors receiving VA pension who are in nursing homes that participate in Medicaid and who have no dependents.

Senate amendment: Section 6 is substantively identical to the House provision, except it would take effect on July 1, 1992, and would repeal the expiration date of section 5503(f).

Compromise agreement: Section 601 follows the House provision and would require, during the period from November 1, 1992, through September 30, 1997, that the amount of the reduction, under section 5503(a)(1)(B) of title 38, in pension paid to a veteran receiving nursing home care from VA be deposited in a revolving fund at the VA medical facility that furnished nursing care to the veteran. The fund would be available, without fiscal-year limitation, to help defray the operating expenses of that facility.

EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT INCOME VERIFICATION

Current law: Section 5317 of title 38 requires the Secretary to verify the eligibility of recipients of, or applicants for, VA needs-based benefits using income data from the Internal Revenue Service and Social Security Administration, and section 6103(10(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provides the Secretary with access to that information.

These provisions expire on September 30, 1992.

House bill: Section 303 would extend the provisions to September 30, 1997.

Senate amendment: Section 7 would make the provisions permanent.

ACCESS TO INFORMATION NECESSARY FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF CERTAIN VETERANS BENEFITS LAWS

Current law: The Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (RFPA) (Public Law 98-21) generally prohibits federal agencies from gaining access to or obtaining copies of information contained in the financial records of a financial institution's customer unless the records are reasonably described and the customer has authorized disclosure or the records are sought pursuant to an administrative subpoena or summons, a search warrant, a judicial subpoena, or, in certain circumstances, a formal written request by a government authority. There are 11 types of disclosures to federal agencies that are excluded from the general prohibition, including disclosure authorized under the Internal Revenue Code and disclosure necessary for the proper administration of programs of withholding taxes on nonresident aliens, Federal Old-Age, survivors and Disability Insurance Benefits, and Railroad Retirement Benefits.

Senate bill: Section 4 of S. 775 would amend the RFPA to authorize VA to obtain from financial institutions the current mailing addresses of certain VA beneficiaries whose benefits are deposited by direct deposit. The Secretary would be authorized to request and obtain this information only if the Secretary determines and certifies that the information is necessary to administer veterans' benefits programs and that the information cannot be obtained by a reasonable search of VAS records. Information disclosed by the financial institution under this provision could be used solely for the purpose of administering veterans' benefits programs.

House bill: Section 403 of H.R. 2280 is substantively identical to the Senate provision, except it would amend title 38, United States code, to require the Secretary to make the required determinations and certifications.

Compromise agreement: Section 603 contains the House provision.

EXTENSION OF EXPIRING COST-RECOVERY AUTHORITY

Current law: Section 1729(a)(2)(E) authorizes VA to recover from third parties, under a veteran's health-plan contract, the cost of medical care provided by VA for the treatment of a non-service-connected disability of a service-disabled veteran. This authority expires on October 1, 1993.

Senate bill: Section 401 of S. 2647 as passed by the Senate in H.R. 5087 on September 25, 1992, would make this authority permanent.

House bill: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 604 would extend this authority through July 31, 1994.

EXCLUSION FOR LOW-INCOME VETERANS FROM MEDICATION COPAYMENT REQUIREMENT

Current law: Section 1722A of title 38 requires the Secretary to charge veterans (other than those with a service-connected disability rate 50 percent or more) $2 (or the actual cost, if less) for each 30-day supply of a medication furnished by VA on an outpatient basis for the treatment of a non-service-connected disability or condition. This provisions expires on September 30, 1992.

Compromise agreement: Section 605 would exclude from the copayment requirement veterans whose income is at a level which, if taken alone, would qualify them for VA nonservice-connected disability pension.

EXTENSION OF COPAYMENT PROGRAMS

Current law: Under sections 1710 and 1712 of title 38, VA health-care eligibility consists of two categories of veterans for purposes of copayments—those whom VA is required to charge and those who do not have to pay.

Those who are not required to pay are those to whom VA is required to provide needed hospital care, known as the "mandatory" category, which includes, among others, veterans with a service-connected disability and veterans without a service-connected disability whose annual income does not exceed certain levels (currently $18,844 for a single veteran without dependents).

Those whom VA is required to charge are those to whom VA may furnish hospital care, known as the "discretionary" category, which includes non-service-disabled veterans whose income exceeds those levels. The charges are (1) for hospital care, an amount equal to the Medicare deductible (currently $652) for the first 90 days of care during any 365-day period, and half the Medicare deductible for each 90-day period of care thereafter; (2) for nursing-home care, the same deductible for any 90-day period as under the Medicare program; (3) an additional $10 a day for hospital care and $5 a day for nursing-home care; and (4) for outpatient care, 20 percent of the estimated cost of a VA outpatient visit for each visit.

The current health-care categories and copayments and deductibles reflect amendments made by section 8013 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, Public Law 101-508. Section 518 of the Department of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act for FY 1992, Public Law 102-139, extended these provisions through September 30, 1992.

Section 1722A of title 38 requires the Secretary to charge veterans (other than those with a service-connected disability rated 50 percent or more) $2 (or the actual cost, if less) for each 30-day supply of a medication furnished by VA on an outpatient basis for the treatment of a non-service-connected disability or condition. This provision expires on September 30, 1992.

House bill: Section 304 would extend the expiration date of these provisions from September 30, 1992, to September 30, 1996.

Senate amendment: Section 8 is identical to the House provisions.

Compromise agreement: Section 606 follows these provisions, except that it would extend the provisions through September 30, 1997. (The medication copayment requirement would be modified by section 605 of the compromise agreement.)

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

VETERANS HOME LOAN PROGRAM AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on H.R. 939.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the House agree to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill (H.R. 939) entitled "An Act to amend title 38, United States Code, with respect to housing loans for veterans, and for other purposes," with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Veterans Home Loan Program Amendments of 1992".

SEC. 2. ELIGIBILITY OF SELECTED RESERVE.

(a) SELECTED RESERVE.—Chapter 37 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 3701(b), by adding at the end the following:

"(5)(A) The term 'veteran' also includes an individual who is not otherwise eligible for the benefits of this chapter and who has completed a total service of at least 6 years in the Selected Reserve and, following the completion of such service, was discharged from service with an honorable discharge, was placed on the retired list, was transferred to the Standby Reserve or an element of the Ready Reserve other than the Selected Reserve after service in the Selected Reserve characterized by the Secretary concerned as honorable service, or continues serving in the Selected Reserve.

"(B) The term 'Selected Reserve' means the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve of any of the reserve components (including the Army National Guard of the United States and the Air National Guard of the United States) of the Armed Forces, as required to be maintained under section 268(b) of title 10."; and

(2) in section 3702(a)(2), by adding at the end the following:

"(E) For the 7-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph, each veteran described in section 3701(b)(5) of this title.".

(b) FEES.—(1) Section 3729(a)(2) of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(C) by adding after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) in the case of a loan made to, or guaranteed or insured on behalf of, a veteran described in section 3701(b)(5) of this title under this chapter, the amount of such fee shall be—

"(i) two percent of the total loan amount;

"(ii) in the case of a loan for any purpose specified in section 3712 of this title, one percent of such amount; or

"(iii) in the case of a loan for a purchase (other than a purchase referred to in section 3712 of this title) or for construction with respect to which the veteran has made a downpayment of 5 percent or more of the total purchase price or construction cost—

"§ 3761. Pilot program

"(a) The Secretary shall establish and implement a pilot program under which the Secretary may make direct housing loans to Native American veterans. The purpose of such loans is to permit such veterans to purchase, construct, or improve dwellings on trust land. The Secretary shall establish and implement the pilot program in accordance with the provisions of this subchapter.

"(b) In carrying out the pilot program under this subchapter, the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, make direct housing loans to Native American veterans who are located in a variety of geographic areas and in areas experiencing a variety of economic circumstances.

"(c) No loans may be made under this subchapter after September 30, 1997.

"§ 3762. Direct housing loans to Native American veterans

"(a) The Secretary may make a direct housing loan to a Native American veteran if—

"(1) the Secretary has entered into a memorandum of understanding with respect to such loans with the tribal organization that has jurisdiction over the veteran; and

"(2) the memorandum is in effect when the loan is made.

"(b)(1) Subject to paragraph (2), the Secretary shall ensure that each memorandum of understanding that the Secretary enters into with a tribal organization shall provide for the following:

"(A) That each Native American veteran who is under the jurisdiction of the tribal organization and to whom the Secretary makes a direct loan under this subchapter—

"(i) holds, possesses, or purchases using the proceeds of the loan a meaningful interest in a lot or dwelling (or both) that is located on trust land; and

"(ii) will purchase, construct, or improve (as the case may be) a dwelling on the lot using the proceeds of the loan.

"(B) That each such Native American veteran will convey to the Secretary by an appropriate instrument the interest referred to in subparagraph (A) as security for a direct housing loan under this subchapter.

"(C) That the tribal organization and each such Native American veteran will permit the Secretary to enter upon the trust land of that organization or veteran for the purposes of carrying out such actions as the Secretary determines are necessary—

"(i) to evaluate the advisability of the loan; and "(ii) to monitor any purchase, construction, or improvements carried out using the proceeds of the loan.

"(D) That the tribal organization has established standards and procedures that apply to the foreclosure of the interest conveyed by a Native American veteran pursuant to subparagraph (B), including—

"(i) procedures for foreclosing the interest; and

"(ii) procedures for the resale of the lot or the dwelling (or both) purchased, constructed, or improved using the proceeds of the loan.

"(E) That the tribal organization agrees to such other terms and conditions with respect to the making of direct loans to Native American veterans under the jurisdiction of the tribal organization as the Secretary may require in order to ensure that the pilot program established under this subchapter is implemented in a responsible and prudent manner.

"(2) The Secretary may not enter into a memorandum of understanding with a tribal organization under this subsection unless the Secretary determines that the memorandum provides for such standards and procedures as are necessary for the reasonable protection of the financial interests of the United States.

"(c)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the principal amount of any direct housing loan made to a Native American under this section may not exceed $80,000.

"(B) The Secretary may make loans exceeding the amount specified in subparagraph (A) in a geographic area if the Secretary determines that housing costs in the area are significantly higher than average housing costs nationwide. The amount of such increase shall be the amount that the Secretary determines is necessary in order to carry out the pilot program under this subchapter in a manner that demonstrates the advisability of making direct housing loans to Native American veterans who are located in a variety of geographic areas and in geographic areas experiencing a variety of economic conditions.

"(2) Loans made under this section shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary, which rate may not exceed the appropriate rate authorized for guaranteed loans under section 3703(c)(1) or section 3712(f) of this title, and shall be subject to such requirements or limitations prescribed for loans guaranteed under this title as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(3) Notwithstanding section 3704(a) of this title, the Secretary shall establish minimum requirements for planning, construction, improvement, and general acceptability relating to any direct loan made under this section.

"(d)(1) The Secretary shall establish credit underwriting standards to be used in evaluating loans made under this subchapter. In establishing such standards, the Secretary shall take into account the purpose of this program to make available housing to Native American veterans living on trust lands.

"(2) The Secretary shall determine the reasonable value of the interest in property that will serve as security for a loan made under this section and shall establish procedures for appraisals upon which the Secretary may base such determinations. The procedures shall incorporate generally the relevant requirements of section 3731 of this title, unless the Secretary determines that such requirements are impracticable to implement in a geographic area, on particular trust lands, or under circumstances specified by the Secretary.

"(e) Loans made under this section shall be repaid in monthly installments.

"(f) In connection with any loan under this section, the Secretary may make advances in cash to provide for repairs, alterations, and improvements and to meet incidental expenses of the loan transaction. The Secretary shall determine the amount of any expenses incident to the origination of loans made under this section, which expenses, or a reasonable flat allowance in lieu thereof, shall be paid by the veteran in addition to the loan closing costs.

"(g) Without regard to any provision of this chapter (other than a provision of this section), the Secretary may—

"(1) take any action that the Secretary determines to be necessary with respect to the custody, management, protection, and realization or sale of investments under this section;

"(2) determine any necessary expenses and expenditures and the manner in which such expenses and expenditures shall be incurred, allowed, and paid;

"(3) make such rules, regulations, and orders as the Secretary considers necessary for carrying out the Secretary's functions under this section; and

"(4) in a manner consistent with the provisions of this chapter and with the Secretary's functions under this subchapter, employ, utilize, and compensate any persons, organizations, or departments or agencies (including departments and agencies of the United States) designated by the Secretary to carry out such functions.

"(h) The Secretary shall carry out an outreach program to inform and educate tribal organizations and Native American veterans of the pilot program provided for under this subchapter and the availability of direct housing loans for Native American veterans who live on trust lands.

"§3763. Housing loan program account

"(a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an account known as the 'Native American Veteran Housing Loan Program Account' (hereafter in this subchapter referred to as the 'Account').

"(b) The Account shall be available to the Secretary to carry out all operations relating to the making of direct housing loans to Native American veterans under this subchapter, including any administrative expenses relating to the making of such loans. SEC. 12. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.

Section 5 of Public Law 102-54 (105 Stat. 268) is amended by striking out "3102" and inserting in lieu thereof "5302".

Resolved, That the House agree to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I urge final Senate action on legislation to improve VA's Home-Loan Guaranty Program. This legislation as it comes before the Senate today is derived from H.R. 939 as passed by the House on March 3, 1992; S. 3108 as passed by the Senate in H.R. 939 on October 1, 1992; H.R. 4368 as passed by the House on June 9, 1992; and S. 2528 as passed by the Senate on September 18, 1992.

This measure, which I will refer to as the compromise agreement, would breathe new life into the VA Home-Loan Program—a program that, for nearly half a century has made it possible for millions of veterans to realize the American dream of home ownership.

Specifically, the measure would, among other things, establish VA pilot programs providing VA-guaranteed loans with adjustable interest rates, allowing veterans to negotiate the interest rates and discount points on VA-guaranteed loans, providing direct home loans to Native American veterans living on trust lands, and making certain reservists eligible for VA-guaranteed home loans.

Mr. President, the House passed this compromise bill without opposition on a voice vote on October 5, 1992, and I hope the Senate shortly will do the same. The provisions in the compromise agreement will make significant improvements in veterans' programs.

At the conclusion of my remarks, I will submit for the RECORD a detailed explanatory statement prepared by the two Veterans' Affairs Committees that describes in detail the provisions in this measure. Thus, at this point, I will summarize briefly the provisions of the compromise agreement and then discuss certain provisions in the bill.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS

The provisions of the compromise agreement would:

ADJUSTABLE RATE MORTGAGES

First, establish a demonstration program, during FYs 1993 through 1995, of VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs).

Second, require annual adjustments in the interest rate on ARMs on the anniversary date of the loan closing based on a national interest rate index approved by the Secretary.

Third, limit the annual interest-rate adjustment on VA-guaranteed ARMs to no more than 1 percentage point higher or lower than the interest rate of the loan at the time of the adjustment.

Fourth, limit the maximum interest rate at any time during the term of the loan to no more than 5 percentage points above the initial rate.

Fifth, require the Secretary to promulgate underwriting standards specifically for VA-guaranteed ARMs.

Sixth, provide that VA must require the lender to provide to an applicant for a VA-guaranteed ARM a written explanation of the features of the ARM, including a hypothetical payment schedule that displays the maximum potential increases in monthly payments to the borrower over the first five years of the loan.

Seventh, require the Secretary to report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs by December 31, 1993, and annually thereafter, on the default rate and other information concerning VA-guaranteed ARMs.

NEGOTIATED INTEREST RATES

Eighth, require the Secretary, through December 31, 1995, to establish either (a) a uniform maximum interest rate and general prohibition on a borrower paying discount points, or (b) procedures for allowing interest on VA-guaranteed loans at rates negotiated between borrowers and lenders.

Ninth, authorize the Secretary to change between uniform maximum rates and negotiated rates at any time.

Tenth, provide that, if the Secretary allows negotiated interest rates, the Secretary shall allow a borrower to pay reasonable discount points on VA-guaranteed loans, as negotiated between the borrower, the seller, and the lender, but prohibit the discount points from being financed as part of the loan.

Eleventh, require the Secretary (a) to notify the Committees on Veterans' Affairs within 10 days after exercising the authority to provide for negotiated rates or after returning to a uniform maximum rate, and (b) to provide with the notification an explanation of the reasons for the change in policy.

Twelfth, require the Secretary to report to the Committees by March 1, 1994, on whether the Secretary has implemented negotiated interest rates under the authority of this legislation and, if so, various information and analyses regarding VA-guaranteed loans that bear a negotiated interest rate.

ENERGY EFFICIENT MORTGAGES

Thirteenth, establish a demonstration program of energy efficient mortgages (EEMs) during FYs 1993 through 1996.

Fourteenth, provide VA-guaranteed EEMs for eligible veterans to purchase an existing home and make energy efficiency improvements to it or to make energy efficiency improvements to it or to make energy efficiency improvements to a home owned and occupied by the veteran, provided that the financed cost of the energy efficiency improvements does not exceed the greater of (1) $3,000, or (2) $6,000 if the increase in monthly principal and interest payments does not exceed the likely reduction in monthly utility costs as a result of the improvements.

Fifteenth, provide that the portion of the guaranty attributable to energy efficiency measures may be in addition to the current applicable maximum guaranty and shall not affect the loan-guaranty entitlement to which the borrower otherwise is entitled.

Sixteenth, require VA to encourage participation in the program by notifying eligible veterans, participating lenders, and interested realtors about the availability of EEMs and the procedures and requirements to obtain the loans.

Seventeenth, require the Secretary to report to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs on the program one year after VA guarantees the first EEM under the program and annually thereafter and to include information on the default rates for EEMs and the effects, if any, of the energy efficiency measures on resale values and home utility consumption and costs.

DIRECT HOME LOANS TO NATIVE AMERICAN VETERANS ON TRUST LANDS

Eighteenth, establish a five-year pilot program of direct loans to Native American veterans to purchase, construct, or improve dwellings on trust lands.

FEES FOR CERTAIN REFINANCING LOANS

Nineteenth, reduce the VA fee for VA-guaranteed interest rate reduction refinancing loans from as much as 1.25 percent of the loan to 0.5 percent.

MINIMUM GUARANTY RATIO FOR CERTAIN REFINANCING LOANS

Twentieth, provide that the guaranty for VA-guaranteed interest rate reduction refinancing loans always will be at least 25 percent of the new loan.

RESERVISTS' ELIGIBILITY FOR LOAN GUARANTIES

Twenty-first, establish a seven-year pilot program extending eligibility for VA-guaranteed home loans to individuals who have served in the Reserve or National Guard for a total of at least six years.

Twenty-second, require these individuals to pay VA a loan fee 0.75 of a percentage point above the fee that veterans pay.

Twenty-third, require the Secretary to report to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs, by December 31, 1994, and annually thereafter, on reservists' participation in the program.

LENDER APPRAISAL PROCESSING PROGRAM

Twenty-fourth, extend, from December 31, 1992, to December 31, 1995, the lender appraisal processing program, under which the Secretary may authorize qualified lenders to determine the reasonable value of the property based on an appraisal submitted by the appraiser directly to the lender, rather than to VA.

ENHANCED LOAN ASSET SALE AUTHORITY

Twenty-fifth, extend from December 31, 1992, to December 31, 1995, VA's authority under section 3720(h) of title 38 to provide a full-faith-and-credit government guaranty on the payment of securities backed by pools of VA vendee loans (direct loans to purchasers of properties acquired by VA upon foreclosure of a VA-guaranteed loan).

ELIGIBILITY OF RESERVISTS FOR FLAGS AND BURIAL MARKERS

Twenty-sixth, extend eligibility for flags to deceased individuals who at the time of death qualified for Reserved retired pay under chapter 67 of title 10 (or would have qualified if the individual was 60 years old).

Twenty-seventh, extend to these same individuals eligibility for VA-provided headstones or grave markers.

BACKGROUND

Mr. President, the declining share of the mortgage market occupied by VA-guaranteed loans reflects the declining value of this veterans benefit. Congress must act to reverse this trend and restore the value of this vital program—and the measure we are considering today would take several significant steps toward that goal.

Mr. President, I refer my colleagues and others interested in more background on the program and this legislation to the Veterans' Affairs Committee's report accompanying S. 3108 (S. Rept. No. 102-405) and to my statement in the RECORD of October 1, 1992, on the passage of the Senate bill, S. 3108, which I authored.

NEGOTIATED INTEREST RATES

Mr. President, I'm very pleased that the compromise agreement contains a provision from the Senate bill that will allow veterans to negotiate with lenders interest rates on VA-guaranteed loans. This step is long overdue.

The VA administered rate under current law is supposed to be a maximum interest rate, but in practice, it sets a single, nationwide interest rate for VA-guaranteed loans. Veterans are prohibited from paying discount points on a VA loan to obtain a lower interest rate. The prohibition against veterans paying points means that, when a veteran wants to use a VA-guaranteed loan, the seller must pay all of the points. That makes many sellers reluctant to sell their homes to veterans who plan to use VA-guaranteed loans.

Mr. President, for the next 3 years, this bill could put veterans on a level playing field with potential purchasers who plan to use conventional, FHA-insured, or other types of mortgage loans. Veterans would not start at a disadvantage when they bid for a house against other potential purchasers.

Mr. President, in the highly competitive mortgage lending industry, I believe that the interest-rate competition that this bill would allow ultimately will reduce veterans' costs for housing.

ADJUSTABLE RATE MORTGAGES

Mr. President, I also am pleased that the compromise includes Senate improvements to important House provisions providing—for the first time—authority for VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages. VA-guaranteed loans are the only segment of the single-family mortgage market at does not offer adjustable rate mortgages.

I have been very cautious about pushing VA into guaranteeing this type of loan because ARM's inherently are more risky for the borrower. In the first years that adjustable rate mortgages were offered, abuses were rampant and default rates were high.

The market for ARM's has matured, however, and limitations placed on interest-rate adjustments have brought defaults down to reasonable levels, although ARM's still have default rates somewhat higher than fixed-rate mortgages. The safeguards added by the Senate amendments to the ARM's demonstration program represent a very conservative approach to expanding veterans' options for VA-guaranteed home loans.

During the committee's July 22, 1992, hearing on a draft measure of what became the Senate bill, I was pleased to hear the administration reverse its longstanding opposition to VA-guaranteed ARM's and support the demonstration program in our bill.

ENERGY EFFICIENT MORTGAGES

Mr. President, I am very pleased that the compromise includes an improved and expanded version of my proposal for VA-guaranteed energy efficient mortgages to encourage veterans who buy existing homes to incorporate energy-saving improvements into the home. I have been active for many years in efforts to encourage energy efficiency in housing, while maintaining housing affordability.

Under the compromise agreement, veterans could use a VA-guaranteed loan to finance energy efficiency improvements to a home they already own and occupy or to an existing home they plan to purchase with a VA-guaranteed loan. In these cases, VA would guarantee loans to finance up to $6,000 worth of energy improvements without the need for an appraisal of the improvements. VA would guarantee loans covering energy efficiency improvements that cost $3,000 to $6,000 only if the energy savings from the improvements are likely at least to offset the resulting increase in monthly principal and interest payments on the loan.

Mr. President, I note that neither VA's current EEM Program nor the improved program established by the compromise bill apply to newly constructed homes. Most modern homes already incorporate energy efficiency measures.

Mr. President, veterans should note that the additional amount of the guaranty would not count against the veteran's entitlement or against the regular guaranty limits.

For example, the VA guaranty on a $148,000 loan that does not include the cost of energy efficiency measures would be $46,000 under current law, or 25 percent of the loan amount. Under the EEM Program in the compromise bill, a qualified borrower could borrow an additional $6,000 for cost-effective energy efficiency improvements to the existing home that the veteran is purchasing. The $6,000 additional loan amount would be guaranteed in the same ratio as the underlying loan—25 percent in this example. Thus, the total loan would be $190,000 and the guaranty would be $46,000 plus $1,500 or a total of $47,500. Only $46,000 of the guaranty would apply against the veteran's entitlement.

In short, this legislation would create a streamlined process for obtaining an EEM in connection with the purchase or improvement of an existing home. If the energy savings are cost effective, in terms of the veteran's monthly out-of-pocket housing costs, there would be no need for an appraisal of the market value of the energy efficiency improvements. In short, these new EEMs would substitute an energy efficient standard for an appraised value standard for the portion of the loan that would finance the energy efficiency improvements.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, I express my deep appreciation to the distinguished Ranking Republican Member of the Senate Committee, Mr. SPECTER, and all other members of the committee, as well as the chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, [Mr. MONTGOMERY] and [Mr. STUMP] and the House Subcommittee on Housing and Memorial Affairs, [Mr. STAGGERS] and [Mr. BURTON] for their cooperation on this measure.

Mr. President, I also express my deep gratitude to the staff members who worked on this legislation—on the minority staff in the Senate, Quentin Kinderman and Tom Roberts, and on the majority staff in the Senate, Neil Koren, Michael Cogan, Bill Brew, and Ed Scott—and on the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs staff, Cynthia Jones, Gloria Royce, Pay Ryan, and Mack Fleming for the majority and Stacy Coggin and Carl Commenator for the minority.

Mr. President, I also note the fine work of the staff of the two Offices of Legislative Counsel, Charlie Armstrong in the Senate and Wade Ballou in the House. They provided their usual excellent assistance as we prepared this legislation.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to give its unanimous approval to this measure and I ask unanimous consent that the explanatory statement to which I referred earlier, and which was prepared in lieu of a joint explanatory statement accompanying a conference report, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT FOR H.R. 939, THE PROPOSED "VETERANS HOME LOAN AMENDMENTS OF 1992"

H.R. 939, the proposed, "Veterans Home Loan Amendments of 1992" reflects a compromise agreement that the Senate and House of Representatives Committees on Veterans' Affairs have reached on four bills passed by the Senate and the House during the 102nd Congress. These are: H.R. 939 as passed by the House on March 3, 1992 (hereinafter referred to as "House bill"), H.R. 4368 as passed by the House on June 9, 1992 (hereinafter referred to as "H.R. 4368"), S. 3108 as passed by the Senate as a substitute amendment to H.R. 939 on October 1, 1992 (hereinafter referred to as "Senate amendment"), and S. 2528 as passed by the Senate on September 18, 1992, (hereinafter referred to as "S. 2528").

The Committees on Veterans' Affairs have prepared the following explanation of H.R. 939 as amended (hereinafter referred to as "compromise agreement"). Differences between the provisions contained in the compromise agreement and the related provisions in the bills listed above are noted in this document, except for clerical corrections and conforming changes made necessary by the compromise agreement, and minor drafting, technical, and clarifying changes.

ELIGIBILITY OF SELECTED RESERVE

Current law: Section 3702(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code, requires, as a condition of eligibility for VA-guaranteed loans, active-duty service of at least 180 consecutive days, or a total of 90 days if at least one day was during a designated wartime period. Section 5303A imposes an additional minimum-service requirement for VA benefits eligibility. Under section 5303A, a person who originally enlists after September 7, 1980 (or enters active duty as an officer after October 16, 1981) generally must have served either two years of active-duty service or the length of the period for which he or she was called to active duty.

Section 3729 requires veterans to pay a loan fee of 1.25 percent of the loan for loans with no downpayment, 0.75 percent for loans with a downpayment of at least 5 percent, or 0.5 percent for loans with a downpayment of at least 10 percent. Veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities are exempt from paying the VA loan fee. Loans for manufactured housing require a VA fee of 1 percent.

House bill: Section 1(a) would amend section 3701(b) of title 38 to make eligible for VA-guaranteed loans individuals who have completed a total of six years of service in the Selected Reserve (as defined by section 286(b) of title 10) and continue serving in the Selected Reserve or, following the completion of service, are honorably discharged or transferred to the Standby Reserve or another element of the Selected Reserve after honorable service during the six-year period.

Section 1(b) would amend section 3729 of title 38 to require these individuals to pay a VA loan fee 0.75 percent higher than the equivalent fees for veterans.

Senate amendment: Section 6 is similar to the House provision, except that it would take effect October 1, 1992, and expire December 31, 1998. Section 6(d) would require the Secretary to report to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs by September 30, 1997, on reservists' participation in the VA guaranteed home loan program.

Compromise agreement: Section 2 follows the House bill, except that the provisions would expire seven years after the date of enactment. Section 2(c) would require the Secretary to report annually to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs on reservists' participation in the home-loan program. The first report would be due by December 31, 1994.

ADJUSTABLE RATE MORTGAGES

Current law: Section 3703(c)(1) prohibits VA-guaranteed loans from bearing interest at a rate exceeding the rate that the Secretary finds the loan market demands. In setting this rate, the Secretary must consult with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to coordinate interest-rate policy on FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed loans.

House bill: Section 3 would require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to establish a demonstration program, during FYs 1993 and 1994, of VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) in a manner similar to the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) insured ARMs program under section 251 of the National Housing Act. The Secretary would be required to conduct the pilot program at not fewer than two nor more than 10 regional offices.

Senate amendment: Section 2(a) would establish a pilot program, during FY 1993 through FY 1997, of VA-guaranteed ARMs. Section 2(b) would require annual adjustments in the interest rate on the ARMs, on the anniversary date of the loan closing, based on an index specified in regulations promulgated by the Secretary. Information on the index would have to be readily accessible to mortgagors at any time from generally available, published sources. The annual interest-rate adjustment would be limited to no more than 1 percentage point higher or lower than the interest rate of the loan at the time of the adjustment, and the maximum interest rate at any time during the term of the loan would be limited to no more than 5 percentage points above the initial rate.

Section 2(c) would require the Secretary to promulgate underwriting requirements for these loans that take into account (a) the interest rate derived from the most recent VA-specified index available at the time the underwriting decision is made, regardless of the actual initial rate offered by the lender; (b) the maximum and likely increases in mortgage payments that the loans would require; (c) the underwriting standards that apply to FHA ARMs; and (d) any other factors specified by the Secretary.

Section 2(e) would limit the number of ARMs VA could guarantee each fiscal year to no more than 10 percent of the total number of all loans VA guaranteed during the previous fiscal year.

Section 2(f) would require the Secretary to submit to the Veterans' Affairs Committees five annual reports on the program, beginning one year after the date on which VA guarantees the first loan under this program. The reports would have to contain information about defaults, including comparisons with the default rates for fixed-rate VA-guaranteed home loans and both fixed- and adjustable-rate loans either insured by FHA or made under conventional terms for single-family homes.

Compromise agreement: Section 3 follows the House bill, except that it would incorporate the interest-rate limitations and underwriting guidelines in the Senate amendment. There would be no limitation on the number of ARMs VA could guarantee during a fiscal year.

Section 3(b) would require the Secretary to submit to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs annual reports on the pilot program, with the first report due by December 31, 1993.

ENHANCED LOAN ASSET SALE AUTHORITY

Current law: Under section 3720(h) of title 38, VA is authorized to guarantee timely payment of principle and interest on securities backed by VA "vendee" loans. These are direct loans VA makes to those who purchase houses that VA acquired through the foreclosure of a VA-guaranteed loan. VA pools these loans and sells them to a trust that issues pass-through securities backed by the vendee-loan pool. VA's authority to guarantee such payment for certificates or other securities expires December 31, 1992.

House bill: Section 4 would make the authority permanent.

Senate amendment: Section 5 would extend the expiration date of section 3720(h) of title 38 from December 31, 1992, to December 31, 1995.

LOAN FEES FOR REFINANCING

Current law: Section 3710(a)(8) of title 38 requires VA to guaranty, under certain circumstances, loans to refinance an existing loan guaranteed, insured, or made by VA. Section 3710(e) requires that the interest rate on the refinancing loan be lower than the interest rate on the original loan and establishes several other requirements for such "interest-rate-reduction" refinancing loans.

Section 3710(a)(9) of title 38 requires VA to guarantee certain interest-rate-reduction refinancing loans for manufactured housing under generally the same conditions that apply to other interest-rate-reduction refinancing loans.

Section 3729 of title 38 requires those eligible for a VA-guaranteed home loan to pay a fee to VA, unless the borrower is a veteran with a compensable, service-connected disability or the surviving spouse of a veteran who died on active duty or as a result of a service-connected disability. The fee generally is 1.25 percent of the loan, but is reduced to 0.75 percent if the borrower makes a downpayment of at least 5 percent but not more than 10 percent of the purchase price, and reduced to 0.5 percent if the borrower makes a downpayment of at least 10 percent. VA-guaranteed loans for manufactured housing require a 1-percent VA loan fee.

House bill: Section 2 of H.R. 4368 would reduce the VA loan fee for VA-guarantee interest-rate-reduction refinancing loan to 0.5 percent of the loan. The reduced fee also would apply to all VA-guaranteed refinancing loans for manufactured housing, regardless of whether the interest rate is reduced by the new loan.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 5 follows the House bill, except that the reduced fee would not apply to refinancing loans for manufactured housing unless the interest rate is lower on the new loan.

GUARANTY AMOUNT RELATIVE TO LOAN REFINANCING

Current law: Under sections 3710(e) and 3712(a)(4) of title 38, interest-rate-reduction refinancing loans secured by a home or manufactured housing may include certain closing costs, fees, and discount points. These sections, however, limit the guaranty on the new home to no more than the amount of the guaranty on the loan being refinanced.

Section 3703(a) sets forth specific limits on the amount of the VA guaranty for loans of various amounts. The lowest guaranty-to-loan ratio specified in that section is 25 percent.

The maximum principal amount of an interest-rate-reduction refinancing loan is the sum of the principal balance of the original loan, plus closing costs, fees, and discount points. Since the guaranty cannot exceed the amount of the guaranty on the original loan, however, the guaranty-to-loan ratio can drop below the 25-percent level. This can require the borrower to make a downpayment on a portion of the new loan in order to meet the lender security requirements.

House bill: Section 3 of H.R. 4368 would ensure that the VA guaranty on interest-rate-reduction refinancing loans is at least 25 percent of the new loan, regardless of the amount of the guaranty on the original loan.

Senate amendment: No provision.

EXTENSION OF LENDER APPRAISAL PROGRAM

Current law: Section 3710(b) of title 38 establishes limits on the amount of a VA-guaranteed home loan, based on the reasonable value of the property or construction being financed or refinanced. Section 3731 of title 38 sets forth the requirements for reasonable-value determinations and the appraisals upon which they are based.

Generally, under section 3731(c) of title 38, the appraiser forwards an appraisal directly to VA, which makes the determination of reasonable value and notifies the veteran and, upon request, to the lender proposing to make the VA-guaranteed loan.

Under section 3731(f), the Secretary may authorize qualified lenders to determine the reasonable value of the property based on an appraisal submitted by the appraiser directly to the lender, rather than to VA. The Secretary is required to monitor this lender appraisal processing program (LAPP) by reviewing lenders' determinations of reasonable value and the appraisals upon which the determinations are based.

The LAPP expires on December 31, 1992.

House bill: Section 4 of H.R. 4368 would extend LAPP through December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 7 follows the House provision.

NATIVE AMERICAN VETERANS DIRECT HOUSING LOAN PILOT PROGRAM

Current law: Section 312 of the Veterans Home Loan Indemnity and Restructuring Act of 1989, title III of Public Law 101–237, required the Secretaries of Veterans Affairs and of the Interior jointly to conduct a study to determine the extent of participation in the VA-guaranteed home loan program by Native American veterans who live on trust lands; the reasons for any lower participation by these veterans, compared to other veterans; and the legislative, regulatory, and administrative actions necessary to improve the access of these Native American veterans to VA housing benefits. The Secretaries were required to report to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs on the results of the study by June 1, 1990, and the Secretaries submitted the report to the Committees on August 8, 1991.

VA-guaranteed loans, which are made by private lenders and guaranteed by VA under chapter 37 of title 38, generally require clear title to the property in order to provide adequate security for the loan. Land on Indian reservations and other land held in trust for Native Americans are not freely alienable and generally cannot serve as security for a VA-guaranteed loan.

VA currently is authorized to make direct loans to veterans under two programs. Section 3711 of title 38 authorizes VA to make direct loans to veterans in "housing credit shortage areas," rural areas or small cities or towns in which the Secretary finds that private capital for housing loans is not generally available. Public Law 91–506 expanded the direct-loan program to allow loans for specially adapted housing for veterans with certain service-connected disabilities. Appropriations acts since 1981 have restricted VA direct loans to severely disabled veterans who require specially adapted housing.

House bill: No provision.

Senate bill: Section 2(a) of S. 2528 would amend chapter 37 of title 38 by adding a new subchapter V under which VA would conduct a five-year pilot program of direct loans to Native American veterans to purchase, construct, or improve dwellings on trust lands. The Secretary would be required, to the extent practicable, to make the loans to eligible veterans who are located in a variety of geographic areas and in areas experiencing a variety of economic circumstances.

Under proposed new section 3762 of title 38, before VA would be authorized to make a loan to a veteran, VA and the tribal organization having jurisdiction over the veteran would be required to enter into a memorandum of understanding providing that (a) the veteran would have a meaningful interest in the trust-land property on which the home is or will be located; (b) the veteran would convey to the Secretary by an appropriate instrument a security interest in the veteran's interest in the property as collateral for the loan; (c) VA would have access to trust lands in connection with the loan; (d) the tribal organization would be required to have established procedures for foreclosure and resale of the veteran's interest in the property in the event of default by the veteran; and (e) the tribal organization would agree to other terms and conditions the Secretary may require to carry out the loan program. The Secretary would be required to determine that the memorandum of understanding reasonably protects the financial interests of the United States.

Under proposed new section 3762(c) of title 38, VA would be authorized to make loans of up to $80,000, at an interest rate determined by the secretary (not to exceed the rate for VA-guaranteed loans), and the veteran would be required to pay closing costs and loan-origination expenses or a fee representing these expenses. The Secretary would be authorized to exceed the $80,000 loan limit in areas with high housing costs.

Under proposed new section 3762(d) of title 38, the Secretary would be required to establish special credit underwriting standards that take into account the purpose of the pilot program, which is to make housing available to Native American veterans living on trust lands. VA would be allowed to accept the appraisal of qualified, but not necessarily VA-approved, appraisers.

Under proposed new subsection (f) of section 3762 of title 38, the Secretary would be authorized to make cash advances in connection with construction or home-improvement loans.

Under proposed new subsection (h) of section 3762 of title 38, the Secretary would be required to conduct outreach and education to increase the awareness of tribal governments and Native American veterans of the availability of direct housing loans for veterans living on tribal trust lands.

Proposed new section 3763 of title 38 would establish a Native American Veterans Housing Loan program account in the Treasury to provide the funding mechanism necessary to carry out the pilot program.

Proposed new section 3764 of title 38 would define "trust land" as any land that is (a) held in trust by the United States for Native Americans; (b) subject to restrictions on alienation imposed by the United States on Indian lands (including native Hawaiian homelands); (c) owned by a Regional Corporation or a Village Corporation, as those terms are defined in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act; or (d) on any island in the Pacific Ocean if the land is, by cultural tradition (as determined by the Secretary), communally owned land.

The term "Native American" would be defined as (a) an Indian, as defined in the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act; (b) a native Hawaiian, as defined in the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act; (c) an Alaska Native, within the meaning provided for the term "Native" in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act; and (d) a Pacific Islander, within the meaning of the Native American Programs Act of 1974.

The term "tribal organization" would be defined as having the meaning given to that term in the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, and would include the Department of Hawaiian Homelands, in the case of Native Hawaiians, and such other organizations as the Secretary may prescribe.

Under proposed section 3764(b) of title 38, the Secretary would be required, in carrying out the pilot program, to consider the views and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Native American Veterans.

Section 3 of S. 2528 would require the Secretary to submit to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs on February 1 of 1994 through 1998, reports on implementation of the pilot program, including any recommendations by the Secretary for legislation regarding the pilot program.

Section 4 of S. 2528 would authorize appropriations during FY 1993 of $5 million for loans made under the pilot program.

Compromise agreement: Section 8 contains the Senate provision. The conference report on H.R. 5679, the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act for FY 1993, appropriates $5 million for the pilot program.

ENERGY EFFICIENT MORTGAGES

Current law: Section 3710(a)(7) provides a VA guaranty on loans to improve a dwelling or farm residence owned and occupied by the veteran through installation of a solar heating system, or a combined solar heating and cooling system or through the application of a residential energy conservation measure. Subsection (d) of that section defines these terms and includes in the definition of "residential energy conservation measure" a subparagraph authorizing the Secretary to identify additional energy conservation measures that would qualify for energy efficient mortgages under subsection (a)(7).

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Sections 3(a) and (e) would establish a pilot program of energy efficient mortgages (EEMs) under which the Secretary would be authorized to guarantee not more than a total of 1,250 EEMs during FYs 1993 and 1994 in at least five, but not more than 10, States.

Section 3(b) would allow the new EEMs only for existing homes for which the energy efficiency measures being financed are likely to reduce monthly energy costs by at least as much as they would increase the borrower's monthly payments of principal and interest on the EEM.

Section 3(b) and (c) would require VA to guarantee the loan for the energy efficiency improvements in the same proportion as the guaranty that VA would provide for the underlying loan without the energy efficiency improvements, provided that the cost of the energy efficiency measures is no more than the greater of (a) $4,000, or (b) 5 percent of the value of the home without the energy efficiency improvements, not to exceed $8,000.

Section 3(c) would provide that the portion of the guaranty attributable to energy efficiency measures may be in addition to the current applicable maximum guaranty and shall not affect the loan-guaranty benefit to which the borrower otherwise is entitled.

Section 3(f) would require VA to encourage participation in the program by notifying eligible veterans, participating lenders, and interested realtors in the States in which the pilot program would be carried out about the availability of loan guaranties under the pilot program and the procedures and requirements to obtain these loans.

Section 3(g) would provide the Secretary with authority to halt the demonstration project if the Secretary estimates that the total incremental costs (government subsidy) attributable to the two-year pilot program will exceed $2 million.

Section 3(h) would require the Secretary to report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs on the program one year after VA guarantees the first EEM under the program and annually thereafter for five more years. The reports would be required to include information on the default rates for EEMs and the effects, if any, of the energy efficiency measures on resale values and home utility consumption and costs.

Section 3(i) would provide that the pilot program would not affect the VA EEM program currently operated under the authority of section 3710(a)(7) of title 38.

Compromise agreement: Section 9 would amend chapter 37 of title 38 to modify the current EEM program by (a) allowing EEMs for improvements to a veteran's current home or to finance the combined cost of acquiring an existing dwelling and making energy efficiency improvements to the dwelling; (b) allowing veterans to finance the cost of energy efficiency measures that do not exceed the greater of (1) $3,000 or (2) $6,000, if the increase in the monthly payment for principal and interest does not exceed the likely reduction in monthly utility costs resulting from the improvements; (c) requiring VA to guarantee the EEM in the same proportion as the guaranty VA would have provided for the underlying loan without the energy efficiency improvements; (d) providing that the portion of the guaranty attributable to energy efficiency measures may be in addition to the guaranty limits set forth in section 3703(a)(1)(A) and would not affect the veteran's maximum loan-guaranty entitlement; and (e) requiring the Secretary to take appropriate actions to notify eligible veterans, participating lenders, and interested realtors of the availability of VA-guaranteed EEMs and the procedures and requirements to obtain these loans. The Secretary would be required to report to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs on the EEM program no later than one year after guaranteeing the first EEM under the amendments made by section 8 and for each of the three years thereafter.

NEGOTIATED INTEREST RATES

Current law: Section 3703(c)(1) of title 38 requires VA-guaranteed loans to bear interest at a rate that does not exceed such rate as the Secretary may from time to time find the loan market demands. In setting this rate, the Secretary must consult with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to coordinate interest-rate policy on loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration and VA-guaranteed loans.

Section 3703(c)(3) allows a veteran to pay discount points on loans guaranteed under chapter 37 of title 38 if the loan is for a purpose specified in that section. The specified loans do not include loans to purchase or construct a dwelling or purchase a farm residence or condominium.

House bill: No provision.

Senate amendment: Section 4(a) would, during FY 1993 and FY 1994, require the Secretary to establish either (a) a uniform maximum interest rate and general prohibition on a borrower paying discount points, as required under current section 3703(c) of title 38, or (b) procedures for allowing interest on VA-guaranteed loans at rates negotiated between borrowers and lenders. The Secretary would be authorized to change between uniform maximum rates and negotiated rates at any time.

If the Secretary allows negotiated interest rates, the Secretary would be required to allow a borrower to pay reasonable discount points on the loan, as negotiated between the borrower, the seller, and the lender. Veterans would be prohibited from financing the discount points as part of the VA-guaranteed loan.

The Secretary would be required to notify the Committees on Veterans' Affairs within 10 days after exercising the authority to provide for negotiated rates and discount points or returning to a uniform maximum rate and to provide with the notification an explanation of the reasons for the change in policy.

Section 4(b) would require the Secretary to report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs no later than March 1, 1994, on whether the Secretary has implemented negotiated interest rates and discount points under the authority of this legislation and, if so, the effects of this policy on borrowers' ability to obtain VA-guaranteed loans and on the interest rates at which borrowers were able to obtain the loans.

Compromise agreement: Section 10 follows the Senate provisions, except that the pilot program would expire on December 31, 1995, and reports would be by December 31, 1993, and annually thereafter.

The Committees expect the Secretary to exercise the authority to allow negotiated interest rates and discount points, but has provided a mechanism for returning to an administered rate at any time if experience with negotiated rates indicates that the policy is harming veterans.

ELIGIBILITY FOR FLAGS AND GRAVE MARKERS

Current law: Under section 2402(2) of title 38, members of any Reserve component of the Armed Forces, the Army National Guard, or the Air National Guard are eligible for burial in any open national cemetery in the National Cemetery System only if the member's death occurs under honorable conditions while the member is hospitalized or undergoing treatment, at the expense of the United States, for an injury or disease contracted or incurred under honorable conditions while the member is performing active duty for training, inactive duty training, or undergoing hospitalization or treatment at the expense of the United States. Section 2402(6) of title 38 authorizes the Secretary to designate other persons or classes of persons eligible for burial in any open national cemetery.

Section 2301 of title 38 requires the Secretary to furnish a flag to drape over the casket of certain deceased veterans and deceased persons buried in a national cemetery by virtue of eligibility under section 2402(6) of title 38 for such burial.

Under section 2306 of title 38, deceased members of the Reserves are eligible for headstones or grave markers only if they are eligible for burial in a national cemetery.

House bill. Section 1 of H.R. 4368 would extend eligibility for burial in a national cemetery and burial flags to individuals who have 20 years of service that counts toward retired pay as members of a Reserve component of the Armed Forces.

Senate amendment: No provision.

Compromise agreement: Section 11 would make eligible for a headstone or grave marker, and a flag to drape the casket of, a person who, at the time of death, was entitled to retired pay under chapter 67 of title 10, United States Code, or would have been entitled to retired pay under that chapter but for the fact that the person was under 60 years of age.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

"SEC. 10. (a) IN GENERAL.—(1) In order to determine whether activities (other than the tests or occupation activities referred to in section 5(a)(1)(B)) resulted in the exposure of veterans to ionizing radiation during the service of such veterans that occurred before January 1, 1970, and whether adverse health effects have been observed or may have resulted from such exposure in a significant number of such veterans, the Advisory Committee established under section 6 shall—

"(A) review all available scientific studies and other relevant information relating to the exposure of such veterans to ionizing radiation during such service;

"(B) identify any activity during which significant numbers of veterans received exposure; and

"(2) Not later than December 1, 1993, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing—

"(A) a list of the activities identified by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) and the basis of such identification;

"(B) a copy of the report of the Advisory Committee referred to in subsection (a)(1)(C); and

"(C) the plan referred to in paragraph (1)(B).".

SEC. 4. REVIEW OF BRONCHIO-ALVEOLAR CARCINOMA.

(a) ADVISORY COMMITTEE REVIEW.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall direct the Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to review pertinent scientific data relating to bronchio-alveolar carcinoma to determine whether such disease entity should be considered to be radiogenic. Based on its review, the Advisory Committee shall report its findings to the Secretary.

(b) DECISION BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary, based on the Advisory Committee's findings, shall, not later than April 1, 1993, submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report setting forth the Secretary's decision as to whether such disease entity should be presumed to be service connected if suffered by a radiation-exposed veteran (as defined by section 1112(c)(4)(A) of title 38, United States Code).

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to improve the program of compensation for veterans exposed to ionizing radiation while in military service.".

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am very pleased that the Senate is about to take final action on S. 775, the proposed Veterans' Radiation Exposure Amendments of 1992. This measure makes several improvements in compensation for veterans who develop illnesses as a result of their exposure to ionizing radiation during military service. It will update landmark 1988 legislation which provided compensation for certain cancers in veterans who were exposed to radiation during atmospheric nuclear tests or during the wartime occupation of Japan. It also will begin a process of examining other types of military service that might have exposed veterans to harmful radiation.

Mr. President, I have been working on the issues addressed in this bill for over 2 years, beginning in the 101st Congress when I introduced S. 2556. The provisions of S. 2556 eventually were included, with some modifications, in S. 775, the fiscal year 1992 VA compensation-COLA bill, which was reported by our committee on August 2, 1991, and passed by the Senate, with further modifications, by unanimous voice vote on November 20, 1991. I refer my colleagues to our committee report, (S. Rept. No. 102-39) and my floor statement on Senate passage of S. 775, which appears in the November 20, 1991, RECORD beginning on page S17148.

The measure as it comes before us today reflects a compromise agreement that the House and Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs have reached with regard to the radiation provisions in S. 775 and the provisions of H.R. 3236, a companion measure that the House passed on August 4, 1992. The House passed the compromise agreement as an amendment to S. 775 by a unanimous voice vote on September 23, 1992, and I urge the Senate to do the same.

Mr. President, because the details of this measure are described in an explanatory statement developed with our colleagues on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, which I will place in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks, I will just summarize the provisions of the bill and comment on a few of the provisions.

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS

Mr. President, the provisions of the compromise agreement would:

First, effective October 1, 1992, repeal the requirement that, to be presumed service connected, diseases listed in section 1112(c) of title 38, United States Code, of veterans who participated in certain radiation-risk activities must become at least 10-percent disabling within 40 years after the veteran's last military exposure to radiation.

Second, effective October 1, 1992, add to the list of diseases in section 1112(c) cancer of the salivary gland and cancer of the urinary tract.

Third, amend the Veterans' Dioxin and Radiation Exposure Compensation Standards Act, Public Law 98-542, to establish a mechanism to determine whether military activities that occurred before 1970 that are not listed as radiation-risk activities under current law may have exposed veterans to ionizing radiation and whether adverse health effects have been observed or may have resulted from that exposure in a significant number of veterans. Specifically, the VA Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards would be required to review all available scientific and other relevant information concerning exposure to radiation during these activities and to identify those activities during which a significant number of veterans were exposed to radiation. The Advisory Committee would report to the Secretary by August 1, 1993, on the feasibility and appropriateness of additional investigation to determine whether a significant number of veterans suffer from radiation-related disabilities from exposure to radiation from these activities.

Fourth, require the Secretary, upon request of the Advisory Committee and after seeking any necessary assistance from the Secretary of Defense, to submit to the Advisory Committee information the Advisory Committee needs to carry out its review and make its recommendations.

Fifth, require the Secretary first, upon receiving the Advisory Committee's report, to identify which of the activities the Secretary intends to investigate more fully to determine whether these veterans suffer from radiation-related disabilities, and second, to prepare a plan for carrying out any additional investigation and making a determination, including a deadline for completing the plan.

Sixth, require the Secretary to submit to the Senate and House Committees on Veterans' Affairs by December 1, 1993, a report listing the activities the Secretary intends to investigate further and containing the plan for investigation and required determination.

Seventh, require the Secretary first, to direct the Advisory Committee to review pertinent scientific evidence to determine, and report to the Secretary, whether bronchio-alveolar carcinoma should be considered radiogenic, second, to decide, based on the Advisory Committee's report, whether bronchio-alveolar carcinoma should be presumed to be service connected for radiation-exposed veterans, and third report to Congress on this decision by April 1, 1993.

BACKGROUND

Mr. President, I am extremely pleased that I am able to bring a compromise agreement on this important measure before the Senate today.

The compromise agreement is similar to the bill I introduced in the 101st Congress. During Senate consideration of S. 775, I agreed to modify the provision requiring investigation of pre-1970 military activities that might have exposed veterans to radiation but which are not considered radiation-risk activities under current law. The House now has agreed to the Senate-passed provisions with only minor technical changes. I am extremely pleased that the final version of this legislation includes this provision. In particular, I expect VA's examination would include, but not be limited to, service aboard nuclear-powered ships or ships carrying nuclear waste, flight crews, and radiation technicians. The House also added a new provision—requiring close examination of whether bronchio-alveolar carcinoma in radiation-exposed veterans should be presumed to be service connected—which I think is an improvement of the bill.

VALIDITY OF PRIOR STUDY ON EFFECTS OF RADIATION EXPOSURE

Mr. President, this is an appropriate time to discuss a separate, radiation-related matter. I was very disturbed by the findings of recent reports I requested from the General Accounting Office and the Office of Technology Assessment that confirmed that the Defense Nuclear Agency continued to distribute the results of a 1985 National Academy of Sciences study, entitled "Mortality of Nuclear Weapons Test Participants," after DNA itself acknowledged that data underlying the report's conclusion were seriously flawed.

The 1985 report concluded generally that veterans' participation in five atmospheric nuclear tests in the 1950's did not increase their risk of developing cancer. The errors contained in the date—which were provided by NAS by DNA—cast significant doubt on the validity of this conclusion.

Mr. President, I congratulate the National Academy of Sciences' Military Follow-Up Agency for its scientific integrity in raising appropriate concerns about the validity of the study's findings after MFUA learned of the flaws in data provided by DNA and the military services.

DNA, VA, and others have cited the 1985 report to bolster claims that service members, participation in atmospheric nuclear tests do not increase those individuals' risk of cancer or other illnesses. Unfortunately, DNA's continuing reliance on the 1985 report after it knew about the errors indicated a continuing attitude of denial and misinformation on the part of the Department of Defense which is the agency assigned lead responsibility for dealing with questions affecting radiation-exposed veterans.

Mr. President, I have written to the Secretary of Defense asking him to notify those who received the flawed report about the new doubts concerning its conclusions.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of that letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U. S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, September 9, 1992.

Hon. DICK CHENEY,
Secretary of Defense, The Pentagon, Washington, DC.

DEAR DICK: As Chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am writing to you about the 1985 National Academy of Sciences report, entitled Mortality of Nuclear Weapons Test Participants, of a study performed by the NAS Medical Follow-Up Agency under contract to the Defense Nuclear Agency and the Department of Energy. The report concluded that the mortality rate from cancer (including leukemia, which was of particular concern) among the combined military participants at five nuclear-weapons test sites was less than the rate expected for the general population.

DNA, VA, and other government agencies have cited the 1985 report to bolster claims that servicemembers' participation in atmospheric nuclear tests did not increase those individuals' risk of cancer or other illnesses. However, over three years ago, DNA identified major errors in the data that the various military services and DNA itself had supplied to MFUA, which formed the basis of the study. The errors cast significant doubt on the validity of the reported results.

Last year, I asked two congressional agencies—the Office of Technology Assessment and the General Accounting Office—to investigate the inaccuracies in the data upon which the 1985 NAS report was based. I asked OTA to examine the accuracy of the data, the effect of any errors on the validity of the 1985 study and report, and the effect of the study's failure to include a control population. I asked GAO to review when and how any inaccuracies occurred and were discovered and what actions had been taken to inform those who might have relied upon the study of the potential flaws in it, to correct the data, and to update the study.

OTA and GAO have completed their reviews, copies of which are enclosed. As you can see, both GAO, in its report entitled "NUCLEAR HEALTH AND SAFETY: Mortality Study of Atmospheric Nuclear Test Participants Is Flawed" GAO/RCED-92-182 (1992), and OTA, in its review entitled "A Discussion of Questions About the 1985 NAS Report Mortality of Nuclear Weapons Test Participants" (Aug. 1992), concluded that errors in the data provided to MFUA for the 1985 study invalidate the conclusions of the study.

GAO reported that DNA continued to distribute the NAS report after DNA had identified the errors in 1989—without providing any indication that the report contained flawed data or that its conclusions were in doubt—and only stopped distributing the report in August 1991, apparently as a result of the GAO inquiry I had initiated.

OTA stated that, although DNA's initial estimates of the number of errors in data used for the 1985 report were overstated, "[e]ven the lower numbers [of errors] are substantial and the inaccuracies may have affected the results of the study." OTA also noted, "The dose information on the current roster [of participants] also has been updated and differs substantially from that used for the 1985 study, and these dose changes could affect analyses looking at cancer risks by exposure levels (dose-response analyses), which formed part of the original report."

Hearings, investigations, and other oversight and legislative efforts by our Committee since the late 1970s demonstrated an apparently pervasive attitude of denial by DOD, especially through DNA, and other government agencies of the dangers to which our nation's veterans were exposed, sometimes with government knowledge of the risks, in connection with the nuclear-weapons test program. I had hoped that the government had moved beyond such a counterproductive attitude and faced up to its responsibilities to these veterans, in light of the evidence provided by reports such as GAO's 1985 report of its investigation of Operation CROSSROADS, entitled "OPERATION CROSSROADS: Personnel Radiation Exposure Estimates Should Be Improved" (GAO/RCED-86-15), and its 1987 report entitled "NUCLEAR HEALTH AND SAFETY: Radiation Exposures for Some Cloud-Sampling Personnel Need to Be Reexamined" (GAO/RCED-87-134).

Unfortunately, the actions DNA took or failed to take in connection with the discovery of flawed data in the 1985 report indicate a continuing attitude of denial and misinformation on the part of the DOD agency assigned lead responsibility for dealing with questions affecting radiation-exposed veterans.

I was pleased to see that DOD comments on GAO's draft report indicate that DNA has agreed to "notify the approximately 700 institutions and the Department of Veterans' Affairs Regional Offices, which previously received copies of the study, and the Veterans' Service Organizations (and through them their constituent veterans) of the limitations in the 1985 Mortality Study and the update to that report. * * * The Defense Nuclear Agency expects to complete these actions by September 30, 1992."

However, the GAO report also indicated that DNA provided the 1985 study to "all state libraries and libraries located in large cities" and sent information concerning the study, including the press release [summarizing the study], to about 45,000 veterans of the atmospheric nuclear weapons testing program." In addition, GAO and OTA identified six scientific papers that cited the 1985 report. I believe that DOD should make every effort to inform these other recipients of the original report, and the authors of the scientific papers, about the questionable validity of the 1985 report, and I would like to know whether you plan to take steps to provide the information to these other recipients of the reports.

GAO also reported that DNA expected to sign a contract, by the end of July 1992, with NAS for MFUA to update the 1985 study. What is the status of this contract and what is the status of the notices DNA expected to send out by the end of September?

I would appreciate receiving your reply to these questions by September 17, 1992. I also would appreciate receiving copies of all notices, letters, or similar materials you have sent or intend to use to inform interested individuals or institutions about the problems with the 1985 report.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Chairman.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I express my appreciation to the distinguished ranking Republican member of our committee, Mr. SPECTER, and all other members of the committee, as well as the chairman and ranking Republican member of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Mr. MONTGOMERY and Mr. STUMP, for their cooperation on this measure.

Mr. President, I also express my deep gratitude to the committee staff members who worked on this legislation—on the minority staff, Quent Kinderman and Tom Roberts, and on the majority staff, Neil Koren, Susan Thaul, Michael Cogan, Bill Brew, and Ed Scott—and the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs staff—John Brizzi, Pat Ryan, and Mack Fleming for the majority and Sue Forrest and Carl Commentator for the minority.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to give its unanimous approval to this measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the explanatory statement to which I referred earlier, and which the Veterans' Affairs Committees have prepared in lieu of a joint explanatory statement accompanying a conference report, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT ON S. 775

S. 775 reflects a compromise agreement that the Senate and House of Representatives Committees on Veterans' Affairs have reached on certain bills considered in the Senate and the House of Representatives during the 102d Congress. These are S. 775, which the Senate passed on November 20, 1991 (hereinafter referred to as "Senate bill") and H.R. 3236, which the House passed on August 4, 1992 (hereinafter referred to as "House bill").

The Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives have prepared the following explanation of S. 775 as amended (hereinafter referred to as the "compromise agreement"). Differences between the provisions contained in the compromise agreement and the related provisions in the above-mentioned bills are noted in this document, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by the compromise agreement, and minor drafting, technical, and clarifying changes.

EXPANSION OF LIST OF DISEASES PRESUMED TO BE SERVICE CONNECTED FOR CERTAIN RADIATION-EXPOSED VETERANS AND ELIMINATION OF LATENCY-PERIOD LIMITATIONS

Current law: Section 1112(c) of title 38, United States Code, provides a presumption of service connection for 13 diseases in veterans who participated in a radiation-risk activity. These disease are: Leukemia (other than chronic lymphocytic leukemia), multiple myeloma, lymphomas (except Hodgkin's disease), primary liver cancer (except if cirrhosis or hepatitis B is indicated), and cancers of the thyroid, breast, pharynx, esophagus, stomach, small intestine, pancreas, bile ducts, and gall bladder. Section 1112(c)(4) defines "radiation-risk activity" as participation onsite at an atmospheric nuclear weapons test; participation in the occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki, Japan, during World War II from August 6, 1945, to July 1, 1946; or internment as a prisoner of war in Japan during World War II, or service on active duty in Japan following such internment, resulting in an opportunity for exposure to radiation.

Senate bill: Section 5, effective May 1, 1992, would, (a) repeal the requirement that, to be presumed service connected, diseases listed in section 1112(c) of veterans who participated in radiation-risk activities become at least 10-percent disabling within a specified time after the veterans' last exposure to radiation, and (b) add to the list of diseases cancer of the salivary gland and cancer of the urinary tract.

House bill: Section 2 is substantively identical to the Senate provision, except it would take effect October 1, 1992.

Compromise agreement: Section 2 contains this provision with the October 1, 1992, effective date.

IDENTIFICATION OF CERTAIN ACTIVITIES RELATING TO EXPOSURE TO IONIZING RADIATION

Current law: Section 6 of the Veterans' Dioxin and Radiation Exposure Compensation Standards Act of 1984, Public Law 98-542, established the Veteran's Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards. The Agent Orange Act of 1991, Public Law 102-4, modified the Advisory Committee's responsibilities to include only the review and evaluation of scientific studies on the health effects of exposure to ionizing radiation. The Advisory Committee submits to the Secretary recommendations concerning administrative and legislative actions the Advisory Committee considers appropriate to recognize disabilities possibly related to exposure to radiation during veterans' participation in an atmospheric nuclear weapons test or the occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki during World War II.

As noted above, section 1112(c) of title 38 provides a presumption of service connection for 13 radiogenic diseases that applies to veterans who participated in "radiation-risk" activities, which include atmospheric nuclear weapons tests, the occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki during World War II, or internment in Japan during the war, or service in Japan following such internment, that resulted in an opportunity for exposure to radiation.

Senate bill: Section 6 would amend Public Law 98-542 to establish a mechanism to determine whether veterans who participated in activities not considered "radiation-risk" activities under current law suffer from disabilities as a result of exposure to radiation during active duty prior to January 1, 1970. It would require the Advisory Committee to review all available scientific and other relevant information concerning these veterans' exposure to radiation during their service and, by September 30, 1992, report to the Secretary on its recommendations on the feasibility and appropriateness of additional investigation to determine whether the veterans suffer from radiogenic disabilities.

The Secretary would be required, upon request of the Advisory Committee and after seeking the assistance of the Secretary of Defense, to submit to the Advisory Committee information that would assist the Advisory Committee in carrying out its review and making its recommendations.

The Secretary, after receiving the Advisory Committee's report, would be required to identify which activities, if any, the Secretary intends to investigate more fully to determine whether these veterans suffer from radiogenic disabilities. The Secretary also would be required to prepare a plan for carrying out the additional investigation and making the required determination, including a deadline for completing the plan. The Secretary would be required to submit a report to the Veterans' Affairs Committees by April 1, 1993, listing the activities the Secretary intends to investigate further and containing the plan for the investigation and required determination.

House bill: Section 3 is similar to the Senate provision, except that the Secretary would be required to determine whether there are activities that could have resulted in radiation exposure without the benefit of monitoring systems during pre-1970 military service, rather than determining whether there are veterans who suffer from disabilities from such exposure. The Advisory Committee would be required to identify activities during which significant numbers of veterans received unmonitored exposure to radiation.

The Advisory Committee would report to the Secretary by April 1, 1993, and the Secretary would report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs by August 1, 1993. The Secretary's report would be required to include a copy of the Advisory Committee's report to the Secretary.

Compromise agreement: Section 3 contains a provision derived from these provisions which would amend the Veterans' Dioxin and Radiation Exposure Compensation Standards Act (Public Law 98-542). The Advisory Committee would be required to identify any activity during which significant numbers of veterans were exposed to radiation. The Secretary would be required to identify which, if any, of those activities the Secretary intends to investigate more fully in order to determine whether the identified activities (other than those currently considered radiation-risk activities) resulted in the exposure of veterans to ionizing radiation during pre-1970 military service and whether adverse health effects have been observed or may have resulted from the exposure in a significant number of these veterans.

The Advisory Committee would report to the Secretary by August 1, 1993, and the Secretary would report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs by December 1, 1993. The report also would be required to include a copy of the Advisory Committee's report to the Secretary.

REVIEW OF BRONCHIO-ALVEOLAR CARCINOMA

Current law: There is no presumption of service connection for bronchio-alveolar cancer in current law.

Senate bill: No provision.

House bill: Section 4 would require the Secretary to direct the Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards to review pertinent scientific evidence to determine whether bronchio-alveolar carcinoma should be considered radiogenic and to report its findings to the Secretary. The Secretary would be required, by April 1, 1993, to report to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs on the Secretary's decision whether, based on the Advisory Committee's report, bronchio-alveolar carcinoma should be presumed to be service connected for radiation-exposed veterans.

Compromise agreement: Section 4 contains the House provision.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

INTERMODAL SAFE CONTAINER TRANSPORTATION ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 3598, the Intermodal Safe Container Transportation Act just received from the House; that the bill be deemed read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table. Further, that a statement by Senator EXON appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place as if read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill was deemed read the third time and passed.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Surface Transportation Subcommittee, I am pleased that the Senate is considering the Intermodal Safe Container Transportation Act of 1992 as passed by the House of Representatives on October 4, 1992. I introduced this legislation in the Senate to address the problem of overweight shipping containers which has become acute for the Nation's trucking industry. The bill represents a consensus among the shipping community and the trucking, rail, and maritime industries, and I am pleased that Senators GORTON, PRESSLER, and INOUYE are cosponsors.

For several years, the trucking, rail, maritime, and shipping industries have sought compromise legislation to address the problem of transporting containerized cargo safely when the hauling capacity of many containers exceeds the weights that can be legally transported over U.S. highways. Overweight containers raise key safety concerns for truckers and the motoring public through increased truck-stopping distances, decreased vehicle control, and increased mechanical stress on critical truck parts.

Although overweight intermodal shipments are illegal, trucking companies in particular have had no control over the weight and loading of containers and trailers and have faced fines and penalties when their loads are determined to be overweight. This problem has become more acute as intermodal transportation has grown through steady increases in international trade and containerization of both overseas and domestic freight.

The legislation being considered today is an amendment in the nature of a substitute to H.R. 3598, the Intermodal Safe Container Transportation Act, introduced on October 22, 1991, by Congresswoman HELEN BENTLEY. I would like to thank my colleagues in the House for their important contribution on this issue, as well as the various parties to the negotiations, including the motor-carrier, railroad, steamship, public port industries, and the shipping community. In summary, this legislation seeks to distribute equitably the responsibilities and liabilities of overweight intermodal shipments among all parties to an intermodal movement—shippers and carriers—and ensures that cargo weights and descriptions are provided by the tenderer of the load prior to highway transportation of the freight.

I urge my colleagues to pass this important legislative initiative.

THE NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION AND THE LAND REMOTE SENSING POLICY ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration en bloc to the following bills just received from the House. H.R. 6135, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration authorization, and H.R. 6133, the Land Remote Sensing Policy Act; that the bills be deemed read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider laid upon the table en bloc, that any statements relative to this measure be placed in the RECORD at the appropriate place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bills (H.R. 6135, and H.R. 6133) were deemed read the third time and passed.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring to the Senate the fiscal year 1933 authorization bill for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration [NASA]. I urge my colleagues to join me in passing this bill.

The legislation before us today, which is a 1-year authorization, provides a total of $14.892 billion for NASA for fiscal year 1993. This is above the amount provided in the Veterans Affairs, HUD, and independent agencies appropriations bill, which because of constrained allocations was forced to freeze NASA at fiscal year 1992 levels. However, in developing this authorization bill, every effort has been made to establish priorities for NASA that will strengthen the Nation's civil space program and, correspondingly, the American aerospace community. In this regard, for example, the bill makes over $600 million in reductions to the President's request in a number of nonessential programs, while preserving funding for higher priority programs such as the advanced solid rocket motor.

H.R. 6135 also authorizes funds for our other civil space agencies, including the National Space Council, the Department of Transportation's Office of Commercial Space Transportation, and the Office of Space Commerce in the Department of Commerce. It also includes a series of policy initiatives that will help NASA and the Nation's civil space and aeronautics research and technology development program.

The bill is the culmination of work done by the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and in particular the distinguished chairman of the Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee, Senator GORE. Also, this bill represents a compromise with our colleagues in the House of Representatives.

I urge passage of H.R. 6135. I ask unanimous consent that, following my statement, there be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a spread sheet outlining the changes made to the President's fiscal year 1993 budget request for NASA, as well as a brief summary of the bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

H.R. 6135 NASA AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEAR 1993

Budget Estimates. Directs the NASA Administrator to submit annually a five-year budget on the development costs of major NASA programs, including the Space Station, as well as an estimate of the life-cycle costs associated with each program.

International Space Year. Expresses the sense of the Congress that the Space Agency Forum on International Space Year (SAFISY) should maintain its role in the coordinating Earth and space science research findings, and that NASA and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) should implement the proposals for long-term multilateral cooperation that were developed during the International Space Year. Directs NASA to submit to Congress its plan for continuing SAFISY.

Russian Space Cooperation. Directs the President to report to the Congress on 1) opportunities for increased space related trade with the independent states of the former Soviet Union; 2) a technology procurement plan for evaluating unique space hardware, technology, and services available to the U.S., and 3) any barriers or anticompetitive issues that might inhibit space-related trade between the two countries. Requires any Federal agency which denies a license or other approval that may be needed to conduct discussions on space-related matters with the former Soviet Union to notify the Congress of such denial, along with justification.

Launch Technology Studies. Directs the NASA Administrator to submit to the Congress an independent analysis of the Single Stage Rocket Technology program and the potential application of this launch technology to the civil space program. Also directs the National Space Council to submit to the Congress a national aerospace transportation technology plan.

National Aerospace Plane Reprogramming. Authorizes the NASA Administrator to reprogram up to $45 million of the funds authorized for the Research and Development appropriation account for continued development of the National Aerospace Plane.

TITLE III—EPSCOR PROGRAM

Promulgation of Regulations. Requires NASA, within 180 days after completion of the acquisition policy assessment, to initiate a rulemaking proceeding on the administration of R&D contracts which propose changes to NASA procurement regulations.

TITLE V—COMMERCIAL SPACE COMPETITIVENESS

Space Transportation Infrastructure Grant Program. Authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to establish a program to make grants for the development of commercial space transportation infrastructure. Authorizes $10 million in FY 1993 for this program. Limits the Federal share to 50 percent of the total project costs, while requiring that there be at least 10 percent private sector contribution before any grant is awarded.

Commercial Launch Indemnification. Extends until the year 2000 the requirement in current law which makes the Federal government responsible for public liability claims, above private insurance and not to exceed $1.5 billion, that may result from an accident related to a commercial launch.

Technology Transfer. Authorizes the NASA Administrator to protect against the dissemination of certain information resulting from R&D activities conducted under an agreement entered into by NASA. The protection would be for a period of up to 5 years after the development of that information and would apply to any trade secret or commercial or financial information that is privileged or confidential, if obtained from a non-Federal party participating in such agreements.

Anchor Tenancy/Termination Liability. Authorizes the Administrators of NASA and NOAA, subject to appropriations, to enter into multi-year anchor tenancy contracts to purchase a good or service, provided that it meets the agency mission requirements; commercial procurement is cost-effective; it is procured through a competitive process; there are other existing or potential customers other than the Federal government; and private capital is at risk. These contracts may provide for termination liability payments in the event that the government terminates such contracts.

SETI FUNDING/NASA AUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, in most respects, I am pleased to support the pending legislation the NASA authorization bill for fiscal year 1993.

There is one issue related to this legislation, however, that concerns me. During the Commerce Committee's markup of H.R. 4364, I offered an amendment to delete $13.5 million in funding for a program called the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence [SETI]. In my view, and in the view of the majority of Commerce Committee members, the limited potential benefits of the SETI program do not justify funding under today's tight budget constraints.

The House of Representatives agrees with this assessment, and has also deleted funding for the SETI program as part of the NASA authorization. The House also deleted funding for SETI in its VA/HUD appropriations bill.

Unfortunately, the Senate Appropriations Committee disagreed, and restored funding for SETI. The Senate position prevailed in the Conference Committee, and, in spite of language to the contrary that will be included in the authorization bill, SETI will be funded for fiscal year 1993. During consideration of the appropriations bill, I withheld from offering an amendment to delete funding for SETI, assuming that the language in the authorizing legislation would be sufficient to terminate the program. Unfortunately, this is not the case.

With great media hype, the SETI program, renamed in order to avoid the restrictions included in this bill, will begin surveying the skies for signs of extraterrestrials next Monday.

Mr. President, I am not opposed to scientific research. I simply believe that we must establish some system of priorities for Federal spending. While the amount of funding in question is small by Federal standards, $13.5 million during fiscal year 1993 could have a large impact if directed to other, more important programs. For example, $13.5 million could purchase 115 new homes in Las Vegas, pay the tuition of more that 10,000 students at UNLV, or provide day care for 1 year for 3,700 toddlers.

I am pleased that the $13.5 million reduction in authorization for NASA programs remains in this legislation, but am distressed that a program with so little support in Congress will be allowed to continue.

FY 1993 NASA AUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, as the ranking Republican member of the Commerce Committee, I urge my colleagues to join me in support of H.R. 4364, the NASA authorization bill for fiscal year 1993. At a time of heightened concern about U.S. competitiveness, the United States stands as the undisputed leader in civil space. In 1990, the United States experienced a $101 billion deficit, but the aerospace industry showed a $27.3 billion surplus. The bill seeks to maintain our leadership in space by funding a robust and balanced mix of activities in such areas as space exploration, space science, and aeronautics.

The bill authorizes $14.89 billion for NASA in fiscal year 93. This authorization is a two percent increase over fiscal year 92 funding levels, and only a two percent decrease from the President's budget request of $14.99 billion. This funding level will enable NASA to continue its current core programs, including its most ambitious initiatives: space station Freedom and "Mission to Planet Earth."

Mr. President, the bill supports most space programs at the levels recommended in the President's budget request. For instance, the substitute authorizes $2.1 billion of the $2.2 billion requested for space station. Space station is a joint project involving the United States and its international partners: Canada, Western Europe, and Japan. As research and development projects become increasingly complex and expensive, cooperative efforts like space station will be more important. For our Nation's part, tens of thousands of Americans in over 35 States, including my State of Missouri, are working hard to make space station Freedom a reality. If past NASA missions are any indication, in its quest to expand our understanding of the universe, space station may also generate important breakthroughs in such areas as biomedicine and materials research that will boost our economy and improve the quality of lives.

Mr. President, the bill continues full support for "Mission to Planet Earth" and related Earth science programs. This year, the Commerce Committee heard alarming testimony about the climate threats such as global warming and ozone depletion. It is vital for us and for future generations that we apply our satellite and computer technology to understand the scope and impact of these global climate changes. Mission to Planet Earth will provide scientists with the information to analyze these environmental threats so that policy makers can fashion appropriate remedies.

The bill authorizes $45 million for the National Aerospace Plane [NASP], $40 million more than the $5.0 million appropriated for fiscal year 1992. If successful, this program may eventually produce a plane that is capable of taking off from a runway, vaulting into orbit at Mach 25, and landing conventionally. Regrettably, however, the fiscal year 1993 appropriations legislation for NASA did not fund this program. This decision is shortsighted. Even its critics concede that NASP holds the promise of revolutionizing not just access to space, but commercial and military aviation as well. The bill seeks to provide NASA with flexibility in handling the program by authorizing NASA to reprogram up to $45 million from its research and development account to fund NASP.

The bill also provides full funding for NASA's other space transportation, space science and core activities. This past year NASA's programs were distinguished by several notable successes. For example, this May, the importance of manned space flight was dramatically demonstrated by the shuttle rescue of a wayward communications satellite by the crew of the Space Shuttle Endeavour in its maiden mission. The crews courage, resourcefulness, and grace under pressure were an inspiration to us all. Similarly, in September, NASA successfully launched its Mars observer spacecraft on its 11-month, 450-million-mile voyage to the Red Planet. The spacecraft will map the surface of the planet and analyze its atmosphere to lay the groundwork for any future manned missions to Mars.

Mr. President, with the end of the cold war, it is incumbent upon the United States and the former Soviet Union to seize this opportunity to share knowledge and resources to enhance our space programs. To this end, the bill directs the National Space Council, in consultation with NASA, to evaluate and prepare a plan for increased cooperation with the former Soviet Union. To their credit, the two nations are already developing joint projects. I understand that NASA and the former Soviet Union are already considering flying a cosmonaut on the Shuttle; flying an astronaut to the Russian space station Mir; and docking the shuttle at Mir. NASA is also looking at using the Soyuz vehicle as a possible rescue vehicle for space station Freedom rather than developing a new billion dollar vehicle. These kinds of cooperative efforts with our former space rival can only strengthen the space programs, as well as the economies, of both nations.

Mr. President, one of the ways to enhance U.S. competitiveness is to stimulate and create new markets. Commercial space may be the next high-tech global marketplace. The market for developing, building, and launching commercial and government spacecraft already generates billions of dollars for firms in the United States, Western Europe, China, the former Soviet Union and other countries. To help U.S. firms compete in this arena, the bill authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to provide up to $10 billion in matching funds to construct and improve the Nation's launch pads and other infrastructure needed for commercial space launches.

Mr. President, the bill contains a provision that I sponsored which would establish an Institute for Aviation Weather Prediction in Kansas City, MO. This institute would build on the existing aviation weather unit located within the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in the city. The institute is aimed at providing up-to-date weather watches, warnings and forecasts that are vital to the safety of the aviation community. The provision merely codifies existing National Weather Services plans in connection with its comprehensive modernization initiative. I would like to thank the National Weather Service for its work with the committee on this provision.

Mr. President, investment in our space program is an investment in our future. I strongly urge my colleagues to continue our leadership in civil space by voting for H.R. 4364.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN COMMEMORATIVE MEDAL

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 2448, a bill to provide for the minting of medals in commemoration of Benjamin Franklin and to enact a fair service bill of rights just received from the House, that the bill be deemed read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, that any statement on passage of this bill appear at the appropriate place in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today in support of H.R. 2448, the Benjamin Franklin commemorative medal bill. Volunteer and career firefighters are the beneficiaries of the legislation before us. The bill will be a tremendous help to the one million men and women in the fire service community, 80 percent of whom risk life and limb as volunteers. It is clear there is far more that we should do to assist our Nation's firefighters, but passage of this bill will help in many important ways.

As this country enters into its third century, we need the kind of sacrifice and commitment represented by firefighters more than ever. America's firefighters keep this commitment alive in the face of incredible odds—fighting not only fires, but also finances and fatigue to keep their companies well-equipped and ready to respond.

The basic outline of the bill is quite simple. The bill authorizes the minting of commemorative medals honoring Ben Franklin, who founded our Nation's first fire company. Proceeds from the sale of the medals will support programs in the following areas: firefighter health, education, and training; burn research; scholarships for fire science and for survivors of fallen firefighters; arson prevention; and education programs for low-income areas that are especially hard hit by fires.

This bill is similar to S. 1451, legislation which Senator ROTH and I introduced and has 46 bipartisan cosponsors. H.R. 2448 has been amended in the House to authorize a commemorative medal instead of a commemorative coin. This alternative is a unique and less costly option, while still providing an important source of revenue to these crucial firefighter initiatives.

No cost to the taxpayer is involved with this bill. Financial assurances in the bill assure the Federal Government's recovery of design, minting, and marketing expenses. Additionally, funds granted through the program cannot be used to pay administrative costs. The proceeds from the sale of the medals will go to the men and women working in the dangerous—and sometimes deadly—battle against fire.

The battle against fire claims more than 6,000 victims and causes over $10 billion in property damage each year. More than one hundred of those victims were men and women who were at the site fighting the fire, trying to prevent further damage and destruction. Another 100,000 are injured saving children trapped in burning bedrooms, preventing a hazardous chemical from destroying a small town, or averting an explosion that could wipe out a city block. That is why the training is important and why I have supported efforts to improve the equipment rural and urban companies have to put out the flames.

My home State of Delaware, with approximately 4,000 firefighters, is not atypical in its need for increased resources. Of the 60 fire companies in Delaware, 58 are volunteer, depending heavily on contributions from local supporters to meet their financial requirements. For while they often contribute their time and effort, Delaware's firefighters face skyrocketing costs and rising demands.

Each call response costs a fire company at least $1,500, with or without a fire. Protective gear worn by the firefighters can cost in excess of $2000 per person. Replacing trucks and other heavy equipment easily clears $250,000 on some vehicles.

Those costs are compounded by the increase in emergency calls. In Delaware in 1980, 15,000 emergency calls were made. Ten years later, that figure had nearly tripled to 40,000. My State's population has grown only 13 percent during that period. The demands on firefighters are outstripping their resources.

I would like to make clear the special benefit of volunteer fire services to communities both large and small. A recent report from the Delaware State Auditor's office assessed the value of their efforts. The report found that in the absence of volunteer fire and ambulance services in Delaware, taxpayers would have to pay nearly $70 million for comparable services.

Those who serve in career fire departments face a somewhat different but equally difficult challenge. With smaller and fewer companies spread further and further apart, with inner cities posing dangers that seemed unimaginable jut a few years ago, and with crumbling city finances, it has become much more demanding for career fire departments to keep their equipment up-to-date and well-maintained and to keep response times down.

All firefighters—volunteer and career alike—day after day, night after night, in narrow, crowded city streets or far out along lonely country roads, meet fire and disaster head on with great skill and courage. Appropriately, the bill we are about to send to the President recognizes the vital role of all firefighters to our Nation. The foundations funded by this bill support programs to give firefighters better training and equipment, to educate the public about the threat of fire, and to help develop better ways to treat the victims of fire.

Almost 20 years ago, the landmark report entitled "America Burning" opened the Nation's eyes to the extent of destruction caused by fire. Since then, tremendous progress has been made—but there is much more to be done. I know from personal experience how important fire service companies are to individuals and communities facing emergencies. This legislation is an important step toward regaining the initiative on reducing deaths, injuries, and damage from fire, and it has the strong support of the fire service community. Therefore, Mr. President, I'm pleased the Senate and Congress today has taken this step by passing the Benjamin Franklin Fire Service Bill of Rights Act.

Finally, as my colleagues know, this legislation's success in the Senate was built on the fine work of our late colleague, John Heinz, who introduced the firefighter bill in the 101st Congress. With the persistence of the originator of this proposal, Congressman CURT WELDON, we have not lost this opportunity to support America's firefighters.

I would also like to thank the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Banking Committee, Senators RIEGLE and GARN, for the attention they have given this legislation and for expediting its consideration and passage.

The bill (H.R. 2448) was deemed read the third time and passed.

JUVENILE ARTHRITIS RESEARCH EXCELLENCE ACT

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3371, a bill introduced earlier today by Senator SHELBY providing for research with respect to juvenile arthritis; that the bill be read a third time, passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements thereon appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place as though read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 3371) was deemed read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 3371

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

"(a) Filing Requirements.—(1) Any party claiming to be a holder of a right-of-way across public or other Federal lands for the construction of a highway pursuant to a grant made by Revised Statutes section 2477 (43 U.S.C. 932) that became operative before repeal of such section on October 21, 1976, shall, on or before January 1, 1994, file for record in the office or offices of the Bureau of Land Management responsible for management of public lands within the State or States wherein such claimed right-of-way is located either a notice of intent to hold and maintain the right-of-way or a notice of abandonment of such party's claim to be the holder of such right-of-way. A notice of intent to hold and maintain such a right-of-way shall be accompanied by information concerning the actual construction, maintenance, and public use on which such party bases its claim to have established such a right-of-way, and by such other information regarding the uses, location, and extent of such claimed right-of-way as the Secretary of the Interior may require. The Secretary may allow information already in the possession of the Bureau of Land Management to be included by reference to the documents in which such information is recorded.

"(2) A party filing a notice pursuant to paragraph (1) shall also simultaneously file a copy thereof in the appropriate office of any other agency responsible for management of any Federal lands traversed by the claimed right-of-way, and shall give public notice of the party's intention to hold and maintain or to abandon the claimed right-of-way by publication of information concerning such intention in one or more newspapers of general circulation in the areas where the affected lands are located.

"(b) EFFECT.—(1) The failure of any party subject to the requirements of subsection (a) to file the notices or to publish the information required to be filed and published by such subsection within the time specified by such subsection shall be conclusively deemed to constitute an abandonment and relinquishment of a right-of-way with respect to which such filing and publication is required by such subsection.

"(2) Recordation pursuant to this section shall not, of itself, render valid any claim which would not otherwise be valid under applicable law or provide a basis for changing the scope, alignment, or character or extent of use of any claimed right-of-way; and nothing in this section shall be construed as waiving, altering, or otherwise affecting any terms or conditions applicable to any right-of-way under this Act or any other applicable law.

"(c) INVESTIGATIONS.—(1) Upon receipt of a notice filed pursuant to subsection (a) that a party intends to hold and maintain a claimed right-of-way involving any lands specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary of the Interior, acting through an appropriate officer of the Bureau of Land Management or (if any portion of a claimed right-of-way covered by this subsection is located within a unit of the National Park System) of the National Park Service, shall conduct an investigation to determine the validity of each such claimed right-of-way. The Secretary shall provide an opportunity for the public to contest or request an investigation of the validity of any other claimed right-of-way.

"(2)(A) The Secretary shall investigate the validity of each claimed right-of-way any portion of which involves—

"(i) any lands within the National Park System, the National Wild and Scenic River System, or the National Wilderness Preservation System; or

"(ii) any lands being managed so as to preserve their suitability for designation as wilderness, pursuant to section 603 of this Act or any other provision of law or regulation; or

"(iii) any area of critical environmental concern; or

"(iv) any other lands whose use for highway purposes would be inconsistent with the land-use plans for those lands.

"(B) The Secretary shall also investigate any claimed right-of-way not involving lands specified in subparagraph (A) but with respect to which a challenge is filed that states grounds which, if proved or confirmed, would constitute reason to doubt the validity of such claimed right-or-way or any portion thereof.

"(3) If any portion of such claimed right-of-way is on Federal lands managed by an agency other than the Bureau of Land Management or the National Park Service, the investigating officer shall request the comments of such agency with respect to the validity of such right-of-way.

"(4) Appropriate notice to the public, including the owners of any non-Federal lands affected by the claimed right-of-way, shall be provided with respect to initiation of each investigation carried out pursuant to this paragraph, and the investigating officer shall provide an opportunity for the public to submit comments concerning the subject of the investigation.

"(5) If information or comments submitted to the investigating officer demonstrate that there is a dispute as to any relevant facts with respect to the validity of a right-of-way subject to an investigation under this paragraph, the parties to such dispute shall be afforded an adjudicatory hearing on the record with respect to such disputed issues of fact. Any such adjudicatory hearing shall be before a qualified administrative law judge whose findings shall govern disposition of such issues of fact in any determination concerning the validity of a claimed right-of-way, subject to administrative and judicial review under applicable provisions of law.

"(6) If after an investigation pursuant to this paragraph, the investigating officer finds either that a claimed right-of-way or portion thereof is valid or that there is reason to doubt the validity of such claimed right-of-way or portion thereof, notice of such finding and the reasons therefor shall be provided to the party claiming the right-of-way and to all other affected parties, including the public.

"(7) For purposes of this section, if any portion of a claimed right-of-way includes lands managed pursuant to section 603 of this Act, that fact shall constitute a reason to doubt the validity of such portion of such right-of-way.

"(d) APPEALS.—(1) Any claimed right-of-way or portion thereof with respect to which it is found, pursuant to subsection (c), that there is reason to doubt the validity, shall be deemed to be invalid unless, within 30 days after such finding the party claiming the right-of-way has filed with the Secretary of the Interior an appeal of such finding, and the Secretary thereafter determines the right-of-way to be valid. Any party other than the party claiming the right-of-way, may intervene in any appeal filed under this paragraph in support of the finding of invalidity by filing with the Secretary a notice of such intervention within the period allowed for filing of the appeal.

"(2) Any finding by the investigating officer with regard to the validity or invalidity of a claimed right-of-way or portion thereof valid shall become final unless within 30 days after such finding a notice of appeal of such finding is filed with the Secretary of the Interior.

"(3) Any decision by the Secretary with regard to an appeal under this subsection shall be made after the party claiming or contesting a right-of-way has been provided with the evidence upon which the investigating officer's finding regarding its validity or invalidity was based and has been given an opportunity to respond, including an adjudicatory hearing on the record with respect to any disputed issues of fact.

"(4)(A) Pending a final determination of validity with respect to a claimed right-of-way that is subject to an appeal under this subsection, the Federal land covered by such claimed right-of-way shall be managed in accordance with applicable law (including this Act) and management plans as if such right-of-way did not exist, except that such lands may continue to be used for lawful transportation, access, and related purposes of the same nature and to the same extent as was properly permitted by the Secretary on the date of enactment of this section. Any such continued uses shall be subject to appropriate regulations to protect the resources and values of the affected lands.

"(B) Upon a final determination of invalidity with respect to a claimed right-of-way subject to an appeal under paragraph (3), Federal lands covered by such claimed right-of-way shall be managed in accordance with applicable law and management plans.

"(C) A determination by an investigating officer as to the validity or invalidity of a claimed right-of-way may be appealed to the Secretary by any person, provided such appeal is made no later than 30 days after the determination of the investigating officer. Any person filing such an appeal shall be afforded an adjudicatory hearing on the record with regard to any disputed issue of fact. Any decision of the Secretary regarding such an appeal shall be subject to judicial review.

"(5) Any decision by the Secretary pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to judicial review under applicable provisions of law, but nothing in this subsection shall be construed as affording any right to seek or participate in any judicial proceeding by any party not otherwise entitled to seek or participate in such proceeding.

"(e) CHANGE IN USE.—Any change in the scope, alignment, or character of use of a valid right-of-way established pursuant to Revised Statutes section 2477 shall be subject to terms and conditions required by section 505 of this Act or other applicable law.

"(f) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as increasing or diminishing the requirements of any applicable law with respect to establishment, construction, or maintenance of a highway for purposes of obtaining a valid right-of-way pursuant to Revised Statutes section 2477 prior to its repeal.

"SEC. 320. RIGHT-OF-WAY IN ALASKA CONSERVATION SYSTEM UNITS.

"Nothing in this Act shall be construed as exempting any proposal for any construction on or change in the scope, alignment, or character or extent of use of any portion of any right-of-way claimed to have been established pursuant to Revised Statutes section 2477 on any lands within any conservation system unit in Alaska from the requirements of title XI of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act.".

TITLE V—"IN LIEU" LAND CLAIMS

SEC. 501. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Pursuant to the invitation and requirements contained in the 15th paragraph under the heading "Surveying the Public Lands" in the Act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. 11, 36), as amended or supplemented by the Acts of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. 588, 614), March 4, 1901 (31 Stat. 1010, 1037), and September 22, 1922 (42 Stat. 1067), certain landowners or entrymen within forest reserves acted to transfer their lands to the United States as the basis for an in lieu selection of other Federal lands (hereafter in this Act referred to as "lieu lands") in exchange for such lands within such reserves (hereafter in this Act referred to as "base lands").

(2) By the Act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. 1264), Congress repealed the in lieu selection provisions of the Act of June 4, 1897, as amended, and terminated the right to select lieu lands, but expressly preserved the rights of land owners who had valid pending applications for in lieu selections, most of which have subsequently been granted.

(3) Other persons affected by the Acts cited in paragraphs (1) and (2) who acted to transfer base lands, or their successors in interest, have never obtained either (A) a patent to the lieu lands or any other consideration for their relinquishment, or (B) a quitclaim of their base lands, notwithstanding relief legislation enacted in 1922 and 1930.

(4) By the Act of July 6, 1960 (74 Stat. 334), Congress established a procedure to compensate persons affected by the Acts cited in paragraphs (1) and (2) who had not received appropriate relief under prior legislation. However, no payments of such compensation were made under that Act.

(5) Section 4 of the Act of July 6, 1960, further provided that lands with respect to which compensation under that Act were or could have been made, and not previously disposed of by the United States, shall be a part of any national forest, national park, or other area withdrawn from the public domain wherein they are located.

(6) Absent further legislation, lengthy and expensive litigation will be required to resolve existing questions about the title to lands covered by section 4 of the 1960 Act.

(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this title is to resolve the status of the title to base lands affected by the past legislation cited in subsection (a).

SEC. 502. IDENTIFICATION AND QUITCLAIM OF FEDERAL INTEREST IN BASE LANDS.

(a) Quitclaim.—Except as otherwise provided by this Act, and subject to valid existing rights, but notwithstanding any other provision of law, the United States hereby quitclaims to the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the base lands described on a final list published pursuant to subsection (d)(1), effective on the date of publication of such list.

(b) Preparation of Initial Lists.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, with respect to lands under such Secretary's jurisdiction, and the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to National Forest System lands, shall each prepare an initial list of all parcels of base lands that were relinquished to the United States pursuant to the Act of June 4, 1897 (as amended), and for which selection or other rights under that Act or supplemental legislation were not realized or exercised.

(2) The initial lists prepared under paragraph (1) shall be based on information in the actual possession of the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture on the date of enactment of this Act, including information submitted to Congress pursuant to the directive contained in Senate Report No. 98–578, issued for the Fiscal Year 1985 Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation, as revised and updated. The initial lists shall be published and distributed for public review in accordance with procedures adopted by the Secretary concerned.

(3) For a period of 180 days after publication of a list pursuant to paragraph (2), persons asserting that particular parcels omitted from such a list should have been included may request the Secretary concerned to add such parcels to the appropriate list. The Secretary concerned shall add to the list any such parcels which the Secretary determines meet the conditions specified in paragraph (1).

(c) Nationally Significant Lands.—(1) During preparation or revision of an initial list under subsection (b), the Secretary concerned shall identify those listed lands which are located wholly or partially within any conservation system unit and all other listed lands which Congress has designated for specific management or which the Secretary concerned decides, in the concerned Secretary's discretion, should be retained in order to meet public, resource protection, or administrative needs. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "conservation system unit" means any unit of the National Park System, National Wildlife Refuge System, National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, National Trails System, or National Wilderness Preservation System, a national forest monument, or a national conservation area, a national recreation area, or any lands being studied for possible designation as part of such a system or unit.

(2) The provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to any lands identified by the Secretary concerned pursuant to paragraph (1). The Secretary concerned shall not include any such lands on any list prepared pursuant to subsection (d). Subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than those described in subsection (b)(1), any right, title, and interest in and to lands identified pursuant to paragraph (1) and not previously vested in the United States is hereby vested and confirmed in the United States.

(3) In the same manner as the initial list was published and distributed pursuant to subsection (b)(2), the Secretary concerned shall publish and distribute an identification of all lands in which right, title, and interest is vested and confirmed in the United States by paragraph (2).

(d) Final Lists.—(1) As soon as possible after considering any requests made pursuant to subsection (b)(3) and the identification of lands pursuant to subsection (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall each publish a final list, consisting of lands included on each Secretary's initial list not identified pursuant to subsection (c)(1). Unless a Secretary has published a final list on or before the date 18 months after the date of publication, pursuant to subsection (b)(2), of such Secretary's initial list, the initial list prepared by such Secretary shall be deemed on such date to be the final list required to be published by such Secretary, and thereafter no lands included on such initial list shall be excluded from operation of subsection (a).

(2) If a court makes a final decision that a parcel of land was arbitrarily and capriciously excluded from operation of subsection (a), such parcel shall be deemed to have been included on a final list published pursuant to paragraph (1), unless such parcel is located wholly or partially inside a conservation system unit or any other area which Congress has designated for specific management, in which case such parcel shall be subject to the provisions of subsection (c)(2).

(e) Issuance of Instruments.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this title, no later than 6 months after the date on which the Secretary concerned publishes a final list of lands pursuant to subsection (d), the Secretary concerned shall issue deeds confirming the quitclaim made by subsection (a) of this section of all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands included on such final list, subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than a relinquishment to the United States of the type described in subsection (b). Each such confirmatory deed shall operate to estop the United States from making any claim of right, title, or interest of the United States in and to the base lands described in the deed, shall be made in the name of the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, and shall be in a form suitable for recordation and shall be filed and recorded by the United States with the recorder of deeds or other like official of the county or counties within which the lands covered by such confirmatory deed are located so that the title to such lands may be determined in accordance with applicable State law.

(2) The United States shall not adjudicate and, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, does not consent to be sued in any suit instituted to adjudicate the ownership of, or to quiet title to, any base land included in a final list and described in a confirmatory deed.

(3) Neither the Secretary of the Interior nor the Secretary of Agriculture shall be required to inspect any lands included on a final list nor to inform any member of the public regarding the condition of such lands prior to the issuance of the confirmatory deeds required by this subsection, and nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting any valid rights with respect to lands covered by a confirmatory deed issued pursuant to this subsection that were in existence on the date of issuance of such confirmatory deed.

(f) Waiver of Certain Claims Against the United States.—Any person or entity accepting the benefits of this Act or failing to act to seek such benefits within the time allotted by this Act with respect to any base or other lands shall be deemed to have waived any claims against the United States, its agents or contractors, with respect to such lands, or with respect to any revenues received by the United States from such lands prior to the date of enactment of this Act. All non-Federal, third party rights granted by the United States with respect to base lands shall remain effective subject to the terms and conditions of the authorizing document. The United States may reserve any rights-of-way currently occupied or used for Government purposes.

SEC. 503. OTHER CLAIMS.

(a) Jurisdiction and Deadline.—(1) Subject to the requirements and limitations of this section, a party claiming right, title, or interest in or to land vested in the United States by section 502(c)(2) of this title may file in the United States Claims Court a claim against the United States seeking compensation based on such vesting. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Claims Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction over such claim.

(2) A claim described in paragraph (1) shall be barred unless the petition thereon is filed within 1 year after the date of publication of a final list pursuant to section 502(d) of this title.

(3) Nothing in this title shall be construed as authorizing any claim to be brought in any court other than a claim brought in the United States Claims Court based upon the vesting of right, title, and interest in and to the United States made by section 502(c)(2) of this title.

(b) Limitations, Defenses, and Awards.—(1) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as diminishing any existing right, title, or interest of the United States in any lands covered by section 502(c), including but not limited to any such right, title, or interest established by the Act of July 6, 1960 (74 Stat. 334).

(2) Nothing in this title shall be construed as precluding or limiting any defenses or claims (including but not limited to defenses based on applicable statutes of limitations, affirmative defenses relating to fraud or speculative practices, or claims by the United States based on adverse possession) otherwise available to the United States.

(3) Nothing in this title shall be construed as entitling any party to compensation from the United States. However, in the event of a final judgment of the United States Claims Court in favor of a party seeking such compensation, or in the event of a negotiated settlement agreement made between such a party and the Attorney General of the United States, the United States shall pay such compensation from the permanent judgment appropriation established pursuant to section 1304 of title 31, United States Code.

(c) Savings Clause.—This title does not include within its scope selection rights required to be recorded under the Act of August 5, 1955 (69 Stat. 534), regardless of whether compensation authorized by the Act of August 31, 1964 (78 Stat. 751) was or was not received.

SEC. 504. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this title.

SEC. 505. TIME EXTENSION.

TITLE VI—SNAKE RIVER BIRDS OF PREY NATIONAL CONSERVATION AREA

SEC. 601. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the State of Idaho within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area contain one of the densest known nesting populations of eagles, falcons, owls, hawks, and other birds of prey (raptors) in North America.

(2) These public lands constitute a valuable national biological and educational resource since birds of prey are important components of the ecosystem.

(3) These public lands also contain important historic and cultural resources as well as other resources and values, all of which should be protected and appropriately managed.

(4) A military training area within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area, known as the Orchard Training Area, has been used since 1953 by reserve components of the Armed Forces. Military use of this area is currently governed by a Memorandum of Understanding between the Bureau of Land Management and the State of Idaho Military Division, dated May 1985. Operating under this Memorandum of Understanding, the Idaho National Guard has provided valuable assistance to the Bureau of Land Management with respect to fire control and other aspects of management of the Orchard Training Area and the other lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Area. Military use of the lands within the Orchard Training Area should continue in accordance with such Memorandum of Understanding (or extension or renewal thereof), to the extent consistent with section 604(e) of this title, because this would be in the best interest of training of the reserve components (an important aspect of national security) and of the local economy.

(5) Protection of the conservation area as a home for raptors can best and should be accomplished by the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Land Management, under a management plan that—

(A) emphasizes management, protection, and rehabilitation of habitat for these raptors and of other resources and values of the area;

(B) provides for continued military use, consistent with the requirements of section 604(e) of this title, of the Orchard Training Area by reserve components of the Armed Forces;

(C) addresses the need for public educational and interpretive opportunities;

(D) allows for diverse appropriate uses of lands in the area to the extent consistent with the maintenance and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats and protection and sound management of other resources and values of the area; and

(E) demonstrates management practices and techniques that may be useful to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere.

(6) There is established near the conservation area a facility, the World Center for Birds of Prey operated by The Peregrine Fund, Inc., where research, public education, recovery, and reestablishment operations exist for endangered raptor species. There is also established at Boise State University a raptor study program which attracts national and international graduate and undergraduate students.

(7) The Bureau of Land Management and Boise State University, together with other State, Federal, and private entities, have formed the Raptor Research and Technical Assistance Center to be housed at Boise State University, which provides a unique adjunct to the conservation area for raptor management, recovery, research, and public visitation, interpretation, and education.

(8) Consistent with requirements of sections 202 and 302 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1712 and 1732), the Secretary has developed a comprehensive management plan and, based on such plan, has implemented a management program for the public lands included in the conservation area established by this title.

(9) Additional authority and guidance must be provided to assure that essential raptor habitat remains in public ownership, to facilitate sound and effective planning and management, to provide for effective public interpretation and education, to ensure continued study of the relationship of humans and these raptors, to preserve the unique and irreplaceable habitat of the conservation area, and to conserve and properly manage the other natural resources of the area in concert with maintenance of this habitat.

(10) An ongoing research program funded by the Bureau of Land Management and the National Guard is intended to provide information to be used in connection with future decisionmaking concerning management of all uses, including continued military use, of public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area.

(11) The public lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation area have been used for domestic livestock grazing for more than a century. Appropriate protection and sound management of raptor habitat and the other resource values of this land would not preclude continuation of this use which has provided major economic contributions and stability to the local and State economies.

(12) Hydroelectric facilities for the generation and transmission of electricity exist within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area pursuant to a license(s) issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, or its predecessor, the Federal Power Commission.

(a) PURPOSES AND ESTABLISHMENT.—In order to provide for the conservation, protection, and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats, and the natural and environmental resources and values associated therewith, and of the scientific, cultural, and educational resources and values of the public lands in the conservation area, there is hereby established the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area.

(b) AREA INCLUDED.—The conservation area shall consist of approximately 482,457 acres of federally owned lands and interests therein managed by the Bureau of Land Management as generally depicted on the map entitled "Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area", dated November 1991.

(c) MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—As soon as is practicable after enactment of this Act, the map referred to in subsection (b) and a legal description of the conservation area shall be filed by the Secretary with the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate. Each such map shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title; except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such map and legal description. Each such map shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title; except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such map and legal description. Each such map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Director and the Idaho State Director of the Bureau of Land Management of the Department of the Interior.

(d) WITHDRAWALS.—Subject to valid existing rights, the Federal lands within the conservation area are hereby withdrawn from all forms of entry, appropriation, or disposal (except as provided in paragraph (3)) under the public land laws; and from entry, application, and selection under the Act of March 3, 1877 (Ch. 107, 19 Stat. 377, 43 U.S.C. 321 et seq.; commonly referred to as the "Desert Lands Act"), section 4 of the Act of August 18, 1894 (Ch. 301, 28 Stat. 422; 43 U.S.C. 641; commonly referred to as the "Carey Act"), the Act of July 3, 1890 (Ch. 656, 26 Stat. 215; commonly referred to as the "State of Idaho Admissions Act"), section 2275 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (43 U.S.C. 851), and section 2276 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (43 U.S.C. 852). The Secretary shall return to the applicants any such applications pending on the date of enactment of this Act, without further action. Subject to valid existing rights, as of the date of enactment of this Act, lands within the Birds of Prey Conservation Area are withdrawn from location under the general mining laws, the operation of the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, and the mineral material disposal laws.

SEC. 604. MANAGEMENT AND USE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1)(A) Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall finalize a management plan that is in conformance with the requirements of this title.

(B) Thereafter, the Secretary shall review the plan at least once every 4 years and shall make such revisions as may be necessary or appropriate.

(C) In reviewing and revising the plan, the Secretary shall provide for appropriate public participation.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in subsections (d), (e), and (f) of this section, the Secretary shall allow only such uses of lands in the conservation area as the Secretary determines will further the purposes for which the Conservation Area is established.

(b) MANAGEMENT GUIDANCE.—After each review pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary shall make such revisions as may be needed so that the plan and management program to implement the plan include, in addition to any other necessary or appropriate provisions, provisions for—

(1) protection for the raptor populations and habitats and the scientific, cultural, and educational resources and values of the public lands in the conservation area;

(2) identifying levels of continued military use of the Orchard Training Area compatible with paragraph (1) of this subsection;

(3) public use of the conservation area consistent with the purposes of this title;

(4) interpretive and educational opportunities for the public;

(5) a program for continued scientific investigation and study to provide information to support sound management in accordance with this title, to advance knowledge of raptor species and the resources and values of the conservation area, and to provide a process for transferring to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere this knowledge and management experience;

(6) such vegetative enhancement and other measures as may be necessary to restore or enhance prey habitat;

(c) VISITORS CENTER.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, is authorized to establish, in cooperation with other public or private entities as the Secretary may deem appropriate, a visitors center designed to interpret the history and the geological, ecological, natural, cultural, and other resources of the conservation area and the biology of the raptors and their relationships to man.

(d) VISITORS USE OF AREA.—In addition to the Visitors Center, the Secretary may provide for visitor use of the public lands in the conservation area to such extent and in such manner as the Secretary considers consistent with the protection of raptors and raptor habitat, public safety, and the purposes for which the conservation area is established. To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall make available to visitors and other members of the public a map of the conservation area and such other educational and interpretive materials as may be appropriate.

(e) NATIONAL GUARD USE OF THE AREA.—(1) Pending completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, or until the date 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever is the shorter period, the Secretary shall permit continued military use of those portions of the conservation area known as the Orchard Training Area in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, to the extent consistent with the use levels identified pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this section.

(2) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall review the management plan and make such additional revisions therein as may be required to assure that it meets the requirements of this title.

(3) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report of the results of such research.

(4) Nothing in this title shall preclude minor adjustment of the boundaries of the Orchard Training Area in accordance with provisions of the Memorandum of Understanding.

(5) After completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the Orchard Training Area or after the date 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever first occurs, the Secretary may continue to permit military use of such lands, but only to the extent the Secretary, on the basis of such research, determines such use is compatible with the purposes set forth in section 603(a). Any such use thereafter shall be permitted in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, which may be extended or renewed by the Secretary so long as such use continues to meet the requirements of subsection (b)(2) of this section.

(6) In accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, the Secretary shall require the State of Idaho Military Division to insure that military units involved maintain a program of decontamination.

(7) Nothing in this title shall be construed as by itself precluding the extension or renewal of the Memorandum of Understanding, or the construction of any improvements or buildings in the Orchard Training Area so long as the requirements of this subsection are met.

(f) LIVESTOCK GRAZING.—Notwithstanding section 604(a)(2) of this title, domestic livestock grazing can occur on public lands within the conservation area, to the extent the Secretary determines such use of such lands is compatible with the purposes for which the conservation area is established. Any such grazing, and activities the Secretary determines necessary to carry out proper and practical grazing management programs (such as animal damage control activities) shall be managed in accordance with the Act of June 28, 1934 (43 U.S.C. 315 et seq.; commonly referred to as the "Taylor Grazing Act"), section 402 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1752), other laws applicable to such use and programs on the public lands, and the management plan for the conservation area.

(h) AGRICULTURAL PRACTICES.—Nothing in this title shall be construed as constituting a grant of authority to the Secretary to restrict recognized agricultural practices or other activities on private land adjacent to or within the conservation area boundary.

(i) HYDROELECTRIC FACILITIES.—Notwithstanding any provision of this title, or regulations and management plans undertaken pursuant to its provisions, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission shall retain its current jurisdiction concerning all aspects of the continued and future operation of hydroelectric facilities, licensed or relicensed under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.), located within the boundaries of the conservation area.

SEC. 605. ADDITIONS.

(b) PURCHASE OF LANDS.—In addition to the authority in section 318(d) of the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1748) and notwithstanding section 7(a) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1964 (16 U.S.C. 4601–9(a)), monies appropriated from the Land and Water Conservation Fund may be used as authorized in section 5(b) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1534(b)), for the purposes of acquiring lands or interests therein within the conservation area for administration as public lands as a part of the conservation area.

(c) LAND EXCHANGES.—The Secretary shall within 4 years of enactment, study, identify, and initiate voluntary land exchanges which would resolve ownership related land use conflicts within the conservation area.

SEC. 606. OTHER LAWS AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) OTHER LAWS.—(1) Nothing in this title shall be construed to supersede, limit, or otherwise affect administration and enforcement of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or to limit the applicability of the National Trails System Act to any lands within the conservation area.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this title, nothing in this title shall be construed as limiting the applicability to lands in the conservation area of laws applicable to public lands generally, including but not limited to the National Historic Preservation Act, the Archaeological Resources Protection Act of 1979, or the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act.

(3) Nothing in this title shall be construed as by itself altering the status of any lands that on the date of enactment of this Act were not managed by the Bureau of Land Management.

(4) Nothing in this title shall be construed as prohibiting the Secretary from engaging qualified persons to use public lands within the conservation area for the propagation of plants (including seeds) to be used for vegetative enhancement of the conservation area in accordance with the plan and in furtherance of the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(b) RELEASE.—The Congress finds and directs that the public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area established as a natural area in October 1971 by Public Land Order 5133 have been adequately studied and found unsuitable for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Such lands are hereby released from further management pursuant to section 603(c) of such an Act and shall be managed in accordance with other applicable provisions of law, including this title.

(c) EXISTING ADMINISTRATIVE WITHDRAWAL TERMINATED.—Public Land Orders 5133 dated October 12, 1971, and 5777 dated November 21, 1980, issued by the Secretary are hereby terminated.

(d) WATER RIGHTS.—(1) Nothing in this title or any action taken pursuant thereto shall constitute either an expressed or implied reservation of water or water rights for any purpose.

(2) Nothing in this title shall be construed as effecting a relinquishment or reduction of any of the water rights held or claimed by the United States within the State of Idaho or elsewhere on or before the date of enactment of this Act.

(3)(A) The Congress finds that the United States is currently a party in an adjudication of rights to waters of the Snake River, including water rights claimed by the United States on the basis of the reservation of lands for purposes of conservation of fish and wildlife.

(B) The Secretary and all other officers of the United States shall take all steps necessary to protect all water rights claimed by the United States in the Snake River adjudication now pending in the district court of the State of Idaho in which the United States is joined under section 208 of the Act of July 10, 1952 (66 Stat. 560; 43 U.S.C. 666; commonly referred to as the "McCarran Amendment").

(e) ENFORCEMENT.—Any person who violates any regulation promulgated by the Secretary to implement the provisions of this title shall be subject to a fine in accordance with applicable provisions of title 18, United States Code, imprisonment of not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 607. MOSCOW MOUNTAIN LANDS.

(b) MANAGEMENT.—(1) If transferred to the United States, the lands described in subsection (c) shall be managed by the Secretary of the Interior, through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, in the same manner as lands which on the date of enactment of this Act were subject to section 603(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(2) Effective upon their transfer to the United States, the lands described in subsection (c) are withdrawn from entry and patent under the mining laws of the United States and from the operation of the geothermal and mineral leasing laws of the United States.

(3) If the lands described in subsection (c) are transferred to the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, pursuant to section 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, shall convey to the State of Idaho public lands identified, pursuant to such Act, as suitable for disposal by exchange or otherwise that are equal to value to the value of the lands described in subsection (c).

(6) Absent further legislation, lengthy and expensive litigation will be required to resolve existing questions about the title to lands covered by section 4 of the 1960 Act.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to resolve the status of the title to base lands affected by the past legislation cited in subsection (a).

SEC. 502. IDENTIFICATION AND QUITCLAIM OF FEDERAL INTEREST IN BASE LANDS.

(a) QUITCLAIM.—Except as otherwise provided by this Act, and subject to valid existing rights, but notwithstanding any other provision of law, the United States hereby quitclaims to the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the base lands described on a final list published pursuant to subsection (d)(1), effective on the date of publication of such list.

(b) PREPARATION OF INITIAL LISTS.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, with respect to lands under Secretary's jurisdiction, and the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to National Forest System lands, shall each prepare an initial list of all parcels of base lands that were relinquished to the United States pursuant to the Act of June 4, 1897 (as amended), and for which selection or other rights under that act or supplemental legislation were not realized or exercised.

(2) The initial lists prepared under paragraph (1) shall be based on information in the actual possession of the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture on the date of enactment of this Act, including information submitted to Congress pursuant to the directive contained in Senate Report No. 98-578, issued for the Fiscal Year 1985 Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation, as revised and updated. The initial lists shall be published and distributed for public review in accordance with procedures adopted by the Secretary concerned.

(3) For a period of 180 days after publication of a list pursuant to paragraph (2), persons asserting that particular parcels omitted from such a list should have been included may request the Secretary concerned to add such parcels to the appropriate list. The Secretary concerned shall add to the list any such parcels which the Secretary determines meet the conditions specified in paragraph (1).

(c) NATIONALLY SIGNIFICANT LANDS.—(1) During preparation or revision of an initial list under subsection (b), the Secretary concerned shall identify those listed lands which are located wholly or partially within any consideration system unit and all other listed lands which Congress has designated for specific management or which the Secretary concerned decides, in the concerned Secretary's discretion, should be retained in order to meet public, resource protection, or administrative needs. For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'conservation system unit' means any unit of the National Park System, National Wildlife Refuge System, National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, National Trails System, or National Wilderness Preservation System, a national forest monument, or a national conservation area, a national recreation area, or any lands being studied for possible designation as part of such a system or unit.

(2) The provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply to any land identified by the Secretary concerned pursuant to paragraph (1). The Secretary concerned shall not include any such lands on any list prepared pursuant to subsection (d). Subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than those described in subsection (b)(1), any right, title, and interest in and to lands identified pursuant to paragraph (1) and not previously vested in the United States is hereby vested and confirmed in the United States.

(3) In the same manner as the initial list was published and distributed pursuant to subsection (b)(2), the Secretary concerned shall publish and distribute an identification of all lands in which right, title, and interest is vested and confirmed in the United States by paragraph (2).

(d) FINAL LISTS.—(1) As soon as possible after considering any requests made pursuant to subsection (b)(3) and the identification of lands pursuant to subsection (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall each publish a final list, consisting of lands included on each Secretary's initial list not identified pursuant to subsection (c)(1). Unless a Secretary has published a final list on or before the date 18 months after the date of publication, pursuant to subsection (b)(2), of such Secretary's initial list, the initial list prepared by such Secretary shall be deemed on such date to be the final list required to be published by such Secretary, and thereafter no lands included on such initial list shall be excluded from operation of subsection (a).

(2) If a court makes a final decision that a parcel of land was arbitrarily and capriciously excluded from operation of subsection (a), such parcel shall be deemed to have been included on a final list published pursuant to paragraph (1), unless such parcel is located wholly or partially inside a conservation system unit or any other area which Congress has designated for specific management, in which case such parcel shall be subject to the provisions of subsection (c)(2).

(e) ISSUANCE OF INSTRUMENTS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this title, no later than 6 months after the date on which the Secretary concerned publishes a final list of lands pursuant to subsection (d), the Secretary concerned shall issue deeds confirming the quitclaim made by subsection (a) of this section of all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands included on such final list, subject to valid existing rights arising from factors other than a relinquishment to the United States of the type described in subsection (b). Each such confirmatory deed shall operate to estop the United States from making any claim of right, title, or interest of the United States in and to the base lands described in the deed, shall be made in the name of the listed owner or entryman, his heirs, devisees, successors, and assigns, and shall be in a form suitable for recordation and shall be filed and recorded by the United States with the recorder of deeds or other like official of the county or counties within which the lands covered by such confirmatory deed are located so that the title to such lands may be determined in accordance with applicable State law.

(2) The United States shall not adjudicate and, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, does not consent to be sued in any suit instituted to adjudicate the ownership of, or to quiet title to, any base land included in a final list and described in a confirmatory deed.

(3) Neither the Secretary of the Interior nor the Secretary of Agriculture shall be required to inspect any lands included on a final list nor to inform any member of the public regarding the condition of such lands prior to the issuance of the confirmatory deeds required by this subsection, and nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting any valid rights with respect to lands covered by a confirmatory deed issued pursuant to this subsection that were in existence on the date of issuance of such confirmatory deed.

SNAKE RIVER BIRDS OF PREY NATIONAL CONSERVATION AREA

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 725, H.R. 2141, regarding birds of prey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2141) to establish the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area in the State of Idaho, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the State of Idaho within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area contain one of the densest known nesting populations of eagles, falcons, owls, hawks, and other birds of prey (raptors) in North America.

(2) These public lands constitute a valuable national biological and education resource since birds of prey are important components of the ecosysten.

(3) These public lands also contain important historic and cultural resources as well as other resources and values, which should be protected and appropriately managed.

(4) A military training area within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area, known as the Orchard Training Area, has been used since 1953 by reserve components of the Armed Forces. Military use of this area is currently governed by a Memorandum of Understanding between the Bureau of Land Management and the State of Idaho Military Division, dated May 1985. Operating under this Memorandum of Understanding, the Idaho National Guard has provided valuable assistance to the Bureau of Land Management with respect to fire control and other aspects of management of the Orchard Training Area and the other lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Area. Military use of the lands within the Orchard Training Area should continue in accordance with such Memorandum of Understanding (or extension of renewal thereof), to the extent consistent with section 4(e) of this Act, because this would be in the best interest of training of the reserve components (an important aspect of national security) and of the local economy.

(5) Protection of the conservation area as a home for raptors can best and should be accomplished by the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Land Management, under a management plan that—

(A) emphasizes management, protection, and rehabilitation of habitat for these raptors and of other resources and values of the area;

(B) provides for continued military use, consistent with the requirements of section 4(e) of this Act, of the Orchard Training Area by reserve components of the Armed Forces;

(C) addresses the need for public educational and interpretive opportunities;

(D) provides for the conservation, development and use of other resources in the area to the extent compatible with either the maintenance or enhancement of raptor habitat; and

(E) demonstrates management practices and techniques that may be useful to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere.

(6) There exists near the conservation area, the World Center for Birds of Prey operated by The Peregrine Fund, Inc., where research, public education, recovery, and re-establishment operations exist for endangered raptor species. There also exists at Boise State University, a raptor study program which attracts national and international graduate and undergraduate students.

(7) The Bureau of Land Management and Boise State University, together with other State, Federal, and private entities, have formed the Raptor Research and Technical Assistance Center to be housed at Boise State University, which provides a unique adjunct to the conservation area for raptor management, recovery, research, and public visitation, interpretation, and education.

(8) Consistent with requirements of section 202 and 302 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1712 and 1732), the Secretary has developed a comprehensive management plan and, based on such plan, has implemented a management program for the public lands included in the conservation area established by this Act.

(9) Additional authority and guidance must be provided to assure that essential raptor habitat remains in public ownership, to facilitate sound and effective planning and management, to provide for effective public interpretation and education, to ensure continued study of the relationship of humans to raptors, to preserve the unique and irreplaceable habitat of the conservation area, and to conserve and properly manage the other natural resources of the area in concert with maintenance of this habitat.

(10) An ongoing research program funded by the Bureau of Land Management and the National Guard and conducted by the Raptor Research Technical Assistance Center is providing information to be used in connection with future decision making concerning management of all uses, including continued military use, of public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area.

(11) The public lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation area have been used for domestic livestock grazing for more than a century. Appropriate protection and sound management of raptor habitat and the other resource values of this land would not preclude continuation of this use which has provided major economic contributions and stability to the local and state economies.

(12) Hydroelectric facilities for the generation and transmission of electricity exist within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area pursuant to a license(s) issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, or its predecessor, the Federal Power Commission. Nothing in this Act shall affect the relicensing of hydropower facilities on the Snake River.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL CONSERVATION AREA.

(a) PURPOSES AND ESTABLISHMENT.—In order to provide for the conservation and protection of raptor populations and habitats and, to the extent it is consistent with these purposes, to provide for the continued multiple-use resource management of the conservation area (including but not limited to such uses as grazing), and in recognition of the scientific, cultural and educational resources of these public lands, there is hereby established the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area ("conservation area").

(b) AREA INCLUDED.—The conservation area shall consist of approximately 482,457 acres of federally owned lands and interests therein managed by the Bureau of Land Management as generally depicted on the map entitled "Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area", dated November 1991.

"(c) MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—As soon as is practicable after enactment of this Act, the map referred to in subsection (b) and a legal description of the conservation area shall be filed by the Secretary with the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate. AMENDMENT NO. 3433

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I send a substitute amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG] proposes an amendment numbered 3433.

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the State of Idaho within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area contain one of the densest known nesting populations of eagles, falcons, owls, hawks, and other birds of prey (raptors) in North America.

(2) These public lands constitute a valuable national biological and educational resource since birds of prey are important components of the ecosystem.

(3) These public lands also contain important historic and cultural resources as well as other resources and values, all of which should be protected and appropriately managed.

(4) A military training area within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area, known as the Orchard Training Area, has been used since 1953 by reserve components of the Armed Forces. Military use of this area is currently governed by a Memorandum of Understanding between the Bureau of Land Management and the State of Idaho Military Division, dated May 1985. Operating under this Memorandum of Understanding, the Idaho National Guard has provided valuable assistance to the Bureau of Land Management with respect to fire control and other aspects of management of the Orchard Training Area and the other lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Area. Military use of the lands within the Orchard Training Area should continue in accordance with such Memorandum of Understanding (or extension or renewal thereof), to the extent consistent with section 4(e) of this Act, because this would be in the best interest of training of the reserve components (an important aspect of national security) and of the local economy.

(5) Protection of the conservation area as a home for raptors can best and should be accomplished by the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Land Management, under a management plan that—

(A) emphasizes management, protection, and rehabilitation of habitat for these raptors and of other resources and values of the area;

(B) provides for continued military use, consistent with the requirements of section 4(e) of this Act, of the Orchard Training Area by reserve components of the Armed Forces;

(C) addresses the need for public educational and interpretive opportunities;

(D) allows for diverse appropriate uses of lands in the area to the extent consistent with the maintenance and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats and protection and sound management of other resources and values of the area; and

(E) demonstrates management practices and techniques that may be useful to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere.

(6) There exists near the conservation area a facility, the World Center for Birds of Prey operated by The Peregrine Fund, Inc., where research, public education, recovery, and reestablishment operations exist for endangered raptor species. There also exists at Boise State University a raptor study program which attracts national and international graduate and undergraduate students.

(7) The Bureau of Land Management and Boise State University, together with other State, Federal, and private entities, have formed the Raptor Research and Technical Assistance Center to be housed at Boise State University, which provides a unique adjunct to the conservation area for raptor management, recovery, research, and public visitation, interpretation, and education.

(8) Consistent with requirements of sections 202 and 302 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1712 and 1732), the Secretary has developed a comprehensive management plan and, based on such plan, has implemented a management program for the public lands included in the conservation area established by this Act.

(9) Additional authority and guidance must be provided to assure that essential raptor habitat remains in public ownership, to facilitate sound and effective planning and management, to provide for effective public interpretation and education, to ensure continued study of the relationship of humans and these raptors, to preserve the unique and irreplaceable habitat of the conservation area, and to conserve and properly manage the other natural resources of the area in concert with maintenance of this habitat.

(10) An ongoing research program funded by the Bureau of Land Management and the National Guard is intended to provide information to be used in connection with future descisionmaking concerning management of all uses, including continued military use, of public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area.

(11) The public lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation area have been used for domestic livestock grazing for more than a century. Appropriate protection and sound management of raptor habitat and the other resource values of this land would not preclude continuation of this use which has provided major economic contributions and stability to the local and State economies.

(12) Hydroelectric facilities for the generation and transmission of electricity exist within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area pursuant to a license(s) issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, or its predecessor, the Federal Power Commission.

Subject to valid existing rights, as of the date of enactment of this Act, lands within the conservation area are withdrawn from location under the general mining laws, the operation of the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, and the mineral material disposal laws.

SEC. 4. MANAGEMENT AND USE.

(a) In General.—(1)(A) Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall finalize a management plan that is in conformance with the requirements of this Act.

(B) Thereafter, the Secretary shall review the plan at least once every 4 years and shall make such revisions as may be necessary or appropriate.

(C) In reviewing and revising the plan, the Secretary shall provide for appropriate public participation.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in subsections (d), (e), and (f) of this section, the Secretary shall allow only such uses of lands in the conservation area as the Secretary determines will further the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(b) Management Guidance.—After each review pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary shall make such revisions as may be needed so that the plan and management program to implement the plan include, in addition to any other necessary or appropriate provisions, provisions for—

(1) protection for the raptor populations and habitats and the scientific, cultural, and educational resources and values of the public lands in the conservation area;

(2) identifying levels of continued military use of the Orchard Training Area compatible with paragraph (1) of this subsection;

(3) public use of the conservation area consistent with the purposes of this Act;

(4) interpretive and educational opportunities for the public;

(5) a program for continued scientific investigation and study to provide information to support sound management in accordance with this Act, to advance knowledge of raptor species and the resources and values of the conservation area, and to provide a process for transferring to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere this knowledge and management experience;

(6) such vegetative enhancement and other measures as may be necessary to restore or enhance prey habitat;

(8) assessing the desirability of imposing appropriates fees for public uses (including, but not limited to, recreational use) of lands in the conservation area, which are not now subject to fees, to be used to further the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(c) Visitors Center.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, is authorized to establish, in cooperation with other public or private entities as the Secretary may deem appropriate, a visitors center designed to interpret the history and the geological, ecological, natural, cultural, and other resources of the conservation area and the biology of the raptors and their relationships to man.

(d) Visitors Use of Area.—In addition to the Visitors Center, the Secretary may provide for visitor use of the public lands in the conservation area to such extent and in such manner as the Secretary considers consistent with the protection of raptors and raptor habitat, public safety, and the purposes for which the conservation area is established. To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall make available to visitors and other members of the public a map of the conservation area and such other educational and interpretive materials as may be appropriate.

(e) National Guard Use of the Area.—(1) Pending completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, or until the date 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever is the shorter period, the Secretary shall permit continued military use of those portions of the conservation area known as the Orchard Training Area in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, to the extent consistent with the use levels identified pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this section.

(2) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall review the management plan and make such additional revisions therein as may be required to assure that it meets the requirements of this Act.

(3) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report of the results of such research.

(f) Livestock Grazing.—Notwithstanding section 4(a)(2) of this Act, if the Secretary determines domestic livestock grazing is compatible with the purposes for which the conservation area is established, such grazing will occur on public lands within the conservation area to the extent the Secretary determines such use of such lands is compatible with the purposes for which the conservation area is established. Any such grazing, and activities the Secretary determines necessary to carry out proper and practical grazing management programs (such as animal damage control activities) shall be managed in accordance with the Act of June 28, 1934 (43 U.S.C. 315 et seq.; commonly referred to as the "Taylor Grazing Act"), section 402 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1752), other laws applicable to such use and programs on the public lands, and the management plan for the conservation area.

(h) Agricultural Practices.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as constituting a grant of authority to the Secretary to restrict recognized agricultural practices or other activities on private land adjacent to or within the conservation area boundary.

(i) Hydroelectric Facilities.—Notwithstanding any provision of this Act, or regulations and management plans undertaken pursuant to its provisions, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission shall retain its current jurisdiction concerning all aspects of the continued and future operation of hydroelectric facilities, licensed or relicensed under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.), located within the boundaries of the conservation area.

SEC. 5. ADDITIONS.

(a) Acquisitions.—(1) The Secretary is authorized to acquire lands and interests therein within the boundaries of the conservation area by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, exchange, or transfer from another Federal agency, except that such lands or interests owned by the State of Idaho or a political subdivision thereof may be acquired only by donation or exchange.

(2) Any lands located within the boundaries of the conservation area that are acquired by the United States on or after the date of enactment of this Act shall become a part of the conservation area and shall be subject to this Act.

(b) Purchase of Lands.—In addition to the authority in section 318(d) of the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1748) and notwithstanding section 7(a) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1964 (16 U.S.C. 4601-9(a)) monies appropriated from the Land and Water Conservation Fund may be used as authorized in section 5(b) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1534(b)), for the purposes of acquiring lands or interests therein within the conservation area for administration as public lands as a part of the conservation area.

(c) Land Exchanges.—The Secretary shall within 4 years of enactment, study, identify, and initiate voluntary land exchanges which would resolve ownership related land use conflicts within the conservation area.

SEC. 6. OTHER LAWS AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) OTHER LAWS.—(1) Nothing in the Act shall be construed to supersede, limit, or otherwise affect administration and enforcement of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or to limit the applicability of the National Trails System Act to any lands within the conservation area.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this title, nothing in this title shall be construed as limiting the applicability to lands in the conservation area of laws applicable to public lands generally, including but not limited to the National Historic Preservation Act, the Archaeological Resources Protection Act of 1979, or the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act.

(4) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as prohibiting the Secretary from engaging qualified persons to use public lands within the conservation area for the propagation of plants (including seeds) to be used for vegetative enhancement of the conservation area in accordance with the plan and in furtherance of the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(b) RELEASE.—The Congress finds and directs that the public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area established as a natural area in October 1971 by Public Land Order 5133 have been adequately studied and found unsuitable for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Such lands are hereby released from further management pursuant to section 603(c) of such an Act and shall be managed in accordance with other applicable provisions of law, including this Act.

(d) WATER.—(1) The Congress finds that the United States is currently a party in an adjudication of rights to waters of the Snake River, including water rights claimed by the United States on the basis of the reservation of lands for purposes of conservation of fish and wildlife and that consequently there is no need for this Act to effect a reservation by the United States of rights with respect to such waters in order to fulfill the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(2) Nothing in this Act or any action taken pursuant thereto shall constitute either an expressed or implied reservation of water or water rights for any purpose.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as effecting a relinquishment or reduction of any of the water rights held or claimed by the United States within the State of Idaho or elsewhere on or before the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) The Secretary and all other officers of the United States shall take steps necessary to protect all water rights claimed by the United States in the Snake River adjudication now pending in the district court of the State of Idaho in which the United States is joined under the McCarran Amendment (section 208 of the Act of July 10, 1952; 66 Stat. 560; 43 U.S.C. 666).

(B) if any such vessel or person on board is actually engaged in operations in violation of any such provision, or there is reasonable ground to believe any person or vessel was obviously so engaged before the boarding of such vessel by the authorized officer, arrest or seize such person or vessel and further investigate the circumstance if necessary.

If an authorized officer, after boarding and investigation, has reasonable cause to believe that any such fishing vessel or person engaged in operations in violation of any provision referred to in subparagraph (A), the officer shall deliver the vessel or person as promptly as practicable to the enforcement officers of the appropriate Party, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention.

(2) When requested by the appropriate authorities of a Party, an authorized officer may be directed to attend as a witness, and to produce such available records and files or duly certified copies thereof as may be necessary, for the prosecution by that Party of any violation of the provisions of the Convention or any law of that Party relating to the enforcement thereof.

SEC. 811. PENALTIES.

(a) CIVIL PENALTIES.—(1) Any person who is found by the Secretary of Commerce, after notice and opportunity for the hearing in accordance with section 554 of title 5, United States Code, to have committed an act prohibited by section 810 shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty. The amount of the civil penalty shall not exceed $100,000 for each violation. Each day of a continuing violation shall constitute a separate offense. The amount of such civil penalty shall be assessed by the Secretary of Commerce, or the Secretary's designee, by written notice. In determining the amount of such penalty, the Secretary of Commerce shall take into account the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the prohibited acts committed and, with respect to the violation, the degree of culpability, any history of prior offenses, ability to pay, and such other matters as justice may require.

(2) Any person against whom a civil penalty is assessed under paragraph (1) may obtain review thereof in the appropriate court of the United States by filing a complaint in such court within 30 days from the date of such order and by simultaneously serving a copy of such complaint by certified mail on the Secretary of Commerce, the Attorney General, and the appropriate United States Attorney. The Secretary of Commerce shall promptly file in such court a certified copy of the record upon which such violation was found or such penalty imposed, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code. The findings and order of the Secretary of Commerce shall be set aside by such court if they are not found to be supported by substantial evidence, as provided in section 706(2) of title 5, United States Code.

(3) If any person fails to pay an assessment of a civil penalty after it has become a final and unappealable order, or after the appropriate court has entered final judgment in favor of the Secretary of Commerce, the matter shall be referred to the Attorney General, who shall recover the amount assessed in any appropriate district court of the United States. In such action, the validity and appropriateness of the final order imposing the civil penalty shall not be subject to review.

(4) A fishing vessel (including its fishing gear, furniture, appurtenances, stores, and cargo) used in the commission mission of an act prohibited by section 810 shall be liable in rem for any civil penalty assessed for such violation under paragraph (1) and may be proceeded against in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. Such penalty shall constitute a maritime lien on such vessel that may be recovered in an action in rem in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction over the vessel.

(5) The Secretary of Commerce may compromise, modify, or remit, with or without conditions, any civil penalty that is subject to imposition or that has been imposed under this section.

(6) For the purposes of conducting any hearing under this section, the Secretary of Commerce may issue subpoenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of relevant papers, books, and documents, and may administer oaths. Witnesses summoned shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid to witnesses in the courts of the United States. In case of contempt or refusal to obey a subpoena served upon any person pursuant to this paragraph, the district court of the United States for any district in which such person is found, resides, or transacts business, upon application by the United States and after notice to such person, shall have jurisdiction to issue an order requiring such person to appear and give testimony before the Secretary of Commerce or to appear and produce documents before the Secretary of Commerce, or both, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

(b) OFFENSES.—(1) A person is guilty of an offense if the person commits any act prohibited by section 810 (5), (6), (7), or (8).

(2) Any offense described in paragraph (1) is a class A misdemeanor punishable by a fine under title 18, United States Code, or imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both; except that if in the commission of any offense the person uses a dangerous weapon, engages in conduct that causes bodily injury to any enforcement officer, or places any such officer in fear of imminent bodily injury, the offense is a felony punishable by a fine under title 18, United States Code, or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

(c) FORFEITURE.—(1) Any fishing vessel (including its fishing gear, furniture, appurtenances, stores, and cargo) used, and any fish (or a fair market value thereof) taken or retained, in any manner, in connection with or as a result of the commission of any act prohibited by section 810 shall be subject to forfeiture to the United States. All or part of such vessel may, and all such fish shall, be forfeited to the United States pursuant to a civil proceeding under this section.

(2) Any district court of the United States shall have jurisdiction, upon application of the Attorney General on behalf of the United States, to order any forfeiture authorized under paragraph (1) and any action provided for under paragraph (4).

(3) If a judgment is entered for the United States in a civil forfeiture proceeding under this section, the Attorney General may seize any property or other interest declared forfeited to the United States, which has not previously been seized pursuant to this title or for which security has not previously been obtained. The provisions of the customs laws relating to—

(A) the seizure, forfeiture, and condemnation of property for violation of the customs law;

(B) the disposition of such property or the proceeds from the sale thereof; and

(C) the remission or mitigation of any such forfeiture;

shall apply to seizures and forfeitures incurred, or alleged to have been incurred, under the provisions of this title, unless such provisions are inconsistent with the purposes, policy, and provisions of this title.

(4)(A) Any officer authorized to serve any process in rem that is issued by a court having jurisdiction under section 809(b) shall—

(i) stay the execution of such process; or

(ii) discharge any fish seized pursuant to such process;

upon receipt of a satisfactory bond or other security from any person claiming such property. Such bond or other security shall be conditioned upon such person delivering such property to the appropriate court upon order thereof, without any impairment of its value, or paying the monetary value of such property pursuant to an order of such court. Judgment shall be recoverable on such bond or other security against both the principal and any sureties in the event that any condition thereof is breached, as determined by such court.

(B) Any fish seized pursuant to this title may be sold, subject to the approval and direction of the appropriate court, for not less than the fair market value thereof. The proceeds of any such sale shall be deposited with such court pending the disposition of the matter involved.

(5) For purposes of this section, it shall be a rebuttable presumption that all fish found on board a fishing vessel and which is seized in connection with an act prohibited by section 810 were taken or retained in violation of the Convention and this title.

SEC. 812. FUNDING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated from time to time such sums as may be necessary for carrying out the purposes and provisions of the Convention and this title, including—

(1) necessary travel expenses of the United States Commissioners or Alternate Commissioners; and

(2) the United States' share of the joint expenses of the Commission.

Resolved, That the House agree to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill.

OCTOBER 8, 1992

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I want to commend the authors of H.R. 2130, a bill authorizing appropriations for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. I am particularly pleased with title V of this bill, which establishes a comprehensive program for consistent monitoring of the Nation's marine ecosystems.

This title was jointly developed by the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and the Committee on Environment and Public Works. It will be jointly administered by the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Title V amends the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act, and will be the joint jurisdiction of both committees.

The need for a National Marine Monitoring Program, as provided for in this act, is becoming increasingly more apparent. In hearings before the Environment and Public Works Committee, I and other Senators have been frustrated by the lack of definitive answers to seemingly basic questions. Is the shell disease seen in many New England lobsters caused by the ocean disposal of sludge? No one seems to know for sure. Why have oyster harvests in Chesapeake Bay declined by almost two-thirds? What is causing the disorder that results in the beaching of hundreds of dolphins? What is the relationship between the introduction of pollutants to the marine environment and the contamination of marine organisms? What is the impact of extensive new sewage treatment plant capacity on the water quality of Narragansett Bay?

In 1988, Robert Duce, then dean of the University of Rhode Island's Graduate School of Oceanography, lamented in congressional testimony that in many coastal areas we simply do not know with any scientific accuracy whether there has been improvement or degradation. He also noted that the necessary measurements and long-term monitoring programs that can give us a standard against which we can gauge water quality, and by which we can measure water quality changes, simply have not been available for most coastal regions.

Before government can act intelligently, it is essential that we develop a thorough scientific understanding of our marine resource and identify threats to its quality. This knowledge is vital if we are to protect the marine environment and act to prevent problems before they become unmanageable. A report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment concluded that—monitoring, research, and enforcement are currently inadequate. Information gaps still constrain analyses of marine waste disposal, partly because of lack of information gathering in some areas of the country, lack of systematic analyses of gathered data, and ineffective dissemination of results.

Title V of the bill we are approving today is in direct response to this critical lack of information. It is a major step toward collecting the information we need to accurately determine the health of our Nation's marine ecosystems.

I would like to note that the language in subsection (c)(4) of section 503 could allow NPDES permits to be modified, but only to assure that technical data compiled in connection with compliance monitoring are compatible with the way in which monitoring data are collected. Nothing in the bill would require dischargers to carry out ambient water quality monitoring or sediment quality monitoring requirements.

I am also pleased, Mr. President, that primary leadership for the monitoring program activities conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency will be at the EPA Environmental Research Laboratory in Narragansett, RI. A letter written by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, together with a colloquy among Senators HOLLINGS, MOYNIHAN, and myself, make it clear that such primary leadership will include locating the headquarters for the EPA monitoring program activities at the EPA Narragansett laboratory. This laboratory is already conducting the near-coastal activities under EPA's Environmental Monitoring and Assessment Program, and is working closely with NOAA in implementing its Status and Trends Program. Also the Narragansett lab is directly involved with the Marine Ecosystem Research Laboratory at the University of Rhode Island, a facility that is uniquely capable of simulating pollution impacts on the marine environment.

The EPA Environmental Research Laboratory at Narragansett is ideally suited to conducting the monitoring activities authorized in this legislation.

I would urge all my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. President, I would like to enter into a short colloquy with Senators MOYNIHAN and HOLLINGS regarding H.R. 2130, a bill authorizing appropriations for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. In particular I would like to focus on title V of this bill, which establishes a comprehensive program for consistent monitoring of the Nation's marine ecosystems.

This title was jointly developed by the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and the Committee on Environment and Public Works. It will be jointly administered by the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Section 503 of the bill specifies that "primary leadership for the monitoring program activities conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency pursuant to this section shall be located at the Environmental Research Laboratory in Narragansett, RI."

It is my understanding that this language will ensure that headquarters for the monitoring program which will be established pursuant to this legislation will be located at the EPA laboratory currently located in Narragansett. The personnel primarily responsible for implementing the program will be located at the laboratory.

Such implementation will include:

Developing and implementing intensive coastal water quality monitoring programs in accordance with the legislation.

Identifying and analyzing the status of environmental quality in the Nation's coastal ecosystems.

Assessing ambient water quality, benthic environmental quality, and the health and quality of living organisms.

Identifying sources of environmental degradation affecting the Nation's coastal ecosystems.

In addition, personnel located at the program headquarters in Narragansett will be responsible for providing the scientific basis for the development of coastal water quality monitoring guidelines. Such guidelines will provide for uniformity, establish scientifically valid monitoring methods, and identify appropriate indicators of the health and quality of coastal ecosystems.

Is this consistent with the understanding of the chairmen of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and the Committee on Environment and Public Works?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I would say to the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island that his interpretation of section 503 of H.R. 2130 is entirely consistent with my own. I thank the Senator for his interest, and his assistance in forging this legislation.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I would also agree that the language in section 503 of H.R. 2130 should be interpreted to mean that headquarters for the monitoring program activities conducted by EPA pursuant to title V of H.R. 2130 will be located at the Environmental Research Laboratory in Narragansett, RI. I commend Senators CHAFEE, HOLLINGS, and DANFORTH for their work on this legislation.

Mr. CHAFEE. I thank my colleagues for their assistance, and commend them for developing legislation which will significantly improve our understanding of the health of the coastal marine environment. I would also like to add that the EPA Environmental Research Laboratory in Narragansett, RI is already conducting the near-coastal activities under EPA's Environmental Monitoring and Assessment Program, and is working closely with NOAA in implementing its Status and Trends Program. This facility is ideally suited to serving as a headquarters for the monitoring activities authorized in this legislation. Again, I thank my colleagues.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I am able to report to my colleagues that an accord has been reached which will allow the Senate to pass H.R. 2130, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Authorization Act of 1991. This bill contains important provisions that will advance vital national efforts in the areas of weather forecasting, storm warning, protection of marine resources, and our ability to conduct meteorologic and climatologic research into global change and ozone depletion. Never have the needs of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA] addressed in this bill been more evident or deserving of action, and I commend my distinguished colleagues for recognizing these needs and responding accordingly.

The bill before us is the product of many months of effort on the parts of many Members and staffs in both the House of Representatives and the Senate. I particularly want to thank Representative DENNIS HERTEL for introducing the original House companion, H.R. 2130, and Representatives STUDDS, GEORGE BROWN, DAVIS, YOUNG, WALKER and their staffs for their diligent efforts in forging this compromise. My Senate colleagues, full Commerce Committee and National Ocean Policy Study [NOPS] chairman Senator HOLLINGS, and NOPS ranking minority member, Senator STEVENS, and their fine staffs, also contributed greatly to this bipartisan agreement.

I am particularly pleased that this bill finally will initiate the long-overdue effort to modernize the NOAA fleet. The 23 vessels of the NOAA fleet comprise approximately one-third of the total Federal oceanographic research capability. The fleet is indispensable; it is used to collect scientific data for studying ocean circulation and global climate change, for charting the Nation's exclusive economic zone [EEZ], for monitoring water quality, and for assessing the status of the Nation's fishery resources.

Yet these vessels have been allowed to slip into a serious state of disrepair, with most nearing the end of their 25-year service life. In addition, these ships require upgraded scientific equipment to address today's complex missions such as bathymetric mapping of the ocean floor. Money authorized in this legislation will begin the process of refurbishing the fleet and revitalizing our Nation's global leadership in basic and applied oceanographic research.

Weather forecasting and storm warning are among NOAA's most important functions. The crucial role of the National Weather Service [NWS] was clearly illustrated this past August and September when Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and Typhoon Omar came ashore in Florida, Louisiana, Hawaii and Guam. We have all witnessed the tragic images of destruction, of whole communities reduced to rubble, and of families and lives torn apart. While the devastation wrought by these storms is almost too staggering to comprehend, undoubtedly, had it not been for the forecasting and storm warning capabilities of the weather service—especially the National Hurricane Center—loss of human life and property damage would have increased significantly.

An effort is currently underway to modernize the National Weather Service by upgrading equipment and consolidating facilities. Such upgrading will improve climate and air quality research, public warning and forecast systems, climate and global change research, satellite observing systems, atmospheric research, and data and information systems. I have worked with my distinguished colleagues in the House and Senate to develop a bipartisan compromise that ensures there will be no reduction of coverage during the modernization process.

Under this compromise, a yearly national implementation plan that lays out the modernization activities for 2 years will be submitted to Congress. The National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences will be called upon to define the criteria for certification, and a modernization transition committee will be designated to review proposed certifications. When commissioning new radar systems, thorough documentation must show that the new system is performing to standards before the old system can be decommissioned. At least one liaison officer will remain in an area for at least 2 years after the weather service office in that area is closed. In this way, community preparedness and public access to weather services—services vital to agriculture, emergency evacuation, and air travel—will not be disrupted during the modernization process. Let me thank my esteemed colleagues, committee Chairman FRITZ HOLLINGS, and the distinguished Senator from South Dakota, TOM DASCHLE, who were particularly helpful in resolving this issue.

In 1990, the National Academy of Sciences issued a report on the marine monitoring needs of the Nation, including recommendations for establishing a comprehensive monitoring program. The academy's recommendations were incorporated into a NOAA-EPA monitoring program for ocean and coastal waters that is authorized in this bill. Under this bill, a comprehensive national program for consistent monitoring of the Nation's marine ecosystems will be established. Included within this program will be a system for reviewing and evaluating scientific, analytical, and technical methods appropriate for monitoring the environmental quality of marine ecosystems, and methods established for identifying uniform indicators of marine ecosystem quality. Importantly, an information program also will be created to distribute information pertaining to marine degradation analyses, assessments, and techniques and practices to State, regional, and local agencies and the public.

In recognition that some areas require special attention, there is within the context of this comprehensive monitoring program a proposed monitoring effort in my own region of the country. In Massachusetts, a $6 billion effort is underway to improve water quality in Boston Harbor through improved wastewater treatment. This is one of the largest cleanups undertaken in the Nation and provides a unique opportunity for scientists and managers to evaluate resulting change in the coastal and marine environments.

Montioring will be needed to show the ratepayers of Massachusetts that the large cost of the cleanup will indeed bring Boston Harbor into compliance with the Clean Water Act and provide fishable and swimmable waters. Careful monitoring also will be needed to assure that the harbor cleanup does not degrade adjacent waters. In particular, the new offshore outfall must not pollute Cape Cod Bay or waters of Massachusetts Bay, especially the future marine sanctuary soon to be designated at Stellwagen Bank. NOAA's monitoring program in this region should not duplicate the work of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority and the U.S. Geological Survey. Close coordination with these agencies, as well as with the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management office, is essential to determine the most effective and complementary use of NOAA resources.

NOAA's National Ocean Service [NOS] and National Marine Fisheries Service [NMFS] provide invaluable services such as the assessment and management of the Nation's fisheries resources and mapping and charting of the oceans for marine transportation. Other important programs provided by these services include responding to, and forecasting and monitoring of, the effects of accidental marine oilspills, monitoring of water quality in highly productive coastal areas, and protection of fisheries habitats. These activities are of vital importance to my State, where many coastal communities depend on the ocean for tourism, fishing, marine transportation, and recreation to support their local economies.

Importantly, this legislation encourages NOAA to move forward and conduct research about alternative fishery technologies that are economically viable and environmentally benign. For example, as a result of this legislation, NOAA will undertake the research that is needed to develop alternative techniques for fishing for tuna that do not involve entanglement of dolphins in fishing gear. The American public has made it clear that it will no longer tolerate the senseless killing of dolphins by the world's tuna fleets. Strong efforts by the United States in the international fishing community have reduced dolphin mortality but have not eliminated it. As a matter of course, these efforts to obtain international cooperation must continue. But it is also time to develop alternatives that will allow valuable tuna resources to be harvested without harming dolphins. Other nations, as well as the tuna industry, are willing to contribute funds to this effort. This bill provides for the U.S. contribution.

There are other provisions in this bill that are of particular importance to my State. I would like to discuss briefly three of the more important ones. This year NOAA will reactivate the Albatross, the NOAA, vessel moored in Woods Hole. This research vessel conducts stock assessments for fisheries throughout New England. At a time when many of the North Atlantic stocks—species including cod, haddock and yellow tail flounder which are the foundation of the Northeast commercial fisheries—are in decline, it is absolutely essential that we have accurate, up-to-date information on the state of the stocks so that informed management decisions can be made. This bill specifically authorizes the funds that are needed to keep the Albatross in operation.

This bill also will help the aquaculture industry by making guaranteed loans from the Fisheries Vessels Obligation Guarantee Program [FVOG] available to this growing activity. This program initially provided money for fishing vessels and later was expanded to include fishery facilities. This will provide needed capital for the fishing industry. But when a Massachusetts aquaculture company applied for a loan under the program, it was told that its operation was not considered a fishery facility. With many of our fisheries now overcapitalized, with the aquaculture industry in an expansion stage, and with the growing realization that the fishing industry must diversify in order to grow and prosper, it only make sense to allow these funds to be used for aquaculture as well as other fishing operations.

Title IX of the bill consists of two modest initiatives aimed at helping the hard-pressed New England fishing industry in its effort to rebuild depleted groundfish stocks.

Section 901 amends section 311 of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act to require the Secretary of Commerce, if requested by a New England Governor, to enter into a cooperative Federal-State agreement to enforce the northeast multispecies fishery management plan, the groundfish plan. A State participating in such an agreement would be eligible for reimbursement of costs incurred in the detection and prosecution of violations. The section also requires the First U.S. Coast Guard District to establish an informal fisheries enforcement working group, consisting of commercial fishing industry representatives from various ports within the region, in order to improve overall compliance with fisheries regulations. The section would require that fines collected for violations of the groundfish plan are to be used by the Secretary of the department which acted to enforce it.

Section 902(a) adds a new section 314 to the Magnuson Act requiring the Secretary to establish a Northwest Atlantic ocean fisheries reinvestment program to assist in the development of economically viable fisheries for underutilized species, to explore new opportunities for the processing and use of fish waste, and to help restore depleted New England groundfish stocks through aquaculture or hatchery programs.

Under the program, the Secretary would be authorized to provide financial assistance to U.S. citizens to carry out the purpose of the section, while giving the highest priority to the owner or operator of a fishing vessel who agrees, in return for the assistance, to surrender temporarily the right to fish for New England groundfish. The purpose of giving preference to such an owner or operator is to use the availability of assistance as a means of reducing, albeit marginally, the fishing effort now concentrated on depleted groundfish stocks.

In establishing and implementing the program, the Secretary shall consult with representatives of the commercial fishing and seafood processing industries and with qualified members of the academic community.

Funding for the fisheries reinvestment program could be made available under the Saltonstall-Kennedy fund, under the separate authority granted by this Act or under a combination thereof. Up to $5 million is authorized annually for fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

Section 902(b) requires the Secretary to work with other Federal agencies to make underutilized species eligible for programs such as the Department of Agriculture's Food for Peace and Section 902(c) directs the New England Regional Fisheries Management Council to develop a management plan for any significant underutilized species that is not already covered by such a plan.

I note that these two fisheries-related provisions are derived from S. 2849, the proposed New England Groundfish Restoration Act which was approved by the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation on June 16. A similar bill, H.R. 5557, was introduced by Representatives GERRY STUDDS and approved by the House of Representatives on September 22.

My own preference would have been to approve S. 2849 in its entirety, or something very close to it. Unfortunately, opposition from within the New England Senate delegation to some aspects of the bill has made that impossible. I am pleased, nevertheless, that we were able to get agreement to move these two provisions, which I believe will take us two significant steps forward in responding to the very serious problems faced by the New England groundfish fishery.

I believe it is important that all Senators, and especially, those from New England, agree that a comprehensive, long-term strategy to restore depleted northwest Atlantic fisheries stocks is essential. The problems are well-documented, severe, urgent and unavoidable. Obviously, we all hope that the New England Council, working with the industry, will be able to develop and implement an effective plan. We note that the industry has made great progress in working with the council, Federal authorities and the Conservation Law Foundation to resolve issues raised by the consent decree under which the council is now forced to operate. If further progress is to be made, it is essential that differences of approach and interest among the various States and gear-types be minimized and the common interest in rebuilding the stocks prevail.

For my part, I intend to begin work as soon as the 103d Congress convenes next year to try to develop a set of regionally accepted proposals for assisting the council and the industry in reducing fishing effort and providing time for the rebuilding of groundfish stocks. The enactment of Title IX of this Act will give us a head start in that direction.

Mr. President, the oceans and atmosphere are critical components of the Earth's ecosystem, and our understanding and management of them is intrinsic to our national well-being. These complex systems moderate global temperatures, protect us from the sun's ultraviolet radiation, and provide us with precious natural resources. The programs of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration are essential for the study, conservation and management of these systems.

I am pleased that we have reached this agreement and are considering this important legislation today, and would like to thank my colleagues and their staffs who have worked with me in a wholly cooperative, diligent, and exemplary bipartisan fashion to achieve this agreement.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of H.R. 2130, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Authorization [NOAA] Act of 1992, as amended. This legislation reauthorizes many important NOAA atmospheric and satellite, ocean and coastal, and fisheries programs. It also contains provisions to improve coastal monitoring and initiate modernization of the NOAA oceanographic research fleet. As I have done in the past, I remind my colleagues of NOAA's important contributions to our understanding and management of natural systems. The legislation before us today would support and improve NOAA programs which, particularly in these days of growing concern over the global environment, are clearly of importance to us all.

Of particular relevance to those of us from the Southeastern States are the provisions in this legislation dealing with NOAA weather service and satellite operations. As everyone knows, Hurricane Hugo caused a great deal of damage to my home State of South Carolina in 1989. Without the forecasts and monitoring provided by the National Weather Service, however, I can assure you that the damage in South Carolina would have been greater and many more lives would have been lost. Similarly, the National Weather Service's information was crucial in the more recent efforts to respond to Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki. This legislation would authorize necessary funding for satellite and weather service programs, and also would initiate innovative new programs such as a joint program between NOAA and the Department of Defense to research hurricane reconnaissance. Further, the legislation includes a much-needed provision to prohibit the closure of weather service offices, and to ensure that National Weather Service coverage is maintained during the modernization process.

The NOAA authorization bill before us today has been carefully crafted as a joint effort among the committees of jurisdiction in the Senate and the House of Representatives. It is comprehensive legislation addressing many of the major policy issues confronting the agency today. I thank my colleagues in both the Senate and the House who have worked long and hard to put together this important legislation. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2130.

COASTAL MONITORING

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise to give my full support to the coastal monitoring provisions in the legislation to authorize the activities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The monitoring program for coastal waters included in the bill was originally proposed in legislation I introduced to expand the protection of coastal waters. Senators CHAFEE and HOLLINGS worked closely with me in reviewing and revising this proposal and I very much appreciate their constructive efforts to advance this important legislation.

There is growing public awareness and concern about environmental problems in coastal waters. News reports have highlighted beach closings in New Jersey, a dead zone in the Gulf of Mexico, and toxic pollutants in sediments in harbors.

The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment [OTA], in a major report titled "Wastes in the Marine Environment", concluded that the overall health of our estuaries and coastal waters is declining or threatened.

The OTA report provides a summary and assessment of the various laws relating to protection of marine and estuarine waters, including the Clean Water Act and the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act. The report states:

> Even if total compliance with today's regulations is achieved, existing programs will not be sufficient to * * * maintain or improve the health of all estuaries and coastal waters. In the absence of additional measures to protect our marine waters, the next few decades will witness new or continued degradation in many estuaries and coastal waters around the country.

The Environment and Public Works Committee has held hearings over the past several years to review the environmental conditions of marine waters and to consider legislation to expand and strengthen marine monitoring and research.

The OTA report, which was presented at the first of those hearings, suggests a range of actions to reverse the decline in coastal and marine water quality, including expanding and strengthening research of the marine environment. The report states:

> Monitoring, research, and enforcement are currently inadequate, and funding levels for those activities are being reduced in some instances.

Dr. Donald Boesch of the Louisiana Marine Consortium, testified:

> Reversing the trend of deteriorating coastal environmental quality well require a much improved understanding of environmental processes and the efforts of changing conditions on ecosystem productivity and integrity.

Mr. Charles Fox, representing the Environmental Policy Institute and a number of environmental groups, stated:

> We believe that the proposed legislation would complement and substantially strengthen existing coastal research and monitoring programs.

An important first step in protecting our coastal waters is to assure that we have useful and reliable data on current environmental conditions and trends in these waters. The coastal monitoring program in this legislation now before us will assure that we have this much needed information.

The new coastal monitoring program is to be jointly administered by the Environmental Protection Agency [EPA] and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA]. Both agencies have vital roles to play in developing and implementing a coastal monitoring program and the legislation is designed to draw on the strengths of both agencies.

While we want the EPA and NOAA to work together to implement the best possible program for monitoring coastal water and sediment quality, we have not specified specific responsibilities for each agency. Instead, we have asked the agencies to work together to develop a comprehensive monitoring strategy which will define respective roles and responsibilities and indicate where other Federal agencies or governments can contribute this effort.

Another critical provision of the program is the requirement for a joint EPA/NOAA report to Congress on environmental conditions in coastal waters. This report will provide a much needed point of reference for assessing the effectiveness of coastal environmental protection programs.

The coastal monitoring program is to include a comprehensive effort to identify environmental conditions and trends throughout coastal waters. This assessment is to be based on the expansion of existing monitoring networks and programs of EPA and NOAA as well as the integration and consolidation of data generated by other Federal agencies, State and local government and other parties.

A key element of the comprehensive monitoring effort is the development of intensive monitoring programs for specific coastal areas. These intensive monitoring programs will supplement data generated by other monitoring programs and will help answer questions about specific trends or conditions identified as part of the national program. The National Research Council will work with the EPA and NOAA to identify specific areas for intensive monitoring.

I am pleased to note that the Gulf of Maine is one of several areas identified in the bill to be intensively monitored as part of this program. This monitoring effort will provide much needed data on the environmental conditions in the Gulf of Maine. While the Gulf of Maine is still very clean, there is evidence of pollution threats in some areas and this new effort will help assure that we recognize potential problems and take response actions before problems become costly and unmanageable.

The bill also provides for the EPA and NOAA to work with other Federal agencies and other parties to develop technical protocols and guidelines to assure that data collected as a result of coastal monitoring programs is consistent and compatible. This effort is essential if we are to make the best use of limited monitoring resources.

The bill provides that data collected by dischargers under requirements of permits issued under section 402 of the Clean Water Act is to be consistent with the national data guidelines and provides authority to modify permits to accomplish this objective.

Nothing in the bill requires dischargers to conduct monitoring not now required under a 402 permit or to add to a permit a new requirement for ambient monitoring of coastal waters. In addition, the reference in subsection (d)(4)(G)(ii) to private parties refers to those agencies or organizations that will implement the intensive monitoring program and does not require any new requirements, conditions, or modifications to permits issued under section 402 of the Clean Water Act.

The bill provides for authorizations to EPA and NOAA to support the coastal monitoring program. These funds are divided evenly among the two agencies and the specific uses of funds are to be determined as part of the development of the national coastal monitoring strategy. Both agencies are authorized to use a portion of these funds for cooperative or contractual agreements with appropriate non-Federal agencies and institutions to assist in implementing intensive monitoring programs. Any such agreements are to provide that Federal funds be matched on a 50–50 basis.

Mr. President, this legislation will give us much needed insight into the changing conditions of one of our most vital natural resources—our coastal waters. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise in support of title V of H.R. 2130, the NOAA Authorization Act of 1991. Title V establishes a comprehensive monitoring program for our oceans and coastal waters.

Mr. President, we have made a great deal of progress in restoring the health of our marine waters. We no longer discharge raw sewage sludge and industrial waste into our coastal waters and ocean. We have begun to address nonpoint pollution, runoff, which threatens our waters. And fish and returning to our nation's estuaries.

But more remains to be done. According to EPA's latest National Water Quality Inventory, in 1988 30 percent of those estuaries which have been assessed either are failing to achieve water quality standards or threaten to fail to achieve those standards. And 224 beach closures were reported in 18 States. These are remarkable figures nearly two decades after passage of the Clean Water Act.

I have joined Senator MITCHELL in introducing S. 1070, the Coastal Protection Act, to provide the programs we need to address the remaining coastal problems. This act is based on hearings held jointly in 1989 by the Subcommittee on Superfund, Ocean and Water Protection which I chair and the Subcommittee on Environmental Protection. We'll address most of the provisions of the Coastal Protection Act during the Senate's consideration of the Clean Water Act.

One essential element to restoring the health of our waters and one component of the Coastal Protection Act is to establish a comprehensive marine monitoring program. Title V establishes such a program based on the monitoring program included in the Coastal Protection Act. This would include a program to monitor garbage and other floatables along our shorelines and report the results of the monitoring to the public. This floatables monitoring program was first included in the Comprehensive Ocean Assessment and Strategy Act which I introduced in 1989.

Title V also includes a program to intensively monitor certain important coastal areas. I'm pleased that title V includes the Hudson-Raritan estuary as one of the areas to be monitored.

Title V will be an important part of our efforts to protect our coastal waters. I urge my colleagues to support title V.

COASTAL MONITORING

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I am very pleased that the pending legislation includes a new program for monitoring environmental conditions and trends in the Nation's coastal waters, including the Great Lakes. This new authority will provide improved information about coastal waters and provide a sound, scientific basis for future decisions concerning protection of this vital resource.

I also want to note that the program is to be a joint effort of the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The bill builds on the strengths of each agency and will assure that we have a unified and coordinated understanding of environmental conditions in coastal waters.

This joint monitoring program is the result of a cooperative effort between the Environment and Public Works Committee and the Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee. It is our intention that this program, which will become a new title of the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act, be the joint jurisdiction of our two committees.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with my colleague from New York that the proposed coastal monitoring program before us will substantially improve and increase the information we have about coastal water and the Great Lakes. It will assist us for years to come in understanding conditions in these waters and responding to possible problems.

The Senator is correct that this program is the product of a joint effort by our two committees and that the new title of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act is intended to be the joint jurisdiction of our two committees. I look forward to working with the Senator from New York in his new role as chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee on coastal monitoring and many other issues of mutual interest.

Mr. CHAFEE. I want to thank Senator HOLLINGS for his constructive effort to develop a balanced and workable coastal monitoring program. I agree that the monitoring program is an important step toward assuring the quality of our coastal resources and I agree that the program is most appropriately the joint jurisdiction of the Commerce Committee and the Environment and Public Works Committee, on which I serve as ranking minority member.

Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee, Senator HOLLINGS, in a short colloquy regarding H.R. 2130, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Authorization Act of 1992.

Subsection (c)(4) of section 503 of this bill is intended to assure that compliance monitoring conducted pursuant to section 402(a)(2) of the Clean Water Act is consistent with the guidelines issued under subsection (c). It is my understanding that discharge permits may be modified only to assure that technical data compiled in connection with compliance monitoring is compatible with the way in which monitoring data is collected under the protocols. Furthermore, nothing in the bill would require dischargers to carry out ambient water quality monitoring or other additional monitoring requirements beyond what is currently required under the Clean Water Act.

Subsection (d) of section 503 creates an intensive water quality monitoring program. The provision contained in subsection (d)(4)(G)(ii) of that subsection specifies the implementation requirements for the monitoring program including the public and private parties that will implement the program. It is my understanding that this provision covers only those institutions that will carry out monitoring programs pursuant to subsection (d) and does not require any new requirements, conditions or modifications to NPDES permits issued under section 402 of the Clean Water Act.

Is this consistent with the views of the distinguished Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I would say to the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island that this is entirely consistent with my understanding of subsection (c)(4) of section 503, and subsection (d) of section 503 of S. 1405. I thank the Senator for his interest.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of this conference agreement on the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Authorization Act of 1992. This legislation provides the authority and funding necessary for NOAA to carry out its important missions of marine research, mapping, weather observation, and ocean and coastal management. It also contains two provisions important to meeting the long-term goal of the Chesapeake Bay Program—restoring the Bay's living resources to healthy and balanced levels—a provision which I authored, establishing within NOAA a Chesapeake Bay Estuarine Resources Office, and a program for monitoring the Nation's marine ecosystems, including the Chesapeake Bay.

As the lead Federal agency responsible for marine and estuarine science, NOAA is a vital part in the Chesapeake Bay restoration program. Since 1985, NOAA has conducted studies which include: fisheries stock assessment and statistics improvement, researching processes controlling low dissolve oxygen and toxic contamination, monitoring algal blooms using aircraft remote sensing, and tracking changes in tidal wetlands using Landsat imagery. This research has been essential to improving our understanding of the interrelationships among climate, harvest, and pollution in the decline of anadromous fish and other marine species in the Bay. In addition, NOAA Sea Grant, Coastal Zone Management, Striped Bass and Oyster Disease research programs, among others, have contributed directly to living resource restoration and pollution prevention efforts in the Bay.

With the signing of the Chesapeake Bay Agreement of 1987 and its recent amendments, and a new Memorandum of Understanding with EPA outlining NOAA's responsibilities in the Bay restoration effort, NOAA's role has expanded and become even more important. NOAA and other Bay area organizations have committed to specific measures to reach the goals of restoring and protecting the Bay's living resources, their habitats and ecological relationships. The new goals and objectives underscore the need not only to continue NOAA's present Chesapeake Bay efforts, but also call for greater science, research, monitoring and data collection support activities.

Unfortunately, each year the administration zeroes out funding for NOAA's Chesapeake Bay programs from its budget request on the basis of an erroneous claim that the programs have met their original goals. Each year the Congress restores this funding. In addition, the program office which coordinated the agency's Chesapeake Bay studies was reorganized in 1990 and since then the responsibilities for administering and coordinating the Agency's Chesapeake Bay activities have been diffuse. Absent a specific authorization, as provided for the Great Lakes Program, it was apparent that NOAA's Chesapeake Bay programs would not receive the important priority they deserve.

The Chesapeake Bay Estuarine Resources Office established in this legislation will help ensure that NOAA's commitments to our nation's estuary are met. The legislation codifies the agency's responsibilities to the Bay effort, specifies the functions of the office, and directs the Secretary of Commerce to submit a funding request for this office in the President's annual budget to the Congress.

The new office will provide a focal point for managing and coordinating NOAA's Chesapeake Bay activities, strengthen the agency's interaction with the Bay Program, and ensure NOAA-wide involvement in the Bay area. I am pleased to report that NOAA is currently in the process of leasing space in Annapolis, in the same building as EPA's Chesapeake Bay Program office, and hiring staff for this new office.

In addition, the legislation authorizes a program of biological monitoring in Chesapeake Bay. Biological monitoring is an essential tool for evaluating the success of the Bay's restoration and protection program. Several recent reports on the Chesapeake Bay have identified the need for a Bay-wide monitoring program of the biological resources of the Chesapeake and its tributaries as a top priority to improve our knowledge of Chesapeake Bay species, their natural cycles, their habitat needs and how they respond to human activities. While NOAA has conducted fisheries stock assessments, research on toxics processes and effects, and remote sensing activities as part of its Chesapeake Bay studies program, there is no continuous monitoring effort to track living resource trends and evaluate the responses of the estuary's biota to changes in their environment. Without such a program, plans for improving water quality, habitats and management of resources may be based on inaccurate information and result in costly mistakes. This biological monitoring provision will enhance NOAA's program and assist in establishing clear management goals and progress indicators for productivity, diversity and abundance of species.

I want to commend the chairman of the committee, Senator HOLLINGS, and Senator ROBB who, as a member of the Committee, played a key role in ensuring that these provisions were included in the bill, for their support and assistance. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this conference agreement.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

TELEPHONE DISCLOSURE AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION ACT 900 SERVICES

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 6191, the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act 900 Services, just received from the House; that the bill be deemed read the third time, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the bill (H.R. 6191) was deemed read the third time, and passed.

THE OMNIBUS OCEANS ACT OF 1992

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 5617, the Omnibus Oceans Act of 1992, just received from the House, that the bill be deemed read three times, passed and the motion to reconsider laid upon the table; and that any statements appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I am pleased to report that an agreement has been reached permitting the Senate to pass a bill that includes amendments to title III of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act [MPRSA] of 1972 and to authorize appropriations for operations and management of the marine sanctuaries program for fiscal years 1993 through 1995. Our national marine sanctuaries protect and preserve marine environments of special ecological, historical, educational, recreational, and aesthetic importance. This marine sanctuary system, like our system of national parks, includes a startling diversity of aquatic habitats and animals such as migrating whales, giant kelp forests, and coral reefs. Importantly, marine sanctuaries provide protected waters and secure habitats for endangered or threatened species of fish, marine mammals, and birds. It is a system in which we can all take pride, and a system that we should continue to support.

Since enactment of the MPRSA in 1972, eight sanctuaries have been designated including sites such as the Channel Islands of California and the Florida Keys. This list is soon to grow, with three more sites to be designated this year.

In the bill now before us, Stellwagen Bank, located in Massachusetts Bay—a site I first nominated for sanctuary designation in 1988—would be designated a National Marine Sanctuary along with the Hawaiian Islands Humpback Whale Sanctuary and Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

Since it is the sanctuary of which I am most familiar, I would like to focus briefly on the Stellwagen Bank designation. Most of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's [NOAA] evaluation process intended to culminate in sanctuary designation for Stellwagen Bank has taken place. Public hearings have been held and public comments have been received. However, over the past 5 months NOAA has delayed the final recommendation for designation. On numerous occasions we have been promised that the designation is imminent, and yet the designation has not been made. I now have concluded that it is important to move forward with the designation of Stellwagen Bank in order to proceed with the long-term management and protection of this environmentally sensitive area.

This bill today also would place a ban on mineral and gravel mining at Stellwagen Bank in order to ensure that this valuable area is never subjected to the devastation which would surely accompany those activates. Factors such as pollution in Massachusetts Bay and dumping of dredged materials also threaten this unique marine resource. With the designation of Stellwagen, we would be better able to manage this resource in such a way to minimize the effects of these harmful activities.

As the number of sanctuaries grows larger, we should ensure that adequate resources are provided for management; not only for sites presently operating, but also for newly designated sites. Historically, funding for marine sanctuaries has been insufficient to allow for comprehensive management of marine areas. The bill would authorize additional funding for program management. According to NOAA's Marine Sanctuary Review Team, none of the sanctuaries now in place is adequately staffed or provided with the facilities, equipment, or supplies required to successfully perform the assigned responsibilities. This funding authorization recognizes the complex reality of managing marine sanctuaries, and ensures that new sites like Stellwagen Bank will receive the necessary support they deserve.

However, Federal funding alone will not be enough to protect a sanctuary. This bill would increase the amount of civil penalties imposed for violations of sanctuary regulations. The increased penalties should serve to deter violations, which will benefit the suers of these sanctuaries and reduce enforcement costs. Where the deterrence is ineffective, the proceeds from these penalties would be applied to the costs of sanctuary management and augment Federal spending. In additioin, this bill would authorize the Secretary of Commerce to enter into cooperative agreements and to solicit and receive donations from nonprofit organizations. This authority would provide additional resources for marine sanctuaries and their management.

This bill also addresses specific needs of the marine sanctuary program that either delay sanctuary designations or hinder sanctuary planning and management.

Specifically, the bill addresses interagency cooperation, especially NOAA's authority to review activities—both inside and outside sanctuary boundaries—that affect sanctuary resources. The bill would require all Federal agencies, and all private activities authorized within sanctuaries by licenses, leases, or permits, to submit written statements to the Secretary of Commerce describing activities potentially detrimental to sanctuary resources. It also would allow the Secretary to recommend reasonable and prudent alternatives in order to protect sanctuary resources and quality. Required notifications and responses should promote more timely evaluations of potentially harmful activities and appropriate responses.

Hazardous materials located close to sanctuaries have emerged as a substantive obstacle to sanctuary designation and management. For example, this has been a major obstacle in the Stellwagen Bank designation. Hazardous materials may threaten living marine resources. Knowing the location of hazardous materials and the extent of contamination is essential to comprehensive management and resource protection. The bill would enhance NOAA's ability to obtain from other Federal agencies information regarding the past, present, or proposed future disposal of hazardous materials in or near marine sanctuaries in order to evaluate environmental risks of such waste disposal.

In addition, the bill would direct NOAA to promote and coordinate research, monitoring and education in marine sanctuaries so that the public might better understand the complexities of the marine environment. Greater emphasis on marine research and education should benefit several marine institutions in my own State such as the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the New England Aquarium. Undoubtedly, sanctuaries in other regions will provide similar benefits.

Finally, there is a need to focus the marine sanctuaries program on the future. This bill would require NOAA to review sanctuary management plans every 5 years in order to evaluate progress in reaching long-term goals. Also, the bill would allow for the establishment of one or more advisory councils for marine sanctuaries. These councils should provide direct assistance, guidance, and vision for sanctuary designations and management.

Before closing, I would also like to express my gratitude and appreciation to the distinguished committee chairman and cosponsor, Senator HOLLINGS, and to the estimable ranking minority member, Senator DANFORTH, as well as to fellow cosponsor, the esteemed Senator from Alaska, Senator STEVENS, for their continued leadership and support for the marine sanctuaries program. I would also like to commend our colleagues in the House, especially Mr. HERTEL, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. PANETTA, and our departed colleague Mr. Jones, for their cooperation and truly superb work in reaching this agreement.

Finally, we cannot ignore, as we are often prone to do, the invaluable assistance of their staffs, assistance that was essential in guiding this bill through the legislative process. I want to extend my sincere appreciation to them for their perseverance and dedication.

The National Marine Sanctuary Program preserves, protects, and manages for future generations invaluable marine environments that are part of our common natural heritage. I am pleased that we are considering this bill to reauthorize this program.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5617, which includes several important provisions.

First, it authorizes appropriations and manning levels for Coast Guard activities in fiscal year 1993. The bill also includes other important provisions which provide for a sound investment in the future of the Coast Guard.

The bill before us today provides the core authorization for the Coast Guard for fiscal year 1993. The authorization totals $3.817 billion for 1993, which reflects a modest increase of 6 percent from the fiscal year 1992 appropriated level. This small increase clearly is an inaccurate reflection of the expanding duties of this branch of the Nation's armed services. From its 1790 mandate of prevention of smuggling and collection of tax revenues, the duties of the Coast Guard have expanded, in recent years to include search and rescue, fisheries law enforcement, drug interdiction, aids to navigation, marine safety, and marine environmental protection. In addition, during the past few years, the Coast Guard has been on the front line of highly publicized events such as the clean up of the Exxon Valdez, the blockade of Iraq, and the Haitian interdiction. The bill provides the bare-bones authorization needed for the Coast Guard to perform these many important functions.

It also provides authorizations for general Coast Guard operations, as well as for some important specific initiatives. Among the general Coast Guard expenses authorized under the bill are funding for Coast Guard operating expenses and capital funding projects. The first of these accounts allows the Coast Guard to pay for operation and maintenance of its vessels and aircraft. The second provides money for acquisition, construction, rebuilding, and improvement of aids to navigation, shore and offshore facilities, vessels, and aircraft. General authorizations are also included to provide affordable housing, medical care, training, family services, and recreational facilities for the men and women of the Coast Guard. Coast Guard retirement pay for fiscal year 1993, which provides money to retired military personnel of the Coast Guard, the Coast Guard Reserve, and the former Lighthouse Service is authorized in this section of the bill. Finally, general authorizations are provided to fund research and development, bridge alteration, and for a 42-percent increase in funding for environmental compliance and restoration activities.

Under the category of specific authorizations, the bill provides an authorization for a number of important Coast Guard projects. To assist the Coast Guard in its efforts to improve oilspill response, specific authorizations are provided for prepositioned oilspill cleanup equipment in Houston, TX, and Portland, OR, and for acquisition of oilspill training simulators for Texas and Massachusetts. The bill also authorizes funding to improve Coast Guard shore facilities at Cape Hatteras in North Carolina.

In addition, it contains provisions which amend existing law applicable to the Coast Guard. These provisions address specific problems related to payment of civil penalties, eligibility for special pay in the Coast Guard, Coast Guard inspection and enforcement authority with respect to foreign passenger vessels, and reimbursement for overseas inspections and examinations of foreign vessels. H.R. 5055 also contains provisions to improve Coast Guard recycling programs, phone access, medical benefits, and inshore vessel traffic regulation.

Furthermore, this legislation authorizes funding for the National Marine Sanctuaries Program for fiscal years 1993 through 1996 and makes certain improvements to the overall program.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of title III of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 [MPRSA]. As we consider the reauthorization legislation before us today, I remind my colleagues of some of the important successes of this program. During recent years, the National Marine Sanctuaries Program has grown in size and stature. Three new sanctuaries have been added to the program in the past 3 years, and at least six additional sites are under consideration for designation. The National Marine Sanctuarites Program is being called upon to meet greater challenges, such as the development of a management plan for the 2,600-square mile Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary. Clearly, from its relative obscurity in the early 1980's, the National Marine Sanctuaries Program has become a well-recognized and critical key to protecting Marine ecosystems.

This reauthorization package has been tailored to encourage the current momentum of the National Marine Sanctuaries Program, particularly in the designation or study of new sites required by the 1998 amendments to the MPRSA. While providing some fine-tuning, the legislation essentially would provide the Marine Sanctuaries Program with 4 years to take the next important step of developing and implementing management plans in its new and existing sanctuaries. The legislation before us today also provides an increase in authorized funding commensurate with the increased responsibilities of the program.

The legislation also addresses certain needs in existing sanctuaries, and also finalizes designation of several new marine sanctuaries. Under this bill, three new sanctuaries would be added to the National Marine Sanctuaries Program. The Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary, which is an area of unusual biological productivity and diversity, would be designated off the coast of Massachusetts. The Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, which has been under consideration for some time now, would be designated off the central coast of California. And, finally, the Hawaiian Islands Humpback National Marine Sanctuary, established for the purposes of protecting the Hawaiian stock of the endangered humpback whale, also would be designated.

I am pleased to support inclusion of these important and unique areas in our National Marine Sanctuaries Program. I urge my Senate colleagues to support these new designations, and to approve this overall reauthorization legislation which will help to ensure our Nation's continued efforts to preserve our precious marine environment.

In addition, this bill would amend the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972 to improve and provide a statutory basis for the existing marine mammal health and stranding response activities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA].

Each year, NOAA volunteers respond to an average of 2,000 marine mammal strandings along the coast of the United States. Although these volunteer networks have performed a vital service for some 20 years, recent events, such as the 1987–88 bottlenose dolphin die-off and the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill, have highlighted inadequacies in the current Federal system for responding to large-scale mortality events. The bill would mandate contingency planning to improve immediate response to large-scale marine mammal stranding events. The legislation would also require standardization of tissue collection and archiving procedures, which would clearly improve our ability to discern the causes of such events. Further, under this legislation, NOAA would be required to set guidelines for the release of rehabilitated marine mammals to the wild.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I rise in support of H.R. 5617, the Oceans Act of 1992. The bill has a provision that is intended to protect the waterways of the United States from serious environmental problems resulting from abandoned barges.

Abandoned barges have been used by so-called midnight dumpers for the disposal of hazardous wastes and waste oils. The General Accounting Office [GAO] has found that there are over 1,300 known abandoned vessels along U.S. waterways. They have been the cause of numerous water pollution incidents, including many incidents in my home State of Louisiana, that have cost the Federal Government millions of dollars in cleanup expenses. This amendment is designed to give the Coast Guard the authority to deal with these potential sources of pollution.

The provision prohibits owners or operators of barges over 100 gross tons from abandoning them on the navigable waters of the United States. In addition, it directs the Secretary of Transportation to fine barge owners or operators up to $1,000 for each day that the vessel is deemed to be abandoned. The Secretary is also directed to require the owner or operator to remove the abandoned barges for which they are responsible. If the owner or operator does not remove the barge as specified, the Secretary is authorized to have it removed by a third party at the expense of the violating party.

This provision regarding abandoned barges is essential to the protection of the waterways of Louisiana. I urge its quick passage.

THE BREAUX-MOYNIHAN AMENDMENT, THE CLEAN VESSEL ACT OF 1992

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I rise to support the Clean Vessel Act of 1992 amendment, which is subtitle "F" of title V in H.R. 5617, the Oceans Act of 1992.

In 1984, I joined with Senator MALCOLM WALLOP to lead the legislative effort to establish the WALLOP-BREAUX trust fund. We developed a team approach, Mr. President, for protecting and expanding opportunities for recreational boaters to enjoy boating and fishing in America's many waterways.

That program is truly one of America's great success stories. Under the authorizing jurisdiction of the Senate Commerce Committee, the management of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Coast Guard, Wallop-Breaux's fisheries research and fish habitat improvement, and boating safety and aquatic resource education programs have flourished. The fund collects taxes from boaters and fishermen, more than $240 million a year, to be used at the Federal, State and local level to benefit millions of users of our waterways.

I attribute much of Wallop-Breaux's success to this team approach to enhancing safe and healthy recreational uses of our waterways. The Federal Government, State governments, and the boaters are partners in this effort to protect and develop America's waters.

The time has come, Mr. President, to prepare for realigning the responsibilities of Wallop-Breaux team members. Due to budgetary pressures we see that the Coast Guard is forced into becoming a decreasing presence in State coastal waters. This is occurring at the same time that our recreational boater population is growing.

To deflect this threat to boating safety, the amendment offers an increased share of Wallop-Breaux funding that will flow to the States for boating safety programs. As a result, the States will be in position to upgrade in-State efforts to encourage safe boating.

Today, I am also calling on this successful collaboration to join in solving the increasingly vexatious problem of recreational boaters having to discharge raw sewage in navigable waters of the United States. We know that such practices are in violation of U.S. law.

It is occurring, however, because there are not enough pumpout stations; there are few accessible disposals for dumping such wastes at public and private marinas around the country.

The amendment offers Wallop-Breaux merit grants to States that agree to study the extent of the problem in their jurisdictional waters. States are then encouraged to develop plans for any construction or renovation of pumpout stations and waste reception facilities that are necessary to meet the needs of an increasing boating population.

Mr. President, in accepting this amendment the Senate Commerce Committee is accepting what has proven to be an effective approach to protecting our waterways for safe boating; Once again Chairman HOLLINGS has demonstrated his high level of support for Wallop-Breaux fund programs: in passing this amendment we are eradicating a potentially serious threat to safe boating in the waterways of the United States.

I thank the committee and my colleagues in the Senate for their acceptance of this amendment.

So the bill (H.R. 5617) was deemed read the third time and passed.

THE JUSTICE IMPROVEMENTS BILL

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3349, the justice improvements bill, introduced earlier today by Senators BIDEN and THURMOND; that the bill be deemed read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that statements with respect to passage of this legislation appear at an appropriate place in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ARMORED CAR INDUSTRY RECIPROCITY ACT

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Commerce Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 3229, the armored car industry bill, and that the Senate then proceed to its immediate consideration, that the bill be deemed read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to this bill appear in the RECORD at the appropriate place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, this summer I was contacted by Joe Shea, the president of Rochester Armored Car Co. in Omaha, NE, about a serious problem facing America's armored car industry. I was pleased to introduce the Armored Car Industry Reciprocity Act to address this problem and help protect the security of goods, currency, and securities moving in interstate commerce. I am delighted that the U.S. Senate will soon pass this important legislation and am hopeful that the House of Representatives can send this bill to the President for his signature. Identical legislation has been introduced by Congresswoman CARDISS COLLINS in the House of Representatives.

America transports billions of dollars of cash, securities, food stamps, bullion, and other valuables by armored car. Without armored car transportation, interstate commerce would come to a grinding halt. This mode of transportation which is used extensively by Federal and State governments is absolutely vital to our Nation's economy.

The legislation the Senate adopts today addresses a problem which threatens to impedes the efficient movement of valuables. That problem occurs when States and localities have various rules relating to the licensing of weapons which are used by crews working on armored cars.

In recent years, there have been several instances where interstate armored cars have been stopped and armed guards have been arrested or had their weapons confiscated by local authorities. These individuals were licensed to carry their weapons in their home States. Unfortunately, those permits were not honored in the arresting States.

This legislation would grant reciprocity to qualified weapons licenses for armed guards working on armored cars. The legislation establishes minimum State standards for armored car crew weapons licenses. These standards will require criminal background checks, and annual classroom and range training. The legislation will not require States to adopt these minimum standards but will provide reciprocity for the licenses of those States which do so. Most States already meet these standards.

As chairman of the Senate Surface Transportation Subcommittee, I am pleased to support this legislation which will facilitate the safe and efficient transport of currency and valuables, improve law enforcement and gun safety. It is a commonsense proposal which has the support of Federal agencies and has not sparked any known opposition. I encourage my colleagues to support The Armored Car Industry Reciprocity Act.

So, the bill (S. 3229) was deemed read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 3229

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Armored Car Industry Reciprocity Act of 1992".

(b) MINIMUM STATE REQUIREMENTS.—A State agency meets the minimum State requirements of this subsection if in issuing a weapon's license to an armored car crew member described in subsection (a), the agency requires the crew member to provide information on an annual basis to the satisfaction of the agency that the crew member—

(1) has received classroom and range training in weapon's safety and marksmanship during the current year by a qualified instructor for each weapon that the crew member is licensed to carry; and

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect on January 1, 1993.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to prohibit sports gambling under State law, and for other purposes.".

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to thank my colleagues for approving the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act.

Mr. President, initiatives to sanction wagering on sporting events have become increasingly attractive to States in recent years. We all recognize the fiscal constraints under which States operate in these tough economic times. But we must not forget the consequences of sports betting. Based on what I know about the dangers of sports betting, I am not prepared to risk the values that sports instill in youth just to add a few more dollars to state coffers.

Mr. President, State-sanctioned sports betting conveys the message that sports are more about money than personal achievement and sportsmanship. In these days of scandal and disillusionment, it is important that our youngsters not receive this message. As a former professional basketball player, I have witnessed firsthand some of the negative effects of sports gambling. If the dangers of State-sponsored sports betting are not confronted, the character of sports and youngsters' view of them could be seriously threatened.

Sports betting threatens the integrity of and public confidence in professional and amateur team sports, converting sports from wholesome athletic entertainment into a vehicle for gambling. Sports gambling raises people's suspicions about point-shaving and game-fixing. Where sports gambling occurs, fans cannot help but wonder if a missed free throw, dropped fly ball, or a missed extra point was part of a player's scheme to fix the game. If sports betting spreads, more and more fans will question every coaching decision and official's call. All of this puts undue pressure on players, coaches and officials. State-sponsored sports betting could change forever the relationship between the players and the game and between the game and the fans. Sports would become the gamblers' game and not the fans' game.

Mr. President, the bill the Senate has passed today contains a provision which effectively allows the State of New Jersey 1 year to establish casino-based sports betting by referendum. While I wish this bill did not contain such a provision, I am convinced that it would not have been possible to pass a ban on sports betting without it. My hope is that New Jersey will decide not to exercise this right.

The good news, Mr. President, is that this bill bans sports betting outright in 44 States and given one state, New Jersey, only 1 year to act before it too would be prohibited from allowing sports betting.

Again, I congratulate my colleagues for acting in the best interest of youngsters and athletes by passing this bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am extremely pleased that the House has passed the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act, S. 474. As a cosponsor of this legislation I believe that we must eliminate State-sanctioned betting on the outcomes of organized sports contests in our Nation. Sadly, some of our nations greatest scandals have been the result of our sports heroes betting on sporting events. With the passage of this legislation, we clearly eliminate any State-sanctions that would encourage athletes to participate in changing the outcome of any organized sporting event.

Shortly after the Senate-passage of S. 474, I was made aware of a situation that could be interpreted to fall under the provisions of this bill. The New Mexico State Legislature passed a law that would allow our State to be the first in the Nation to venture into what is a $13 billion industry in Japan—parimutuel bicycle racing, or as its known in Japan, Keirin. This sport is structured in a fashion that is similar to parimutuel horse racing, except that horses and riders are replaced with bicyclists.

In S. 474, the Senate included provisions that exempted both parimutuel animal racing and jai alai. Since Keirin is still in its developmental stages and is still relatively obscure, it was obviously not included on the exempted list.

I discussed this situation with my good friend from Arizona, Senator DECONCINI. Upon reviewing a description of Keirin, the Senator from Arizona also noted the similarities between this sport and those exempted in the bill. I then suggested the possibility of including Keirin in this language. My good friend saw no initial reasons why that would be problem.

Mr. DECONCINI. That is correct. When the Senator first brought this to my attention in late June, the bill had already passed the Senate. At that time I indicated that if there was an opportunity to resolve this issue in conference, it would be done. Unfortunately, that opportunity did not occur.

Mr. DOMENICI. Clearly, my intent is not to undermine the effectiveness of S. 474. So, it is my understanding that my good friend from Arizona cleared the possibility of exempting Keirin from the provisions of this bill with our Nation's major sports organizations, the national Football League, the National Basketball Association, Major League Baseball, the National Hockey League, and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, to ensure that they had no concerns.

Mr. DECONCINI. It is my understanding that the leagues and the NCAA do not object to this type of parimutuel bike racing and did not intend for the bill to cover such a sport. Clearly, this type of bicycle racing does not possess the same threat as other forms of State-sponsored sports betting.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would like to note that this legislation is designed to protect the pure competitiveness of sports in our Nation. Athletes in both amateur and professional sports contend with a great deal of pressure to excel in each contest just by the very nature of sport. State-sanctioned betting only increases the likelihood that some athletes will be compelled to participate in changing the outcomes of contests. There is no reason for our States to add pressure and tension to this setting. Sports enthusiasts cheer their teams to clean, fair outcomes—we should continue to encourage this attitude and practice. Could I ask my friend from Arizona to explain why jai-alai and horse racing were exempted from this legislation?

Mr. DECONCINI. The reason jai alai and horse racing were exempted from this bill was because jai-alai, like horse racing, is played primarily for the purpose of gambling. The purpose of this act is to protect the integrity of professional and amateur sports, not parimutuel betting schemes. Therefore, Keirin racing should not be covered by this bill and was not intended to be covered.

Mr. DOMENICI. As the Senator has stated, it is clear in S. 474 that parimutuel betting contests are not considered to be sports in the same way as those events contested in our major professional and amateur sports organizations. Obviously, Keirin's obscurity as a parimutuel betting scheme was the factor for its exclusion from those exempted in the legislation. Would the Senator from Arizona agree that the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act was not designed to prohibit the State of New Mexico from sanctioning Keirin?

Mr. DECONCINI. Yes, I agree. This bill prohibits State-sponsored betting "on one or more competitive games in which amateur or professional athletes participate, or are intended to participate * * *" It is my interpretation of this prohibition that it would not apply to parimutuel bicycle racing because it does not constitute a "game." At the time this bill was introduced, I argued against the need to specifically exclude horse racing for the same reason. However, because of the importance of horse racing to the economies of a number of States and our intention for this bill not to apply to horse racing, language was included to clarify that the bill did not apply to such racing.

This bill is meant to prohibit States from changing the nature of baseball, football, hockey, and basketball from wholesome entertainment for the entire family to a game played for the purpose of gambling. Clearly, this is not meant to apply to a sport such as Keirin racing.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank my good friend, the distinguished Senator from Arizona, for his thoughtful clarification and remarks.

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I would like to ask my colleague from Arizona, the sponsor of the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act a question regarding his intent as to the effect of the bill on certain actions in my home State of Wyoming. They are legal now under State law and I want to assure that they will continue.

My concern centers in particular on the practice of calcutta wagering. For those unfamiliar with this tradition, Wyoming law defines it as follows. Calcutta wagering means wagering on the outcome of amateur contests, cutter horse racing, professional rodeo events, or professional golf tournaments in which those who wager bid at auction for the exclusive right to purchase or wager upon a particular contestant or entrant in the event and when the outcome of the event has been decided the total wagers comprising the pool, less a percentage take-out by the event's sponsor, is distributed to those who "purchased" or wagered upon the winning contestants or entrants.

Not only are the calcuttas extremely popular, they are also beneficial as a minimum of 10 percent of the total wagers must be donated to a charitable or benevolent purpose.

In addition, I would like to know whether this bill is intended to affect the other gambling devices, practices or all other bona fide contests currently allowed under Wyoming State law such as raffles, bingo, tickets for raffle, or pull tabs.

Mr. DECONCINI. I appreciate the Senator's point of view and I can assure him that the practices which are now authorized and conducted under Wyoming State law, including calcutta wagering and the other provisions which he mentioned will not be affected by enactment of this legislation.

Mr. WALLOP. I thank the Senator. I would like to ask the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator THURMOND, if that is his understanding also.

Mr. THURMOND. I assure the Senator from Wyoming that is my understanding.

Mr. WALLOP. I thank my colleagues for their help in clarifying that this will not affect what the people of Wyoming have currently put in place with regard to their State gambling laws.

Mr. BRADLEY. I move the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. HELMS (for himself and Mr. SANFORD):

S. 3370. A bill to provide for the full settlement of all claims of Swain County, NC, against the United States under the agreement dated July 30, 1943, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

SWAIN COUNTY SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1992

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, today I meet a promise I made to the people of tiny Swain County, NC, many years ago. I told them that I would do everything in my power to force the Federal Government to keep a commitment it made to them back in 1943, almost a half-century ago. Unfortunately, my absence from the Senate prevented me from carrying through with my pledge earlier this year.

On October 22, 1991, I introduced, the Swain County Settlement Act of 1991. The amendment at the desk contains the provision of that bill. It directs the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Treasury to fully honor the 1943 contract between the people of western North Carolina and the Federal Government.

Mr. President, at the outset I make this point: At issue here is whether the U.S. Government will keep its word, and live up to a very clear commitment made 49 years ago in exchange for the Federal Government being given the right to flood thousands of acres of Swain County land to create the Fontana Lake. The integrity of the Federal Government, and those of us who serve in Congress today, will be decided by what we do, or fail to do, in the minds of people who have been waiting for 48 years.

The Helms amendment proposes three things: First, it orders the Secretary of the Interior to begin construction of the road promised by the Federal Government in 1943; second, it directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Swain County, NC, the sum of $16 million to compensate the county for the destruction of North Carolina Highway 288; and third, it orders the Park Service to erect a historical marker at Soco Gap to honor the contributions of the Cherokee Nation to the people of North Carolina and to the United States.

This amendment requires the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior to meet their obligations to Swain County by paying the $16 million and building the road from their unobligated funds in fiscal year 1993. If the funds available are not sufficient to meet the needs of Swain County then the amendment authorizes the appropriation of such sums as are necessary for the Government to honor its obligation.

Senators should be aware of what happened 48 years ago to understand why I so vigorously support full settlement of this matter. In 1943 the Federal Government and the Tennessee Valley Authority decided they needed to flood land from the farmers in Swain County, in order to generate hydroelectric power. Literally thousands of Swain County residents packed up and left their homes because the Federal Government needed their land. The Government did not relocate them, nor did Government give North Carolina families additional land. The Government merely offered a few dollars for the land, but Swain County citizens have told me that they never received even a dime for their land.

I don't have to remind Senators, Mr. President, that in 1943, World War II war was raging in Europe and the Pacific. Many of the men from the Swain County area were overseas fighting for their country's freedom—at the very time their land back home was being taken by the Federal Government.

When the Government took the 44,400 acres of land north of Fontana Lake, it agreed: First, to reimburse Swain County for an existing highway that would be flooded in order to create Fontana Lake and second, to build an around-the-park road to, among other things, provide access to gravesites left behind when the people were forced off the land. In case anyone cares to see it, I have a copy of the North Shore Road contract signed by FDR's Interior Secretary Harold Ickes and North Carolina's Governor J. Melville Broughton.

In July 1943, shortly after the agreement was signed, a Tennessee Valley Authority supervisor wrote the families about gravesite removal. The letter stated:

> The construction of Fontana Dam necessitates the flooding of the road leading to the Proctor Cemetery located in Swain County, NC, and to reach this cemetery in the future will be necessary to walk a considerable distance until a road is constructed in the vicinity of the cemetery, which is proposed to be completed after the war has ended. We are informed that you are the nearest surviving relative of a deceased who is buried in this cemetery.

Because of the understanding mentioned in this letter—that the road would be completed shortly after the war—families agreed to leave their deceased relatives on the land taken by the Federal Government.

Mr. President, documents dating back to 1943 show that the Government did fulfill its promise to pay for Highway 288. In 1943 the Government paid to the State of North Carolina approximately $400,000, an amount which represents the principal which Swain County owed on outstanding bonds.

According to my information, the Federal Government paid that amount to the State of North Carolina as trustee. A letter dated November 22, 1943 from the Treasurer of the Tennessee Valley Authority to the Treasurer of the State of North Carolina confirms that payment was made.

The full payment never reached Swain County and the Federal Government never fulfilled its obligation to build the road. There were a few false starts, though. In 1963, the Federal Government built 2.5 miles of the road; in 1965 it built 2.1 miles; and in 1969 it built one additional mile and a 1,200-foot-long tunnel. Then the environmentalists got into the act and the project was shut down. Now you can visit one of western North Carolina's best-known sites, the "Road to Nowhere". It is a travesty—a monument to a broken promise by the U.S. Government.

Senator SANFORD suggested last year that Swain County has not been able to grow because it has not received the payment of $16 million—which the Federal Government owes the county for destroying NC Hwy 288 in 1943. I disagree. Swain County and most of western North Carolina have suffered economic distress because—I repeat: because—as each year goes by, more and more land in North Carolina is taken off the tax rolls and placed off limits. Over the years, people in western North Carolina have watched the Federal Government seize their land for one purpose or another. They have very little industry. They have no tax base. The unemployment rate is high.

No one can fully appreciate how the government has crippled the economy in western North Carolina until he looks at how much land the Federal Government has already seized. In Swain County alone, out of 345,715 acres, the Federal Government has taken 276,577 acres. Nearby Graham County has the same problem. Of the 193,216 acres in that county, the Federal Government has taken 138,813 acres. Of the 353,452 acres in the Haywood County, the Federal Government has taken 131,111 acres.

I mention all this to emphasize the frustration in western North Carolina. Meanwhile, in the four Tennessee counties bordering the Great Smoky Mountains National Park for instance, the Federal Government owns less than two fifths of the land. I have no quarrel with our friends in Tennessee but facts are facts.

Although the Great Smoky Mountains National Park is the most visited national park in the country, few tourists who travel through the Smokies have a place to pause on the North Carolina side of the park. The road in Swain County, promised over 49 years ago, would change that. It would attract industry and tourists, not to the detriment of the scenic beauty of the Smokies but for the betterment of the citizens of western North Carolina. Senator SANFORD himself stated that he would like the road to become a part of the Blue Ridge Parkway system.

Senator SANFORD stated prior to his December meeting in Swain County, that Department of the Interior regulations and so-called environmental guidelines prevent the construction of the road and, for that reason, he would not support full compliance with the 1943 agreement. The Helms legislation should ease Senator SANFORD's concerns because it orders, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior to build the road.

As Paul Harvey would say, "now you know the rest of the story".

Make no mistake about it, the radical environmentalists will not be satisfied until all of western North Carolina is locked up and the key is thrown away. They have opposed my efforts to achieve fairness for western North Carolina.

I tried to compromise with the environmentalists and with senator SANFORD. I introduced legislation in the 98th, the 99th, and the 100th Congresses. I agreed to place approximately 200,000 acres of North Carolina land into wilderness in exchange for three things: First, reimbursement for Highway 288 and a Farmers Home loan; second, exclusion of 44,000 acres of North Carolina land from wilderness; and third, the authorization of money for a primitive road to be built to the cemeteries north of Fontana Lake.

Mr. President, nothing happened.

I made a commitment to the people of western North Carolina years ago. I promised to fight for their interest. If I lose, the Federal Government will lose the respect and confidence of thousands of North Carolinians.

Finally, Mr. President, I thank my able colleague for joining me, Governor Martin, the people of Swain County, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, and all of the other citizens of western North Carolina in supporting my effort to get Swain County moving toward a more prosperous future.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Governor of North Carolina, a history of the North Carolina Shore Road-Wilderness controversy, a letter I wrote to the Fontana Agreement Bi-Partisan Committee on July 12, 1991, a copy of the 1943 agreement, an article from the Winston-Salem Journal, a statement by the principal chief of the Cherokee Nation Jonathan Taylor, be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Raleigh, NC, September 18, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
Dirksen Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR JESSE. I understand that an amendment to the Interior Appropriations regarding payment to Swain County, North Carolina in lieu of a road on the north shore of Fontana Lake is expected to be offered by Senator Terry Sanford. I would like to voice my opposition to that amendment.

The North Shore Road was promised to the people of Swain County in 1943, when the Tennessee Valley Authority flooded their lands and an existing road to create what is now Fontana Lake. The 1943 agreement required that a new road be built so that the people of Swain County would have access to ancestral lands and cemeteries that are now part of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. In the ensuing years, the lack of federal action in carrying out the agreement has engendered a deep distrust of the federal government on the part of the people of Swain County. Only construction of the road would show that the federal government is true to its word and help alleviate that mistrust.

There are some who believe that the federal government should discharge its 1943 obligation via a $16 million cash payment to the Swain County government in lieu of building the promised road. That would, in effect, compensate a third party instead of keeping the promise to the first party. I oppose this travesty, but urge that no such resolution be authorized without a referendum to show the will of the people of Swain County.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

JAMES G. MARTIN.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, July 12, 1991.

THE FONTANA AGREEMENT BI-PARTISAN COMMITTEE,
Bryson City, NC.

DEAR FRIENDS: Many thanks for your letter of July 3, requesting my opinion of the legislation by Senator Sanford, authorizing the payment of $16 million as a final settlement for the federal government's failure to keep its 1943 promise to the people of Swain County.

While I sincerely appreciate Senator Sanford's efforts to settle this matter, I must be frank with you: I cannot support any proposal which does not require the United States Government to honor its full and complete pledge—and that means the construction of the road.

Literally thousands of people who have written to me during the last five years feel the same way, and it is not my intent to turn my back on them. To me a commitment is a commitment, whether it is made by one person or the United States Government.

You also asked if I think that a two lane paved road will be built in the future. My answer to that must also be frank. The only way this road will be constructed is for the entire North Carolina congressional delegation to stand together and demand that the 1943 agreement be upheld.

For too long this issue has been dominated by special interest groups outside our state. These groups have promoted divisions among us—and you see the result. Our elected leadership can no longer permit these outside forces to dictate the economic future of a splendid section of Western North Carolina.

I will soon offer an alternative to Senator Sanford's legislation designed to bring the United States Government in full compliance with its 1943 commitment. This is not time to back down and compromise what was clearly promised to us.

I stand ready to work with you, Senator Sanford, and the Department of the Interior, to help Swain County and all of Western North Carolina move toward a prosperous future as we approach the 21st century.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely,

JESSE HELMS.

THE GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS WILDERNESS CONTROVERSY: THE REAL STORY

(By Charlene Hogue Triplett)

Hardy pioneers, mostly Scotch-Irish, English and German, settled the mountains of Western North Carolina (WNC) in the 1800s. By the late 1800s, the area was very prosperous; unemployment was an unknown thing. The area was rich in natural resources, there were lumber companies, copper mines, farms, orchards, and prosperous towns with their own theatres, churches, and businesses. This was a time when a man's word was his bond and a handshake was sufficient for a contractual agreement.

The Great Smoky Mountains National Park (GSMNP) was authorized in 1927. The first land was purchased for the Park in 1928, and the original GSMNP was dedicated in 1934 by President Roosevelt. The mountain people in the region were proud that their beautiful homeland had been chosen to be a National Park "for the enjoyment of all people"; even the school children raised money to help pay for the land, which was largely owned by huge lumber companies. Park land was paid for not only by donations from private citizens, but also towns, the States of North Carolina and Tennessee; and a large grant from J.D. Rockefeller.

The GSMNP lies between North Carolina and Tennessee; the majority in North Carolina. One mountain county of North Carolina, Swain, sacrificed more of its land than any other county to be included in the GSMNP. The total acreage held by the Park today within Swain County is 217,565 acres, or 65 percent of the county. More than 40 percent of the Park is in Swain County.[1]

Prior to the early 1940s, there was one area of Swain County which was originally intended for inclusion in the Park, an area lying south of the original Park boundary and north of the Little Tennessee River. Originally, this strip of land was not purchased, partly because of lack of funds but also because the people who lived in that area vigorously refused to sell their land. But this area was later taken in the early 40s in another federal project.

As early as 1920, Alcoa, (Aluminum Corporation of America), a large corporation in neighboring Tennessee, began buying water rights and power plants in WNC. Later, when the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) was created, it became partners with Alcoa in many projects. With the onset of World War II, the United States' industrial sector began operating at full production, and TVA was called upon to produce more electric power to expedite the production of war materials. The eastern Tennessee region was a leader in the production of aluminum and war munitions, and more electricity was needed in this area for those existing industries. Alcoa already had plans to construct a dam on the Tennessee River in the region to provide more hydroelectric power. Therefore a deal was made between TVA and Alcoa, in which Alcoa transferred to TVA the land which it had already purchased, as well as other rights and interests in the Fontana Project and other Little Tennessee River projects; and TVA would pay Alcoa with electric power.[2]

Congress authorized construction of Fontana Dam on December 17, 1941, as part of TVA's third wartime emergency program. The Fontana project was the biggest ever to be undertaken by TVA. Hydroelectricity from the dam was to be used primarily to produce aluminum for airplanes in the big factories in eastern Tennessee. On completion, the dam was to be 480 feet high, the highest dam East of the Rockies and the fourth highest in the world at the time. Construction on the dam began January 1, 1942, and was completed by round the clock construction in record time. The closure of the dam occurred on November 7, 1944, and it began generating power January 20, 1945. "* * * in time to be of considerable value in the closing phases of the war."[3]

The creation of Fontana Reservoir necessitated the acquisition of 11,800 acres of prime land in WNC, for the dam site and reservoir. The reservoir would also flood a State Highway, 288, leaving approximately 44,400 acres on the north shore of the planned reservoir isolated. (This area has been termed the "North Shore".) The land area acquired for the Project, which could have been about 12,000 acres, finally totaled 68.291 acres.[4]

The official TVA document which recorded the project, The Fontana Project, gives us an account by which the land was acquired:

"Prices to be paid for the land were fixed by TVA's appraisal staff. No price-trading was permitted to enter into the negotiations and the property was either purchased at the appraised price or condemned * * * TVA's governing price policy is to purchase land and rights required at prices which will enable owners to relocate or re-establish themselves on properties at least equal in value to those they previously owned."[5]

TVA has its account of how the land was taken; the natives of the North Shore area also have their account.

"I might say a few things that I really do not like to say about the U.S. Government, but I believe I lost part of my heritage when it was taken over by the U.S. Government. My grandfather, Andrew J. Posey, owned 300-plus acres of land on Pilkey's Creek. [Which is on the North Shore.] He was not asked if he could sell it. He wasn't asked what he would take for it. He was told that he would get $2,000 for it. Then when he refused to sign a deed, he was forced to watch a judge sign a deed for him," thus states Joyce Posey Breedlove at a Senate Subcommittee Hearing.[6]

Obviously "TVA's governing price policy" was not used or taken into account in buying land for this project. Taylor Kirkland, a native of the North Shore, also testified at this March 14, 1984 field hearing held in Bryson City, NC, by the Senate Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Waters, stating: "We had 99.9 acres of property. We were given $1,435 . . . We came up here and relocated about 2½ miles north of Bryson City, and we got 12 acres for $1,300."[7]

Reverend Buford Woodard of the Deep Creek Baptist Church in Bryson City, NC, also testified at the hearing. He remembers how the TVA came and took his family's land:

"My mother was a widow. My father passed away in 1935 . . . and she was left with six children. At the time that the TVA came, of course, to take over the property, she had four children left. . . . She would never sign the deed because she felt that 600 acres was the inheritance of her family that she had worked hard to rear. But it was carried to the court . . . and there in the court of this country the deed was made to the TVA and $5,000 put in the Bryson City Bank, . . . $5,000 for 600 acres, 3 houses, 350 fruit-bearing trees."[8]

Countless testimonies at this 1984 Senate Hearing clearly show that these people were not given fair market value for their land and homes. Some people's land was taken for county back taxes they owed. Others claim that they were never given a cent for their land. These testimonies question the constitutionality of how the TVA took the people's land.

Most private citizens were usually only given about six dollars an acre for their land. Mining property and developed industrial property brought the average price up to $37.76 an acre, still the second lowest price in TVA history. (The lowest price paid by TVA was for a reservoir which did not affect any towns or communities, nor did it contain rich copper mines or a prosperous industrial sector, as the Fontana Project did.) TVA tried to justify these low averages by stating that they ". . . reflect the mountainous character and remoteness of the reservoir settings."[9]

But to the people who had chosen to live there, the land was invaluable. A price could not be placed on land which had been in one's family for generations. The mountain people recognized the land then, for what the "preservationists" (so called environmentalists) are proclaiming it today: as "crown jewels."

It is no wonder these people, who had been taken advantage of, are bitter and mistrustful of the United States Government. Reverend Buford Woodard's story tells of how he was drafted into the armed service a year after his family's land was taken: "* * * I received greetings from the President of the United States, saying that 'You have been selected to honor your country.' I had a hard time dealing with that, because I had just gone through the trauma and the experience of seeing the Nation that called upon me to bear arms and defend its freedom take my own mother's home and take my inheritance * * *"[10]

Not only were these mountain people cheated out of their land; they were misled by TVA officials. The Fontana Project reports that, of the land "* * * secured for the project, 88.4 percent [was acquired] by voluntary sell * * * [the rest] by condemnation."[11] These figures probably would have been reversed if the people affected had realized how they were being taken advantage of.

The TVA officials told the people almost anything which would appeal and get them to agree to give up their land.

This was a time when feelings of patriotism were high and everyone was trying to help in the war effort. Many of the husbands and sons were overseas fighting the war. TVA officials played on the feelings of these patriotic people, telling them that, if they did not move off the land, thousands more American boys would lose their lives in the war; or that the war would be over much more quickly if they would sell their land and make way for the project.

Everyone was assured, by TVA officials personally, and by official TVA letters, that as soon as the war was over and more resources were available, a road would be built back into the area. Some people were told that they could return to their land if it was not flooded. Millie Vickery once lived in Possum Hollow on the North Shore. "When the TVA came to take the land they told me and my husband that a road would be built which would allow us to come back and move our house, if we wanted to," she stated at the March, 1984 Senate Hearing.[12] But when the people moved out, practically all the homes and buildings which were left were torched. In preparing land to be flooded for a dam reservoir, the proper method is to clear way everything which would be underwater. However, the land on the North Shore was above the high water mark; it was not necessary to burn existing buildings, especially since the people were promised they could return. Natives and descendants of the North Shore believe this was done to ensure they would never try to come back home to live.

Another major aspect of the TVA deception concerns the ancestral cemeteries in the area. Several cemeteries and graves in the planned reservoir area were moved either above the high water mark on the North Shore or to other areas in WNC, most in Swain County. Over 1,000 graves were left in the 28-plus cemeteries on the North Shore which was to be isolated. The people there were strongly encouraged by the TVA, which was trying to minimize grave relocation costs, not to move these cemeteries, as the new road would provide access back into the area.

As a July, 1943 official TVA letter to Mr. L.B. Cook of Marion, NC, reads:

"The construction of Fontana Dam necessitates the flooding of the road leading to the Proctor Cemetery located in Swain County, NC, and to reach this cemetery in the future will be necessary to walk a considerable distance until a road is constructed in the vicinity of the cemetery, which is proposed to be completed after the war has ended."[13]

In 1943 a four-party agreement was signed among Swain County, the State of North Carolina, the TVA, and the Department of the Interior, in which TVA transferred the land on the north shore of Fontana Lake to the Department of the Interior to be added to the GSMNP. In turn, the Park Service agreed to build a road "* * * when constructed shall as a minimum standard the finished throughout its length with a dustless surface not less than twenty (20) feet in width * * *" from Bryson City to Fontana Dam to link up with Deal's Gap, Tennessee.[14] Swain County assumed the bond debt of State Highway 288, and the interest of this debt, a total sum of $694,000. The State of North Carolina would contribute $100,000 to assist in TVA's acquisition of the North Shore. TVA would contribute $400,000 to the State of North Carolina to be held in trust for Swain County to help pay off the bond debt for Highway 288. North Carolina would construct a road from Bryson City to the Park Boundary line to connect with the new Park highway.[15]

The Bryson City Times, a local paper, reports of the contract, termed the 1943 Agreement, on August 5, 1943:

"* * * it would appear that Swain County came out on the losing end of the deal. But happily, this isn't the case. * * * The National Park Service says that as soon as money is made available after the war it will build a modern highway along the shores of Fontana Lake connecting Bryson City with the TVA access highway at Fontana Dam. * * * Anyone with the smallest amount of imagination can visualize what a road of this kind will mean to Bryson City * * * there is nothing that can keep Bryson City from becoming the tourist center of Eastern America."[16]

The 1943 Agreement reflects the schemes of high United States Government officials to take the North Shore and make it a part of the GSMNP. According to The Fontana Project: "In the Fontana Reservoir vicinity * * * there was a strip of mountainous land [the North Shore] * * * which had not been acquired by the Department of the Interior because of lack of funds."[17] The reason that Swain County agreed to accept the bond debt "* * * was influenced by the fact that the National Park Service desired to acquire this land lying between existing park boundary and the river and to build a park highway paralleling the river from Fontana Dam to near Bryson City as soon as the necessary funds were available."[18]

The land on the North Shore was taken under false pretense by TVA officials who told the people the land was needed for the dam project when actually it was being taken for inclusion in the Park. Due to the speed of removal of the people and the lack of communication in the early 1940s, the vast majority of people did not know that their vacated land was going to be transferred to the Park Service. Many actually thought they were going to be allowed to return and live on the land.

To add insult to injury, the Department of the Interior has failed to live up to its end of the agreement; the promised Park Highway which was supposed to compensate so much, has not been constructed to this date. The Department of the Interior has tried to get out of building the road because the terminology in the 1943 Agreement reads, "If and when funds are made available by the Congress * * *" the road will be built.[19]

However, the Department's own actions have clearly proven that they have a legal responsibility to construct the road. The State of North Carolina fulfilled its part of the contract; the road from Bryson City to the Park boundary was completed in 1959. The National Park Service then started construction on this "New Fontana Highway," completed almost nine miles of road into the Park, at which point construction was stopped due to outcry from "environmental" or preservationist groups.[20] Swain County also fulfilled its end of the bargain; the flooded Highway 288 was finally paid off in 1974. Not only did Swain County pay a huge amount of money for this flooded road, it also sacrificed financially when the excessive amount of land was taken from its tax rolls.

In return for these sacrifices, Swain County has received nothing but so-far broken promises.

The people who were living on what is now the North Shore of Fontana Lake would never have peacefully agreed to leave their homes and cemeteries had they envisioned a future of broken promises and no access back. Over the years few trips were made back across the lake to the North Shore; these trips were made by individuals in private boats. After several trips over a period of years, it became obvious that the National Park Service was neglecting the upkeep of the cemeteries. After people bagan protesting, this care was started. Finally, in 1977, the North Shore Cemetery Assocaiation was organized by former residents. They organized homecomings and scheduled annual visits to the cemeteries by pooling resources and renting boats. A couple of years later, the Park Service started helping with access and later, providing yearly access. Today this access consists of a boat ride across Fontana Lake, then a bumpy ride on the back of a truck, on hay bales, in jeeps, or in Suburbans. The transportation is insufficient and slow. This bittersweet journey is an arduous ordeal for the elderly and many are physically unable to continue to make the trip. But the religious tradition of cemetery visitation as well as the bitterness toward the Federal Government is passed on to children and grand-children who still insist that the Park Service build the promised road.

Road construction was stopped by cries of "environmental damage" by "environmental groups" which had gained public recogniztion and political power in the 60s. Costly studies were then conducted by the Park Service, heavily influenced by preservationist sentiments, which found tht further road construction "* * * would result in extreme cuts and fills and unstable conditions would cause environmental damage.* * [21] Another argument used by the preservationists is that further damage would be done by Anakeesta rock which would be uncovered by road construction. This is a type of rock in which the surface emits acid when exposed to air and water. Senator Al Gore, debating on the Senate Floor, stated on Anakeesta rock: " * * when uncovered by road builders this acidic material washes into nearby streams and kills them."[22] Other environmentalists; using this argument, have said that all the fish in Fontana Lake would be killed when the acid "leaches" down into the lake. Users of such arguments either have not done their research or are deliberately misleading the public.

Anakeesta rock is commonly found by WNC road builders and methods have been developed to deal with it. A Federal geological survey states that the banks of Fontana Lake are lined with this acidic rock. Also, a recent Federal study has found that acid rain is more acidic than Anakeesta rock. If the Anakeesta rock argument was true, the fish in Fontana would have all died long ago; instead, the fish population is thriving.

Tales of environmental damage road construction would cause are greatly exaggerated and often false. Joseph E. Beck, a professor of Environmental Health Sciences at Western Carolina University, has written: "Arguments that this * * * road could not be constructed without serious environmental damage makes a mockery of our technological abilities."[23]

In the late 1960s, the road construction issue became complicated by talk of Federal Wilderness by environmental groups. These preservationists worked to pass the Wilderness Act of 1964, which placed repressive restrictions on National Forests and Parks. The highest level of preservation given land by law is Wilderness designation.

Ron Arnold is the Executive Director of the Center for the Defense of Free Enterprise, in Bellevue, Washington; he is also a writer and a Wilderness expert. In his book, Ecology Wars: Environmentalism as if People Mattered, Arnold discusses Wilderness:

"Wilderness, at first blush, has a wholesome ring in modern America * * * A 1978 survey by Opinion Research, Inc., found that more than 75 percent of all Americans still didn't realize the difference between just any woodsy recreation spot and officially designated wilderness. The difference is monumental. The Wilderness Act of 1964, which created the National Wilderness Preservation System, mandated that wilderness is an area of at least 5,000 federally-owned acres and defined it thus:

'A Wilderness, in contrast to those areas where man and his works dominate the landscape, is hereby recognized as an area where the earth and its community of life are untrammeled by man, where man himself is a visitor who does not remain.' In practical terms, that means no roads, no buildings, no watershed management, severely restricted fire, insect, disease, and wildlife management, and in most places, not even toilets. It's the law. But the average American never even heard of it."[24]

When land is designated as a wilderness area, it is made inaccessible to a large majority of American Citizens. Because of the "no roads" language in the Wildness Act, the only people who can enjoy the land are those who have access to it, and who have the time, money, and physical capability to explore a "wilderness." The Wilderness Act is clearly discriminatory in this way.

According to expert Grant Gerber, founder of the Wilderness Impact Research Foundation in Elko, Nevada, when land is designated Wilderness, restrictions are placed on any kind of activity within. This activity can include such things as hunting, livestock grazing, and access to water. In many cases landowners adjacent to the Wilderness Area are affected with the establishment of "buffer zones.", or restricted zones outside the Wilderness boundary.[25]

The Wilderness Act of 1964 contained a directive for all federal land agencies to study all units under their jurisdiction and recommend which units were suitable for Wilderness designation. Units so recommended were/are then managed as Wilderness until Congress passed legislation officially designating those units Federal Wilderness or releasing them from Wilderness management.

In 1975 the GSMNP was recommended for inclusion in the Wilderness Preservation System, therefore, any road construction would have been in direct conflict with the Wilderness management plan of the Park.[26]

In 1980, after several proposals on how to resolve the North Shore road issue, the Secretary of the Interior supported a cash settlement being paid to Swain County in lieu of completing the road. Under this plan, the Park Service, would provide cemetery access to the North Shore Cemetery Association.[27] This proposal was exactly what the environmental groups wanted; once the road issue was settled, the Department of the Interior would be relieved of their legal obligation which would expedite the passage of a Great Smoky Mountain Bill. But the North Shore Association and Swain County people, who had been fighting for the road for years, were not satisfied with this proposal.

The North Shore of Fontana Lake contains a few old cabins, which were missed by the TVA, several building foundations, other historical structures, many old relics, old roads and trails, not to mention some 28-plus cemeteries. The area does not even meet the criteria for Wilderness designation; according to the Wilderness Act, a Wilderness is an area "untrammeled by man." The people from the area are very concerned that the Park Service will slowly remove all "signs of man" from the area, wiping out the remains of their heritage. Reportedly, the Park Service has been seen destroying non-native plants such as rose bushes; and rainbow trout, which is also not native to the Smokies. In effect, the Park Service may be trying to "create" an area suitable for Federal Wilderness designation where none exists.

Concerned people have asked that at minimum the North Shore be exempt from Wilderness designation. However, top preservationist groups such as the Sierra Club have said, in effect, that all the Park be designated Wilderness, or the county will not receive the monetary settlement for the road. In effect, this amounts to blackmail, considering the power such groups have in Congress. Swain County is legally and morally owed a road and was promised other tourism-related developments by the Park Service prior to the signing of the 1943 agreement. Environmental groups, which were not party to this agreement, should have no place in negotiating proposals.

Various Wilderness bills have been sponsored since 1975, usually by Tennessee Senators, but none have passed. Senator Jesse Helms has led the fight against these bills. Helms promised that as long as he was in the United States Senate, he would do his best to see that the Government kept its word to Swain County people.

The most recent battle over Wilderness for the Smokies started in 1987 with the introduction of more Wilderness Bills. At this point a group of concerned property owners adjacent to the GSMNP organized to form "Non-Partisan Citizens Against Wilderness in Western North Carolina". Their primary goal was to block a Wilderness Bill which would affect the entire Park, including the North Shore.

On a current membership form, the Citizens group clearly lists their guiding philosophies:

We are for multiple use of Public Land. We are for private ownership of land. We are for the fulfillment of the 1943 Agreement. We actively oppose any Wilderness legislation. We seek to elect officials who represent us, regardless of party affiliation. We work to educate the public concerning these issues."[28]

In 1987 and 1988, this group sent a total of over 11,000 petitions and letters to Washington, DC. In July of 1988, when a Great Smoky Mountains Wilderness Bill was being debated on the Senate floor, the group distributed hundreds of "Action Alerts" which asked people to telephone targeted Senators and listed their phone numbers. The group has also secured several resolutions against Wilderness designations and for the fulfillment of the 1943 agreement. Resolutions were secured from: the Swain County Board of Commissioners, the Graham County Commissioners, the Bryson City Board of Aldermen, The Swain County Chamber of Commerce. The Swain County Board of Education, the Swain County Coonhunters Club, The Republican Party of Swain County, the Democrat Men's Club (of Swain County), and several Democratic Precincts in Swain County. Swain, a county in which the Democrat to Republican ratio is 3 to 1, strongly supports the efforts of Senator Jesse Helms, a conservative Republican leader.

Additionally, the local Veterans of Foreign Wars Post voted to support the National VFW Resolution against any further Wilderness designation nationally. The Eastern and Western Cherokee Indian Nations also passed resolutions against Wilderness. Also, approximately 95 percent of the businesses in Bryson City signed a petition calling for the completion of the road as called for in the 1943 Agreement. All these efforts would have been in vain had it not been for Senator Jesse Helms, who courageously stood up for the people of WNC and blocked passage of the Wilderness Bill in the summer of 1988. In the following January, (1989), a Jesse Helms Appreciation Day was named, and Citizens Against Wilderness sponsored a dinner at which the Senator was the honored guest speaker.

The North Shore Road was intended to be much more than a cemetery access road. It was intended to secure Swain County's future. The proposed cash settlement for the road, (which totaled 15 million in 1988), is nothing compared to what Swain County could have been making through tourism, had the road been completed, along with promised National Park Service developments constructed on the North Carolina side of the Park.

According to The Fontana Project, the North Shore road was planned to diffuse heavy tourist traffic in the Park to Swain County and provide a better Eastern entrance to the Park. When the 1943 agreement was in the negotiating stages, much talk was about developing tourism opportunities in Swain County and along Fontana lake. This tourism industry was supposed to compensate Swain for all the land which had been removed from its tax rolls.

It is easy to understand why Tennessee members of Congress always sponsor Great Smoky Mountain Wilderness Bills. They want to make it impossible for the North Shore Road to be built; this would divert tourists from Tennessee. Tennessee does not want to share their rich tourist industry with North Carolina. In 1983 $150 million was reaped from tourists in Gatlinburg, Tennessee while Swain County generally averages less than one-fifth that amount.[29]

As a direct result of the Government failing to fulfill its agreements, and because of excessive Federal ownership of land, Swain is one of the poorest counties in North Carolina, and consistently has the highest unemployment rate in (non-tourist) winter months. Excessive concern by preservationist groups for a near-pristine environment on private land has caused developers and industry to go elsewhere with their jobs and opportunities.

Swain County is currently 86 percent Federal land, containing parts of land from the GSMNP, TVA, the Cherokee Indian Reservation, Nantahala National Forest, and the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Despite this fact, Swain is still targeted for even more federal "protection" by preservationist groups, which, according to several members of Congress, "undoubtedly are the most powerful lobby in Washington, DC."[30]

Because of these factors, Citizens Against Wilderness plan to become a permanent "watchdog" for private property in Western North Carolina. The group has gained support nationwide, and has become politically effective. At the 1988 National Wilderness Conference in Reno, Nevada, Linda G. Hogue, co-founder and chairman of the Citizens group, was a guest speaker, and was honored with the "Most Effective Grassroots Organization Leader of the Year Award."

Hogue has vowed to continue pushing for the Federal Government to fulfill its agreement to the people of Swain County. "They should either build the road or give the land back," she has stated.[31]

The story of the people displaced by the Fontana Project is among the saddest in American history. What is even more tragic is that perhaps one day this story might be forgotten; these people's "Trail of Tears" is not recorded in history books. These patriotic people made huge sacrifices during a time when their country was at war and should not be overlooked. Many North Shore descendants and Swain County people would like to see this history included among the educational features at Fontana Dam. They also feel that the Park Service should build a museum dedicated to the lost communities and their way of life. The Park Service should construct this museum in Swain County along the completed North Shore Road. These WNC people deserve special recognition as well as the fulfillment of a so-far broken promise; not to have the old relics and cultural heritage permanently destroyed by the Park Service. The people do not deserve the atrocious treatment aimed at them by environmental groups, some who go as far as to call the North Shore people selfish for even wanting a primitive jeep road back to their homelands and cemeteries.

In addition, comprehensive plans to construct once-planned tourism related developments on the North Carolina side of the Park should be completed. Currently, the Tennessee side of the Park has more than twice the development as does North Carolina, even though most of the Park is in North Carolina.

Perhaps if these things were done, some of the harsh feelings Swain County and North Shore people have for the Federal Government might be changed, and a continuing controversy put to rest.

APPENDIX A

THE 1943 AGREEMENT

(Memorandum of agreement of October 8, 1943 between the Department of the Interior and the Tennessee Valley Authority relating to the acquisition and transfer of certain lands in Fontana Dam area for use as part of Great Smoky Mountains National Park)

This agreement, made and entered into as of the 30th day of July 1943, by and between Tennessee Valley Authority (hereinafter called the "Authority"), a corporation created by an Act of Congress known as the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933; the State of North Carolina (hereinafter called the "State"), acting by and through its Governor, its Council of State, and its State Highway and Public Works Commission; Swain County (hereinafter called the "County"), a political subdivision of the State of North Carolina, acting by and through the Board of Commissioners for the County of Swain; and United States Department of the Interior (hereinafter called the "Department"), acting herein for the use and benefit of the National Park Service of said Department.

Witnesseth:

Whereas, the Authority pursuant to the powers vested in it by the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, is engaged in the construction of a hydroelectric development, known as the Fontana Project, consisting of a dam and reservoir on the Little Tennessee River in North Carolina, said dam being located approximately ten (10) miles upstream from the Tennessee-North Carolina State line; and

Whereas, the Forney Creek Road District has heretofore issued bonds for and constructed on road or highway extending from Deals Gap on the west to Bryson City on the east, said road following a course north of the Little Tennessee and Tuckasegee Rivers and south of the present southern boundary of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park (hereinafter referred to as the "Park"; and

Whereas, the County has heretofore assumed full liability for all principal of and interest on the bonds issued for the construction of said road as aforesaid, and in 1940 issued its own refunding bonds (and interest funding bonds) in the place of all such bonds then outstanding and unpaid; and

Whereas, the State has heretofore assumed jurisdiction and control of said Deals Gap-Bryson City road, which is now known North Carolina State Highway No. 288, and of all other public road connecting therewith; and

Whereas, the reservoir to be constructed and operated by the Authority as a part of said Fontana Project will submerge, flood, or otherwise adversely affect a substantial portion of said Highway 288 east of the site of the Fontana Dam, together with other public roads connecting with said Highway 288; and

Whereas, the War Production Board has indicated that it would not approve or permit the reconstruction or relocation of said Highway 288 so long as the present war emergency and the shortage of labor, materials, and equipment resulting therefrom continue to exist; and

Whereas, said Highway 288 as now constructed, does not furnish or afford a high standard of service, and it is recognized by the parties hereto that the reconstruction or relocation of said road on an equivalent basis after the war emergency or at any other future time would not constitute a wise or efficient expenditure of public funds; and

Whereas, there are now held in private ownership certain lands (hereinafter described in section 1 of this agreement) aggregating approximately forty-four thousand four hundred (44,400) acres in area located within the limits of the County south of the present southern boundary of the Park and north of the Little Tennessee and Tuckasegee rivers, all of which acreage (along with certain other acreage now in private ownership) was originally proposed for inclusion with the boundaries of the Park; and

Whereas, the acquisition of said land described in section 1 hereof by the United States of America and in the inclusion thereof within the boundaries of the Park would serve to extend said boundaries substantially as originally contemplated; and would also establish a basis for the construction by the Department of a park standard road over and across said land; and

Whereas, the Department regards a park standard road connection between Deals Gap and Bryson City as an important link in a planned "around the Park" road, has included the same as a part of a Master Plan for the development of the park (extended as aforesaid), and subject to inclusion of the aforesaid additional acreage within the Park area, is agreeable to initiating construction of the Park portion of such a road as soon after the present war as funds are made available therefor by Congress; and

Whereas, the parties hereto desire to provide for and agree upon the extension of the Park boundaries as aforesaid, the closing and ultimate replacement of Highway 288, and the immediate and final settlement and disposition of all claims which the State and the County may at any time have against the Authority or the United States of America by reason of the flooding, taking, or closing of said Highway 288 and the other roads hereinafter described or referred to, all in the manner and upon the terms and conditions hereinafter specified, and all to the end and purpose of avoiding unwise and inefficient expenditures of public funds and of capturing certain benefits for the region affected and the public generally;

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual covenants and promises hereinafter contained, it is hereby mutually agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. Promptly upon the execution of this agreement, the Authority shall, to the extent it has not already done so, in the name of the United States of America, commence and thereafter prosecute in a systematic, orderly, and diligent manner the acquisition by purchase, the exercise of eminent domain, or otherwise, of the land identified on the map attached to and hereby made a part of this agreement as Exhibit A[1] as "Land Proposed for Transfer to U.S. Department of the Interior," the land to be so acquired being more particularly described as follows:

All that land, except that part hereinafter excluded, lying in Swain County, North Carolina, on the north side of the Little Tennessee and Tuckasegee rivers, and south of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, extending from Twenty Mile Ridge on the West to the divide between Lands Creek and Peachtree Creek on the East, the east boundary of the area being approximately 2 miles west of Bryson City, North Carolina, the said area being bounded as follows:

1. On the west and north by the present boundary line of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park;

On the east by the divide between Lands Creek and Peachtree Creek (the nearest property line being the true boundary) but including the two tracts along the Tuckasegee River formerly owned by A. E. Lowe and A.L. and W.C. Nichols and acquired by the Authority from Nantahala Power and Light Company under tract designations FR-262 and FR-264;

3. On the south by proposed Fontana Lake (1710 contour) from the east boundary to a point on the edge of the lake approximately 3600 feet as measured along the shore (1710 contour) in a northerly direction from the axis of Fontana Dam; thence first with the north boundaries thence the west boundary of two tracts of land acquired by the Authority from Nantahala Power and Light Company and Carolina Aluminum Company, respectively, under tract designations FR-438 and FR-16 to a point 150 feet north of the center line of the principal access road to Fontana Dam and approximately 100 feet west of Lewellyn Branch; thence along a line parallel to and 150 feet north of said center line in a general westerly direction to an intersection with the boundary line of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park on the south end of Twenty Mile Ridge and east of Twenty Mile Creek.

Excepting and excluding from the area above defined (1) all those lands owned by the North Carolina Exploration Company, consisting of some three or four tracts of land situated in the Eagle Creek and Myers Branch watersheds and containing approximately 1,920 acres, more or less, and (2) all land upstream from Fontana Dam having the elevation of its present ground surface below the plane of the 1710-foot (m.s.l.) contour.

The above described land contains a net total of approximately 44,400 acres, more or less.

Provided, however, that the Authority may at its election postpone the acquisition of the taking of any steps in connection with the acquisition of all or any part of or interest in the following property:

The tract of land owned by the North Carolina Mining Corporation situated on the north side of the Sugar Fork tributary of Hazel Creek approximately 2 miles north of Proctor and being the tract of land conveyed by Walter S. Adams and Wife, Melinda, to the North Carolina Mining Corporation by deed dated March 29, 1901, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Swain County, North Carolina, in Deed Book 29, page 238, the said tract containing 196 acres, more or less.

until a date six months after the cessation of the hostilities in which the United States is now engaged, it being recognized by the parties hereto that the mining of said tract of land and the removal of such minerals as may be contained therein may be of importance to the prosecution of the war.

It is recognized and agreed that any or all of the lands acquired by the Authority under this section may be subject to outstanding rights of way, easements, and/or mineral rights; that any of said lands acquired from the Aluminum Company of America or any of its subsidiaries may be subject to rights of way one hundred fifty (150) feet in width for any transmission line or lines of any of said companies which may be constructed to interconnect any of the plants of said companies with the power system of the Authority, the location of such rights of way to be agreed upon from time to time by said companies or any of them and the Authority; and that any of said lands acquired from Carolina Aluminum Company may be subject to any or all of the following perpetual rights, easements, and privileges in favor of Carolina Aluminum Company, its successors and assigns, as the owner or owners of the dam site of the Cheoah Development and as appurtenant thereto:

a. The right at all times without limitation or restriction to flood by the waters of the reservoir impounded by the Cheoah Dam or any other dam erected on or near the site thereof, the said properties to an elevation of 1276.63 feet above mean sea level and to flood said properties to such additional elevations as may result from wave action, floods, and other high water conditions.

b. The right is the discretion of Carolina Aluminum Company, its successors or assigns, to remove from the shore of Cheoah Reservoir and the land under said reservoir and to destroy or otherwise dispose of silt, drift, timber, vegetation, and other matter, and to use said shore and land for such purposes and any other purpose reasonably connected with the maintenance and operation of the Cheoah Development together with the right of ingress, egress, and regress for such purposes * * * tools, vehicles, and equipment egress said properties.

It is further understood and agreed that in the purchase or other acquisition of the aforesaid land as herein provided, the Authority shall be privileged to follow and abide by its standard policies and procedures, as the same may be varied or amended from time to time pertaining to the acquisition of lands or interests therein. The Authority shall not be responsible and shall incur no liability under this section for any delay or delays in the acquisition of title to any of said land caused or attributable to title searches or other studies, condemnation proceedings or other litigation, or caused by or attributable to any act or circumstance which is incident to or reasonably related to such acquisition or which is beyond the Authority's control, it being the intention of the parties that Authority shall incur no liability for any delays in the acquisition of any land under this section resulting from any cause whatsoever other than the willful failure or refusal of the Authority to take any step necessary to effect such acquisition.

2. Immediately following its acquisition in accordance with Section 1 hereof of all of the land described in said section, the Authority shall assign and transfer to the Department, for the use and benefit of the National Park Service and for inclusion as a part of the Park, the right of possession and all other right, title, and interest which the Authority may have in and to said land, and shall also grant to the Department, its agents, servants and invitees the right of access to any use of all lands of the United States in the Authority's custody lying upstream from Fontana Dam between the land to be transferred to the Department hereunder and low watermark on Fontana Lake, together with the right to access to and the use of the waters of said lake, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining thereon boating and recreational facilities, piers, docks, and related xxxx and of performing all other acts which may be reasonable necessary to the administration and use, as a part of the Park, of the lands to be transferred to the Department under this section 2; provided, however, that said assignment, transfer, and grant shall be effected by an agreement of transfer between the Authority and the Department substantially in the form attached to and made a part hereof as Exhibit B[2] and shall be subject to all of the terms, conditions, provisions, exceptions, exclusions, and reservations contained in said Exhibit B, and shall also be subject to all those rights, easements and interests (whether or not now listed or specified in said Exhibit B) which have been or may be reserved or left outstanding at the time of Authority's acquisition of the lands described in Section 1, as permitted or contemplated by said Section 1; provided further that, prior to the execution of said transfer agreement, a metes and bounds description of the lands to be transferred to the Department thereunder shall be incorporated therein in substitution for the description of said lands not contained in Exhibit B; and provide further that if the Authority shall at any time have acquired all of the land described in Section 1, with the exception of all or any part of or interest in the North Carolina Mining Corporation tract separately described in said Section 1, the Authority and the Department shall then enter into an agreement of transfer, as aforesaid, with respect to so much of the land described in Section 1 as the Authority shall then have acquired, and in such case said North Carolina Mining Corporation Tract, or the part thereof or interest therein not initially transferred by the Authority to the Department, shall be the subject of a separate and subsequent agreement of transfer between the Authority and the Department, such subsequent agreement of transfer to be consistent with the provisions of this agreement and substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit B, and to be executed immediately following the Authority's acquisition of the part of or interest in said tract not covered by the initial agreement of transfer.

The parties recognize and agree that, as an incident to the construction, maintenance, and operation of the Fontana Project, the Authority will acquire certain lands and rights and interests in land in addition to those specified to be acquired under Section 1 hereof and to be transferred under this Section 2. The acquisition of such additional lands and rights and interests in land shall not give rise to any obligation on the part of the Authority to transfer the same, or any part thereof or interest therein, to the Department, and the Authority's sole obligation under Sections 1 and 2 of this agreement shall be to effect the acquisition of the lands specified in Section 1 and to transfer the possession and control of said lands to the Department along with the additional rights of access and use specified in the preceding paragraphs, all as herein specifically provided.

3. The Department agrees to enter into an agreement or agreements of transfer with the Authority as provided by Section 2 hereof, and pursuant to and subject to the provisions of such agreement or agreements, to accept an assignment and transfer of the lands described in Section 1 hereof, together with the additional rights of access and use specified in Section 2. The Department further agrees that, forthwith upon the execution and delivery of such an agreement of transfer, it will extend the present boundaries of the park to embrace and include the land transferred thereby.

4. The Department represents and states that it has evolved a Master Plan for the development of the Park as extended by the addition of the lands described in Section 1 hereof, and that said Master Plan includes an "around the park" road, of which the Park section of a project road between Deals Gap and Bryson City constitutes an important link. Subject to the transfer by the Authority to the Department of the land described in Section 1 as herein provided, the Department agrees that, as soon as funds are made available for that purpose by Congress after the cessation of the hostilities in which the United States is now engaged, the Department will construct or cause to be constructed the following described sections of road, all of said sections being hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Park Road":

a. A section of road beginning at a point on the Fontana Dam access Road near the crossing of Fax Branch, and extending to a point on the western boundary of the land identified on Exhibit A as the property of North Carolina Exploration Company.

b. A section of road beginning at the eastern boundary of said North Carolina Exploration Company land and extending to the eastern boundary of the Park as extended hereunder.

c. A section of road across said North Carolina Exploration Company land connecting the ends of the sections of road described in paragraphs a. and b. above.

d. A section of road beginning at a point in the road described in paragraph a. above. and extending in a generally southerly direction to the west abutment of Fontana Dam.

Provided, however,that in lieu of the sections of road described in paragraphs a., b., and c above, the Department may at its election construct or cause to be constructed, as a part of the Park Road, a continuous section or road beginning at a point on the Fontana Dam Access Road near the crossing of Fax Branch and extending around the aforesaid property of the North Carolina Exploration Company (through existing Park lands) to the eastern boundary of the Park as extended hereunder. In the event of such election on the park of the Department, the Department shall nevertheless construct or cause to be constructed, as a part of the Park Road, the section of road described in paragraph d. above, which section shall in such case commence on said alternative section of Park Road at a point west of the lands identified on Exhibit A as the property of North Carolina Exploration Company. Upon commencement of construction of the Park Road, the Authority shall transfer and assign to the Department its right of possession, and all its other right, title, and interest in and to the land required for the right of way of that portion of the road described in paragraph d. above which lies within the boundaries of Fontana Dam Reservation. The Department shall secure and provide for itself all such easements and rights of way as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of any portion of the Park Road which may be located upon or across any of said North Carolina Exploration Company property.

If and when funds are made available by the Congress for said Park Road as aforesaid, the location and type of said road, the method and manner of construction the same, and all standards and specifications therefor shall be determined by the Department in its sole discretion; provided, however, the said Park Road when constructed shall as a minimum standard be finished throughout its length with a dustless surface not less than twenty (20) feet in width; and provided, further that said Park Road shall connect at the eastern boundary of the Park, as extended hereunder, at a point to be selected by the Department, with the road which is to be constructed by the State in accordance with and subject to the provisions of Section 6 hereof.

The obligation of the Department, to construct or provide for the construction of a Park Road as defined in this Section 4 shall be XXX and contingent in all respects under the appropriation by Congress of all funds necessary for such construction, and failure on the part of Congress for any reason to make such appropriations shall not constitute a breach or violation of this agreement by the Department or any other party hereto.

5. Following completion of the Park Road to be constructed by the Department subject to the provisions of Section 4, the Department may in its discretion bar said road to commercial use, and restrict the same solely to pleasure and tourist traffic.

6. At such time as the Department shall commence the construction of the Park Road pursuant to Section 4 hereof, the State shall forthwith proceed to acquire good and sufficient easements and rights of way for and shall construct, a road commencing at a point on U.S. Highway 19 in Bryson City, North Carolina, and extending to a point on the eastern boundary of the Park (as extending hereunder) to be selected and designated by the Department, the point so designated by the Department to be such as to provide for the connection of the State road provided for in this section with the Park Road described in Section 4. The easements and rights of way to be acquired by the State for said Bryson City-Park Boundary Road shall be not less than two hundred (200) feet in width outside the corporate limits of Bryson City. In all other respects, except for the termini thereof as above provided, the location and type of said road, the method and manner of constructing the same, and all standards and specifications therefore shall be determined by the State in its sole discretion; provided, however, that said road when constructed by the State shall as a minimum standard be finished throughout its length with a dustless surface not less than twenty (20) feet in width.

7. Following completion of the construction of the Fontana Project by the Authority, the Authority, on its own behalf and as agent of the United States of America, shall quitclaim to the State all of the right, title, and interest which it or the United States of America may have in and to the so-called Fontana Access Road heretofore constructed by the Authority from U.S. Highway 129 near Deals Gap to the left (east) abutment of the Fontana Dam, including all bridges, culvert, and other facilities constituting a part of the transfer of said access road to the State as aforesaid, the Authority shall also:

a. Transfer and quitclaim or cause to be transferred and quitclaimed to the State all easements and rights of way acquired by the Authority as agent of the United States appurtenant to those portions or sections of said access road which may be located outside the limits of land of the United States in the custody of the Authority, together with such land as the Authority, as agent of the United States, may hold or acquire in fee west of a point on the north right of way line of said access road approximately one hundred (100) feet west of Lewellyn Branch, and between said north right of way line and the Cheoah Reservoir of Carolina Aluminum Company. For the purposes hereof, the north right of way line of said access road west of said point approximately one hundred (100) feet west of Lewellyn Branch shall be deemed to a line parallel to and one hundred fifty (150) feet north of the center line of said access road.

b. Grant and quitclaim or cause to be granted and quitclaimed to the State suitable easements and rights of way for the maintenance of all of the portions of said access road which are located on land of the United States in the custody of the Authority, where such land is not included in the land to be transferred and quitclaimed to the States under paragraph a. immediately preceding.

c. Transfer and assign or cause to be transferred and assigned to the State an agreement between the Authority and Carolina Aluminum Company dated May 5, 1943, relating to an easement for the construction and maintenance of the bridge located on said Fontana Access Road across the Little Tennessee River, together with all rights, privileges, and interests of the Authority and the United States in, to, and under said agreement.

The State agrees that it will, by formal agreement with the Authority and Carolina Aluminum Company, accept an assignment of the aforesaid agreement of May 5, 1943, and assume all of the duties and obligations of the Authority and the United States of America thereunder, so as to effect the substitution of the State for the Authority and the United States of America for all of the purposes of said agreement as contemplated by Section 3 thereof. The State further agrees that, forthwith upon the transfer of said access road as aforesaid, it will open and thereafter maintain said access road for public travel, take over at the expense of the State the maintenance, repair, and upkeep thereof, and thereafter hold the Authority and the United States of America harmless on account of any loss, damage, or injury sustained by any person or persons using the same; provided, however, that in transferring said access road to the State as aforesaid, the Authority may reserve the right, but shall have no obligation to maintain, flatten, plant grass or shrubbery upon, or otherwise modify the slopes of cuts and embankments adjacent to any portion or portions of said access road between the south end of the Little Tennessee River Bridge and the left (east) abutment of Fontana Dam.

8. Forthwith upon the execution of this agreement, the State, as a means of cooperating with and assisting the Authority in the purchase of the land described in Section 1 hereof, and in the settlement of the problems incident or related thereto, shall pay to the Authority the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000), such payment to be made for the purposes of and pursuant to the authority contained in S.B. 198 enacted at the 1943 Session of the North Carolina Legislature and approved March 5, 1943.

9. Promptly upon the execution of this agreement, the Authority shall pay to the State Treasurer of North Carolina, Treasurer ex officio of the North Carolina Local Government Commission, in trust for the County, the sum of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($400,000), said State Treasurer of North Carolina being hereby designated by the County to receive and receipt for said sum on the County's behalf.

Prior to or simultaneously with the payment of said sum to said State Treasurer of North Carolina, the County shall enter into a trust agreement governing the management and disbursement of said trust fund. Said trust agreement shall be subject to the approval of the North Carolina Local Government Commission, and shall provide that said sum shall be applied by the trustee exclusively to the payment of the principal of road bonds of the County which are now outstanding and unpaid. The County agrees that said trust agreements, once entered into with the approval of the North Carolina Local Government Commission, shall not be amended, revoked, or supplemented except with the written consent and approval of said Local Government Commission.

Delivery to said State Treasurer, as Treasurer ex officio of the North Carolina Local Government Commission, of the Authority's check in the amount of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($400,000), payable to his order as trustee for the County, shall operate as a compete fulfillment and discharge of all obligations of the Authority under this Section 9.

10. The State and County hereby agree that they will, forthwith upon receipt of a request from the Authority so to do, by instrument or instruments in form suitable for recording, transfer, assign, convey, and quit claim unto the Authority and the United States of America all right, title, and interest which they and the public may have in and to that portion or section of existing North Carolina State Highway 288 between Fax Branch and Watkins Branch, in and to all other roads or portions for sections of road (irrespective of elevation) located upon or across any of the land described in Section 1 hereof and/or any of the land identified on Exhibit A hereto as the property of North Carolina Exploration Company, and in and to all other roads or portions or sections of road in the County lying north of the Little Tennessee and Tuckasegee rivers each of Fontana Dam below elevation 1716 (m.s.1). including all bridges, culverts, and other facilities constituting a part of any of said roads or portions or sections of road, together with all easements and rights-of-way appurtenant thereto. The State and the County further agree that they will, forthwith upon receipt of a request from the Authority to so, take or procure the taking of any and all action which may be necessary and appropriate to vacate and abandon all of the roads and portions or sections of road to be conveyed and quitclaimed as provided in this paragraph, and to close the same to the use of the public. Until such time as the Authority shall request the conveyance and the vacation, abandonment, and closing of the roads or portions or sections of road referred to in this paragraph, all such roads or portions or sections of road shall retain their present status and continue to be used and maintained as public roads or highways.

Whenever any claim, demand, suit, or action is made or filed with or against the State in respect of an actual or alleged obligation or liability on the part of the State of the kind referred to in the preceding paragraph of this section, the State shall promptly, and in any event within ten (10) days after receipt of formal written notice thereof by the State or summons issued by any court and served on the State, give the Authority written notice of the making or filing of such claim, demand, action, or suit, so as to permit the Authority to defend, compromise, settle, or otherwise dispose of the same as herein contemplated. In the event of failure by the State to give the Authority written notice of any such claim, demand, action, or suit as herein provided, or if the State shall, otherwise than pursuant to judicial judgment or decree, pay, compromise, settle, or otherwise dispose of any such claim, demand, action, or suit without the written consent of the Authority, then and in either or any of such events, the Authority shall be relieved and discharged of any obligation to indemnify the State against or save it harmless from any obligation or liability in respect of such claim, demand, suit, action, or any renewal thereof.

SWAIN COUNTY STILL WAITS FOR PROMISED ROAD TO SOMEWHERE

(By Jon Healey)

Ruth Chandler, 71, of Waynesville is a mountain girl who doesn't mind climbing up a slope. She's not too crazy about travel by water, though, and that's why she wants the federal government to build a new road on the north shore of Fontana Lake in Swain County. Like several hundred others who have relatives buried in Swain County, Chandler must cross Fontana Lake by motor launch (a glorified barge) to reach the cemeteries on the north side of the lake.

It's bad enough that the boats only run on Sundays; what's worse is that they ride low in the water, giving Chandler the impression that she'll be looking for Davy Jones' locker someday. Still, she's braver than some of her friends.

The boats deliver visitors to 28 different cemeteries, 25 of which can be reached on foot after a hilly trek. Flatbed trucks take visitors to the other three via narrow mountain roads. Those trips have a pulse pounding quality to them, too. Chandler has visions of the road's shoulder giving way under the weight of a fully loaded truck, sending the truck rolling down the mountain and its passengers to their deaths.

Chandler said that she doesn't care much for the trucks creature comforts—the seats are made of hay—but what really bugs her is getting on and off. This summer, the park service condemned all three bridges on the route driven by the trucks, she said, forcing the trucks to unload their passengers before driving over each one. That meant getting on and off the truck 10 times in the course of one visit, a challenge for anyone over 70, she said. These indignities were forced on folks such as Chandler by the federal government, more particularly by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

To generate more power for its customers in Tennessee, the TVA decided during World War II to build a dam on the Little Tennessee River about 8 miles inside of North Carolina, near the border of Swain and Graham counties. The resulting 20-mile-long lake, called Fontana Lake, flooded a road that the county had just built, cutting off access to the cemeteries.

The government signed an agreement in 1943 to pay for the road that was wiped out and to replace it with a two-lane paved road on the north shore. The new road was delayed for more than a decade, then abandoned after less then one-third of the route was built. The state's maps mark the road with a blue line leading from Bryson City to one edge of the lake, signifying that it literally is a road to nowhere.

Everyone agrees that the federal government has done wrong by Swain County, breaking the promise it made when it flooded the original road. There is sharp, even bitter, division over how to make things right, however.

The side represented by Chandler, which includes the North Shore Cemetery Association and the Fontana Agreement Committee, argues that the government has a moral obligation to build a new road from Bryson to Deals Gap, Tenn. The road is much more to them than just an easier way to reach the cemeteries; it is a chance to tap into tourist dollars that flow into the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, dollars now spent in Tennessee.

Linda Hogue, a spokesman for the Fontana Agreement Committee, said, "Tennessee is getting rich off of the park. * * * Our side is virtually undeveloped." The proroad forces envision the new road being as breathtaking as the Blue Ridge Parkway, and as lucrative.

On the other side are the National Park Service, the county commissioners and environmental groups, all of whom want the county to accept a $16 million settlement from the government in lieu of a new road. In a letter written last week, the three commissioners said, "We as elected officials are convinced there will never be a road built in Swain County as agreed to in the 1943 agreement. * * * A $16 million settlement would provide payment of school bond debts, allow us to address our economic problems, (and) provide the much-needed services to our citizens. Thirty-five percent of our citizens are living at or below the federal poverty level."

Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., sides with the pro-road forces. Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., sides with the pro-settlement forces. Because they both are supported by their colleagues from their own political parties, they have been able to block each other. That happened again on Thursday, with Helms stopping Sanford. For Swain County, that means no money and no road.

The odd thing is, Helms and Sanford aren't far apart on the issue. Sanford has given up the idea of designating wilderness in Swain County, which Helms opposed. Sanford's bill also would allow the county to use the $16 million to build a road on the north shore, if the county's residents voted to do so. The language about voting comes from the bill that Helms introduced four years ago. The county couldn't build much of a road for $16 million, though—the estimated cost of a paved road on the rocky north shore is $91 million, according to one of Sanford's aides.

Helms plans to introduce a bill soon calling for the government to pay Swain County for the road it flooded and to build a "primitive" road on the north shore of the lake. The only real difference between the two senators' approaches is the underlying assumption: Helms believes that the county's residents want a road, and Sanford believes that they'd rather have more money. You'd think that the two politicians could have solved that dispute already with a poll.

The Swain County commissioners could also have tried to settle the dispute by holding a referendum to gauge the will of the people. Instead, each side is left with its assumption—Sanford's assumption based on the commissioners' position, and Helms' assumption based on the letters, form letters and petitions he has received, many from people who live outside of Swain County. Meanwhile, the people who live inside Swain County are left with a written agreement from 1943 that's not worth the paper it's printed on.

TESTIMONY OF THE EASTERN BAND OF CHEROKEE INDIANS PRESENTED TO THE CITIZENS OF SWAIN COUNTY, NC ON THE SWAIN COUNTY SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1991, DECEMBER 12, 1991

TESTIMONY OF CHIEF JONATHAN L. TAYLOR CONCERNING S-1849

Mr. Chairman, my name is Jonathan L. Taylor. I am the Principal Chief of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

I am pleased to have this opportunity to present our views concerning the proposed Swain County Settlement Act of 1991.

For background information, the Cherokee Indian Reservation consists of over 56,000 acres in Western North Carolina. The Reservation is located in five counties: Swain, Jackson, Graham, Haywood and Cherokee counties. The Great Smoky Mountains National Park forms the northern border of most of the Reservation. More than 8,000 of our enrolled Tribal members live on or near the Reservation.

Over the years, the Cherokees and the United States have negotiated and signed many treaties. Indian history states that the United States broke every one of these treaties with the Cherokee, and the Cherokee lost more and more land with each Treaty. For this reason alone, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians is sympathetic with our Swain County neighbors dilemma and the United States Government's reluctance to fulfill an agreement over forty-five years old.

The economy of the Cherokee Indian Reservation, and Southwestern North Carolina revolves around tourism. More than thirteen million people pass through Cherokee via U.S. Highway 441 on their visits to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

From this perspective one may imagine the deep concern the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, indeed all people of Southwestern North Carolina, have for the possible effects of any federal legislation impacting our neighbor communities.

We support the suggested 16 million dollar settlement of Senate Bill 1849 introduced by Senator Helms of North Carolina. This indebtness is over forty five years old and should be settled now without further delay. We see no need for additional concessions from Swain County or vacillation by the Federal Government to assure the fulfillment of its original agreement. Additionally, we strongly feel that the road should be built by the federal government as promised.

Historically, we as Indian people, are keenly aware that decisions made in Washington will have a continuing effect upon our lives, our livelihoods and the lives of our unborn children. We sincerely hope that our concerns and observations will be given full and positive consideration in this light.

We support an action which will provide access to gravesites left behind when the people were forced off the land. We believe that any people should be able to visit the graves of their ancestors without undue hardship caused by no fault of their own.

We support Senator Helmes' suggestion that the Park Service erect an historical marker at Soco Gap to honor the contributions of the Cherokee Nation to the people of North Carolina and to the United States.

After considerable review and discussion we are opposed to Senator Sanford's solution to this problem in the same way we are opposed to his suggestion that Indian Tribes should be legislatively created as in the case of the Lumbee question. In the first case, his answer to the Swain County concern is not a solution, but rather a partial attempt to placate without understanding the economic loss caused by this unfulfilled commitment. In the second case, the Lumbee legislation if enacted, will cost tax payers of the country some one hundred fifty six million dollars annually and cloud the established definition of Native Americans.

We suggest that a more equitable way to solve the federal commitment to Swain County would be for Senator Sanford to join with Senator Helms in asking that the promised road be built as outlined in S-1849 and that the County be compensated for lost revenues through the years.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you on behalf of the Tribe for this opportunity to make our views known. We believe these ideas, specifically included in the legislation, will assure equitable treatment of North Carolina citizens throughout the area as well as other citizens of our country.

Thank you.

Mr. SANFORD. I would like to clarify the terms of our understanding with regard to the Swain County Settlement Act.

Mr. HELMS. I understand my distinguished friend from North Carolina would like to address several concerns he has about the provisions of the Swain County Settlement Act as it relates to our understanding of the 1943 agreement and I appreciate his cooperation. I would be happy to answer the Senator's inquiries. As the Senator knows, settlement of this issue has been a priority of mine since coming to the Senate 20 years ago. I have traveled the roads, visited the cemeteries, brought delegations of Senators to Swain County and fought everyday to hold the Government to its promise to build the road on the north shore of Fontana Lake and compensate the county for the road it destroyed, not one in lieu of the other.

The "Road to Nowhere" must be turned into the road to a brighter future. There is nothing more important to me than forcing the Government to keep its complete word, that means the road and the payment. I will not allow the narrow special interests to dictate the future of one of the most beautiful parts of North Carolina. The road changes what is a bleak future into one of promise. The $16 million can come and go but the road brings jobs and people and hope.

Mr. SANFORD. I thank the distinguished senior Senator. My friend and I have been intimately familiar with an agreement that was entered into in 1943 between the Secretary of the Interior, the State of North Carolina, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and Swain County, NC. I believe that we both share the desire of the citizens of Swain County to see this problem settled.

I want to make it clear that my first priority since my days as Governor, and throughout my Senate term, has been to compensate the people of Swain County for the road that was flooded to construct Fontana Reservoir as part of this Nation's war effort in 1943. The county is made up of about 82 percent Federal land and the unemployment in the county remains in double digits. The schools and the infrastructure of the county have suffered due to a lack of economic development—the children and the working families deserve the boost that this legislation will bring.

Mr. HELMS. I agree with the Senator. That is why every version of this legislation I have introduced over the years calls for the complete settlement of all obligations owed to the people of Swain County, including the North Shore Road.

In that light, this Senator and the supporters of the North Shore Road intend this legislation to be the full settlement of all of Swain County's claims. However, we do expect the environmentalists to go to court. Despite that, it does not appear that respecting that intent requires invalidating the directive to pay Swain County if there is a legal or regulatory delay in the construction of the North Shore Road.

Mr. SANFORD. I must make one point clear, and I think the Senator has answered my concern about statutory interpretation. It is my reading that the provision of the bill directing the payment of $16 million to Swain County is independent of and severable from the provision directing the completion of the road. Knowing of the obstacles which the Senator has mentioned, this legislation will be understood to ensure that any such delays will not effect the payment of funds to Swain County.

Mr. HELMS. The Senator is correct. As I noted, after consultation with concerned citizens in Swain County I divided the provisions of the legislation. Section 2(a)(3) directs the Secretary of the Interior to build the road. Section 2(a)(4) directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Swain County the money owed it as a result of the 1943 agreement. These are not dependent clauses. If the road is challenged for failure to comply with an environmental statute such a challenge would not affect the directive to pay Swain County. The fact that no language makes one directive depend on the other indicates that the order to the Secretary of the Treasury and the order to the Secretary of the Interior operate independently.

Mr. SANFORD. I thank the senior Senator for his cooperation over the years and know that this issue has been a priority for him since he arrived in the Senate.

I must say that I am also very pleased that we have successfully brought this issue before the Senate and will work to ensure its swift passage in the House. Last December, I had the opportunity to spend a couple of days in Swain County and take the rough boat rides, the truck rides, and hikes that are required to visit the sites of the abandoned townships and old graves that lie across Fontana Lake. It is good that we are able to address the 1943 agreement on behalf of the citizens who remember these areas before the creation of the lake, and on behalf of their grandchildren.

Mr. HELMS. I thank my colleague and I trust that he will work with me to ensure that there are no delays in the House. Its time for real progress to begin in Swain County and this is the important first step.

(3) submit a plan, developed by the commission and incorporating such strategy, to the Congress, the Canadian Parliament, the legislature of British Columbia, and the State legislatures of Oregon and Washington.

(b) Advisory Commission.—The commission should be authorized to function only in an advisory capacity and should have no authority concerning any local, State, or Federal agency or government.

(c) Composition of United States Delegation.—If the United States and Canada conclude an agreement to establish such a commission concerning the Cascadia region, the United States delegation to the commission should include—

(1) 1 member appointed by the President, who should be a nonvoting member;

(2) a Washington State delegation; and

TELEPHONE DISCLOSURE AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION ACT

INOUYE (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3411

Mr. FORD (for Mr. INOUYE, for himself, Mr. MCCAIN, ands Mr. HOLLINGS) proposed an amendment to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1579) to provide for regulation and oversight of the development and application of the telephone technology known as pay-per-call, and for other purposes, as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment to the bill, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE, FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act".

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The use of pay-per-call services, most commonly through the use of 900 telephone numbers, has grown exponentially in the past few years into a national, billion-dollar industry as a result of recent technological innovations. Such services are convenient to consumers, cost-effective to vendors, and profitable to communications common carriers.

(2) Many pay-per-call businesses provide valuable information, increase consumer choices, and stimulate innovative and responsive services that benefit the public.

(3) The interstate nature of the pay-per-call industry means that its activities are beyond the reach of individual States and therefore requires Federal regulatory treatment to protect the public interest.

(4) The lack of nationally uniform regulatory guidelines has led to confusion for callers, subscribers, industry participants, and regulatory agencies as to the rights of callers and the oversight responsibilities of regulatory authorities, and has allowed some pay-per-call businesses to engage in practices that abuse the rights of consumers.

(5) Some interstate pay-per-call businesses have engaged in practices which are misleading to the consumer, harmful to the public interest, or contrary to accepted standards of business practices and thus cause harm to the many reputable businesses that are serving the public.

(6) Because the consumer most often incurs a financial obligation as soon as a pay-per-call transaction is completed, the accuracy and descriptiveness of vendor advertisements become crucial in avoiding consumer abuse. The obligation for accuracy should include price-per-call and duration-of-call information, odds disclosure for lotteries, games, and sweepstakes, and obligations for obtaining parental consent from callers under 18.

(7) The continued growth of the legitimate pay-per-call industry is dependent upon consumer confidence that unfair and deceptive behavior will be effectively curtailed and that consumers will have adequate rights of redress.

(8) Vendors of telephone-billed goods and services must also feel confident in their rights and obligations for resolving billing disputes if they are to use this new marketplace for the sale of products of more than nominal value.

TITLE I—CARRIER OBLIGATIONS AND CONSUMER RIGHTS CONCERNING PAY-PER-CALL TRANSACTIONS

SEC. 101. AMENDMENT TO COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1934.

"SEC. 228. REGULATION OF CARRIER OFFERING OF PAY-PER-CALL SERVICES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section—

"(1) to put into effect a system of national regulation and review that will oversee interstate pay-per-call services;

"(2) to recognize the Commission's authority to prescribe regulations and enforcement procedures and conduct oversight to afford reasonable protection to consumers of pay-per-call services and to assure that violations of Federal law do not occur.

"(b) GENERAL AUTHORITY FOR REGULATIONS.—The Commission by regulation shall, within 270 days after the date of enactment of this section, establish a system for oversight and regulation of pay-per-call services in order to provide for the protection of consumers in accordance with this Act and other applicable Federal statutes and regulations. The Commission's final rules shall—

"(1) include measures that provide a consumer of pay-per-call services with adequate and clear descriptions of the rights of the caller;

"(2) define the obligations of common carriers with respect to the provision of pay-per-call services;

"(3) include requirements on such carriers to protect against abusive practices by providers of pay-per-call services;

"(4) identify procedures by which common carriers and providers of pay-per-call services may take affirmative steps to protect against nonpayment of legitimate charges; and

"(5) require that any service described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (i)(1) be offered only through the use of certain telephone number prefixes and area codes.

"(c) COMMON CARRIER OBLIGATIONS.—Within 270 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Commission shall, by regulation, establish the following requirements for common carriers:

"(1) CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS TO COMPLY.—Any common carrier assigning to a provider of pay-per-call services a telephone number with a prefix or area code designated by the Commission in accordance with subsection (b)(5) shall require by contract or tariff that such provider comply with the provisions of titles II and III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act and the regulations prescribed by the Federal Trade Commission pursuant to those titles.

"(2) INFORMATION AVAILABILITY.—A common carrier that by tariff or contract assigns a telephone number with a prefix or area code designated by the Commission in accordance with subsection (b)(5) to a provider of a pay-per-call service shall make readily available on request to Federal and State agencies and other interested persons—

"(A) a list of the telephone numbers for each of the pay-per-call services it carries;

"(B) a short description of each such service;

"(C) a statement of the total cost or the cost per minute and any other fees for each such service;

"(D) a statement of the pay-per-call service's name, business address, and business telephone; and

"(E) such other information as the Commission considers necessary for the enforcement of this section and other applicable Federal statutes and regulations.

"(2) COMPLIANCE PROCEDURES.—A common carrier that by contract or tariff assigns a telephone number with a prefix or area code designated by the Commission in accordance with subsection (b)(5) to a provider of pay-per-call services shall terminate, in accordance with procedures specified in such regulations, the offering of a pay-per-call service of a provider if the carrier knows or reasonably should know that such service is not provided in compliance with title II or III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act or the regulations prescribed by the Federal Trade Commission pursuant to such titles.

"(3) SUBSCRIBER DISCONNECTION PROHIBITED.—A common carrier shall not disconnect or interrupt a subscriber's local exchange telephone service or long distance telephone service because of nonpayment of charges for any pay-per-call service.

"(4) BLOCKING AND PRESUBSCRIPTION.—A common carrier that provides local exchange service shall—

"(A) offer telephone subscribers (where technically feasible) the option of blocking access from their telephone number to all, or to certain specific, prefixes or area codes used by pay-per-call services, which option—

"(i) shall be offered at no charge (I) to all subscribers for a period of 60 days after the issuance of the regulations under subsection (b), and (II) to any subscriber who subscribes to a new telephone number until 60 days after the time the new telephone number is effective; and

"(ii) shall otherwise be offered at a reasonable fee; and

"(B) offer telephone subscribers (where the Commission determines it is technically and economically feasible), in combination with the blocking option described under subparagraph (A), the option of presubscribing to or blocking only specific pay-per-call services for a reasonable one-time charge.

The regulations prescribed under subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph may permit the costs of such blocking to be recovered by contract or tariff, but such costs may not be recovered from local or long-distance ratepayers. Nothing in this subsection precludes a common carrier from filing its rates and regulations regarding blocking and presubscription in its interstate tariffs.

"(5) VERIFICATION OF CHARITABLE STATUS.—A common carrier that assigns by contract or tariff a telephone number with a prefix or area code designated by the Commission in accordance with subsection (b)(5) to a provider of pay-per-call services that the carrier knows or reasonably should know is engaged in soliciting charitable contributions shall obtain from such provider proof of the tax exempt status of any person or organization for which contributions are solicited.

"(6) BILLING FOR 800 CALLS.—A common carrier shall prohibit by tariff or contract the use of any 800 telephone number, or other telephone numbers advertised or widely understood to be toll free, in a manner that would result in—

"(A) the calling party being assessed, by virtue of completing the call, a charge for the call;

"(B) the calling party being connected to a pay-per-call service;

"(C) the calling party being charged for information conveyed during the call unless the calling party has a preexisting agreement to be charged for the information or discloses a credit or charge card number during the call; or

"(D) the calling party being called back collect for the provision of audio information services or simultaneous voice conservation services.

"(d) BILLING AND COLLECTION PRACTICES.—The regulations required by this section shall require that any common carrier that by tariff or contract assigns a telephone number with a prefix or area code designated by the Commission in accordance with subsection (b)(5) to a provider of a pay-per-call service and that offers billing and collection services to such provider—

"(1) ensure that a subscriber is not billed—

"(A) for pay-per-call services that such carrier knows or reasonably should know was provided in violation of the regulations issued pursuant to title II of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act; or

"(B) under such other circumstances as the Commission determines necessary in order to protect subscribers from abusive practices;

"(2) establish a local or a toll-free telephone number to answer questions and provide information on subscribers' rights and obligations with regard to their use of pay-per-call services and to provide to callers the name and mailing address of any provider of pay-per-call services offered by the common carrier;

"(3) within 60 days after the issuance of final regulations pursuant to subsection (b), provide, either directly or through contract with any local exchange carrier that provides billing or collection services to the common carrier, to all of such common carrier's telephone subscribers, to all new subscribers, and to all subscribers requesting service at a new location, a disclosure statement that sets forth all rights and obligations of the subscriber and the carrier with respect to the use and payment for pay-per-call services, including the right of a subscriber not to be billed and the applicable blocking option; and

"(4) in any billing to telephone subscribers that includes charges for any pay-per-call service—

"(A) display any charges for pay-per-call services in a part of the subscriber's bill that is identified as not being related to local and long distance telephone charges;

"(B) for each charge so displayed, specify, at a minimum, the type of service, the amount of the charge, and the date, time, and duration of the call; and

"(C) identify the toll-free number established pursuant to paragraph (2).

"(e) LIABILITY.—

"(1) COMMON CARRIERS NOT LIABLE FOR TRANSMISSION OR BILLING.—No common carrier shall be liable for a criminal or civil sanction or penalty solely because the carrier provided transmission or billing and collection for a pay-per-call service unless the carrier knew or reasonably should have known that such service was provided in violation of a provision of, or regulation prescribed pursuant to, title II or III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act or any other Federal law. This paragraph shall not prevent the Commission from imposing a sanction or penalty on a common carrier for a violation by that carrier of a regulation prescribed under this section.

"(2) CIVIL LIABILITY.—No cause of action may be brought in any court or administrative agency against any common carrier or any of its affiliates on account of any act of the carrier or affiliate to terminate any pay-per-call service in order to comply with the regulations prescribed under this section, title II or III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act, or any other Federal law unless the complainant demonstrates that the carrier or affiliate did not act in good faith.

"(f) SPECIAL PROVISIONS.—

"(1) CONSUMER REFUND REQUIREMENTS.—The regulations required by subsection (d) shall establish procedures, consistent with the provisions of titles II and III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act, to ensure that carriers and other parties providing billing and collection services with respect to pay-per-call services provide appropriate refunds to subscribers who have been billed for pay-per-call services pursuant to programs that have been found to have violated this section or such regulations, any provision of, or regulations prescribed pursuant to, title II or III of the Telephone Disclosure and Dispute Resolution Act, or any other Federal law.

"(2) RECOVERY OF COSTS.—The regulations prescribed by the Commission under this section shall permit a common carrier to recover its cost of complying with such regulations from providers of pay-per-call services, but shall not permit such costs to be recovered from local or long distance ratepayers.

"(3) RECOMMENDATIONS ON DATA PAY-PER-CALL.—The Commission, within one year after the date of enactment of this section, shall submit to the Congress the Commission's recommendations with respect to the extension of regulations under this section to persons that provide, for a per-call charge, data services that are not pay-per-call services.

"(g) EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.—

"(2) CONSUMER PROTECTION LAWS.—Nothing in this section shall relieve any provider of pay-per-call services, common carrier, local exchange carrier, or any other person from the obligation to comply with any Federal, State, or local statute or regulation relating to consumer protection or unfair trade.

"(3) GAMBLING LAWS.—Nothing in this section shall preclude any State from enforcing its statutes and regulations with regard to lotteries, wagering, betting, and other gambling activities.

"(4) STATE AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section shall preclude any State from enacting and enforcing additional and complementary oversight and regulatory systems or procedures, or both, so long as such systems and procedures govern intrastate services and do not significantly impede the enforcement of this section or other Federal statutes.

"(5) ENFORCEMENT OF EXISTING REGULATIONS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the Commission from enforcing regulations prescribed prior to the date of enactment of this section in fulfilling the requirements of this section to the extent that such regulations are consistent with the provisions of this section.

"(h) EFFECT ON DIAL-A-PORN PROHIBITIONS.—Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 223 of this Act.

"(2) Such term does not include directory services provided by a common carrier or its affiliate or by a local exchange carrier or its affiliate, or any service the charge for which is tariffed, or any service for which users are assessed charges only after entering into a presubscription or comparable arrangement with the provider of such service.".

(G) be prohibited from billing consumers in excess of the amounts described in the introductory message and from billing for services provided in violation of the rules prescribed by the Commission pursuant to this section;

(H) ensure that any billing statement for such provider's charges shall—

(i) display any charges for pay-per-call services in a part of the consumer's bill that is identified as not being related to local and long distance telephone charges; and

Notwithstanding section 5(a)(2) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 45(a)(2)), communications common carriers shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission for purposes of this title.

NATIONAL LAND REMOTE SENSING POLICY

PRESSLER AMENDMENT NO. 3416

Mr. SIMPSON (for Mr. Pressler) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 2297) to enable the United States to maintain its leadership in land remote sensing by providing data continuity for the Landsat program by establishing a new national land remote sensing policy, and for other purposes; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Land Remote Sensing Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) The continuous collection and utilization of land remote sensing data from space are of major benefit in studying and understanding human impacts on the global environment, in managing the Earth's natural resources, in carrying out national security functions, and in planning and conducting many other activities of scientific, economic, and social importance.

(2) The Federal Government's Landsat system established the United States as the world leader in land remote sensing technology.

(3) The national interest of the United States lies in maintaining international leadership in satellite land remote sensing and in broadly promoting the beneficial use of remote sensing data.

(4) The cost of Landsat data has impeded the use of such data for scientific purposes, such as for global environmental change research, as well as for other public sector applications.

(5) Given the importance of the Landsat program to the United States, urgent actions, including expedited procurement procedures, are required to ensure data continuity.

(6) Full commercialization of the Landsat program cannot be achieved within the foreseeable future, and thus should not serve as the near-term goal of national policy on land remote sensing; however, commercialization of land remote sensing should remain a long-term goal of United States policy.

(7) Despite the success and importance of the Landsat system, funding and organizational uncertainties over the past several years have placed its future in doubt and have jeopardized United States leadership in land remote sensing.

(8) Recognizing the importance of the Landsat program in helping to meet national and commercial objectives, the President approved, on February 11, 1992, a National Space Policy Directive which was developed by the National Space Council and commits the United States to ensuring the continuity of Landsat coverage into the 21st century.

(9) Because Landsat data are particularly important for national security purposes and global environmental change research, management responsibilities for the program should be transferred from the Department of Commerce to an integrated program management involving the Department of Defense and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

(10) Regardless of management responsibilities for the Landsat program, the Nation broad civilian, national security, commercial, and foreign policy interests in remote sensing will best be served by ensuring that Landsat remains an unclassified program that operates according to the principles of open skies and nondiscriminatory access.

(11) Technological advances aimed at reducing the size and weight of satellite systems hold the potential for dramatic reductions in the cost, and substantial improvements in the capabilities, of future land remote sensing systems, but such technological advances have not been demonstrated for land remote sensing and therefore cannot be relied upon as the sole means of achieving data continuity for the Landsat program.

(12) A technology demonstration program involving advanced remote sensing technologies could serve a vital role in determining the design of a follow-on spacecraft to Landsat 7, while also helping to determine whether such a spacecraft should be funded by the United States Government, by the private sector, or by an international consortium.

(13) To maximize the value of the Landsat program to the American public, unenhanced Landsat 4 through 6 data should be made available, at a minimum, to United States Government agencies, to global environmental change researchers, and to other researchers who are financially supported by the United States Government, at the cost of fulfilling user requests, and unenhanced Landsat 7 data should be made available to all users at the cost of fulfilling user requests.

(14) To stimulate development of the commercial market for unenhanced data and value-added services, the United States Government should adopt a data policy for Landsat 7 which allows "competition within the private sector for distribution of unenhanced data and value-added services.

(15) Development of the remote sensing market and the provision of commercial value-added services based on remote sensing data should remain exclusively the function of the private sector.

(16) It is the best interest of the United States to maintain a permanent, comprehensive Government archive of global Landsat and other land remote sensing data for long-term monitoring and study of the changing global environment.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act, the following definitions apply:

(1) The Term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

(2) The term "cost of fulfilling user requests" means the incremental costs associated with providing product generation, reproduction, and distribution of unenhanced data in response to user requests and shall not include any acquisition, amortization, or depreciation of capital assets originally paid for by the United States Government or other costs not specifically attributable to fulfilling user requests.

(3) The term "data continuity" means the continued acquisition and availability of unenhanced data which are, from the point of view of the user—

(A) sufficiently consistent (in terms of acquisition geometry, coverage characteristics, and spectral characteristics) with previous Landsat data to allow comparisons for global and regional change detection and characterization; and

(B) compatible with such data and with methods used to receive and process such data.

(4) The term "data preprocessing" may include—

(A) rectification of system and sensor distortions in land remote sensing data as it is received directly from the satellite in preparation for delivery to a user;

(B) registration of such data with respect to features of the Earth; and

(C) calibration of spectral response with respect to such data, but does not include conclusions, manipulations, or calculations derived from such data, or a combination of such data with other data.

(5) The term "land remote sensing" means the collection of data which can be processed into imagery of surface features of the Earth from an unclassified satellite or satellites, other than an operational United States Government weather satellite.

(6) The term "Landsat Program Management" means the integrated program management structure—

(A) established by, and responsible to, the Administrator and the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 101(a); and

(B) consisting of appropriate officers and employees of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Department of Defense, and any other United States Government agencies the President designates as responsible for the Landsat program.

(7) The term "Landsat system" means Landsats 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, and any follow-on land remote sensing system operated and owned by the United States Government, along with any related ground equipment, systems, and facilities owned by the United States Government.

(8) The term "Landsat 6 contractor" means the private sector entity which was awarded the contract for spacecraft construction, operations, and data marketing rights for the Landsat 6 spacecraft.

(9) The term "Landsat 7" means the follow-on satellite to Landsat 6.

(10) The term "National Satellite Land Remote Sensing Data Archive" means the archive established by the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to the archival responsibilities defined in section 502.

(11) The term "noncommercial purposes" refers to those activities undertaken by individuals or entities on the condition, upon receipt of unenhanced data, that—

(A) such data shall not be used in connection with any bid for a commercial contract, development of a commercial product, or any other non-United States Government activity that is expected, or has the potential, to be profitmaking;

(B) the results of such activities are disclosed in a timely and complete fashion in the open technical literature or other method of public release, except when such disclosure by the United States Government or its contractors would adversely affect the national security or foreign policy of the United States or violate a provision of law or regulation; and

(C) such data shall not be distributed in competition with unenhanced data provided by the Landsat 6 contractor.

(12) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce.

(13) The term "unenhanced data" means land remote sensing signals or imagery products that are unprocessed or subject only to data preprocessing.

(14) The term "United States Government and its affiliated users" means—

(A) United States Government agencies;

(B) researchers involved with the United States Global Change Research Program and its international counterpart programs; and

(C) other researchers and international entities that have signed with the United States Government a cooperative agreement involving the use of Landsat data for noncommercial purposes.

SEC. 4. REPEAL OF LAND REMOTE-SENSING COMMERCIALIZATION ACT OF 1984.

The Land Remote-Sensing Commercialization Act of 1984 (15 U.S.C. 4201 et seq.) is repealed.

TITLE I—LANDSAT

SEC. 101. LANDSAT PROGRAM MANAGEMENT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Administrator and the Secretary of Defense shall be responsible for management of the Landsat program. Such responsibility shall be carried out by establishing an integrated program management structure for the Landsat system.

(b) MANAGEMENT PLAN.—The Administrator, the Secretary of Defense, and any other United States Government official the President designates as responsible for part of the Landsat program, shall establish, through a management plan, the roles, responsibilities, and funding expectations for the Landsat Program of the appropriate United States Government agencies. The management plan shall—

(1) specify that the fundamental goal of the Landsat Program Management is the continuity of unenhanced Landsat data through the acquisition and operation of a Landsat 7 satellite as quickly as practicable which is, at a minimum, functionally equivalent to the Landsat 6 satellite, with the addition of a tracking and data relay satellite communications capability;

(2) include a baseline funding profile that—

(A) is mutually acceptable to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Defense for the period covering the development and operation of Landsat 7; and

(B) provides for total funding responsibility of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Defense, respectively, to be approximately equal to the funding responsibility of the other as spread across the development and operational life of Landsat 7;

(3) specify that any improvements over the Landsat 6 functional equivalent capability for Landsat 7 will be funded by a specific sponsoring agency or agencies, in a manner agreed to by the Landsat Program Management, if the required funding exceeds the baseline funding profile required by paragraph (2), and that additional improvements will be sought only if the improvements will not jeopardize data continuity; and

(4) provide for a technology demonstration program whose objective shall be the demonstration of advanced land remote sensing technologies that may potentially yield a system which is less expensive to build and operate, and more responsive to data users, than is the current Landsat system.

(c) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Landsat Program Management shall be responsible for—

(1) Landsat 7 procurement, launch, and operations;

(2) ensuring that the operation of the Landsat system is responsive to the broad interests of the civilian, national security, commercial, and foreign users of the Landsat system;

(3) ensuring that all unenhanced Landsat data remain unclassified and that, except as provided in section 506 (a) and (b), no restrictions are placed on the availability of unenhanced data;

(4) ensuring that land remote sensing data of high priority locations will be acquired by the Landsat 7 system as required to meet the needs of the United States Global Change Research Program, as established in the Global Change Research Act of 1990, and to meet the needs of national security users;

(5) Landsat data responsibilities pursuant to this Act;

(6) oversight of Landsat contracts entered into under section 102 and 103;

(7) coordination of a technology demonstration program, pursuant to section 303; and

(d) AUTHORITY TO CONTRACT.—The Landsat Program management may, subject to appropriations and only under the existing contract authority of the United States Government agencies that compose the Landsat Program Management, enter into contracts with the private sector for services such as, but not limited to, satellite operations and data preprocessing.

(e) LANDSAT ADVISORY PROCESS.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Landsat Program Management shall seek impartial advice and comments regarding the status, effectiveness, and operation of the Landsat system, using existing advisory committees and other appropriate mechanisms. Such advice shall be sought from individuals who represent—

(A) a broad range of perspectives on basic and applied science and operational needs with respect to land remote sensing data;

(2) encourage the development, launch, and operation of a land remote sensing system that maintains data continuity with the Landsat system; and

(3) incorporate system enhancements, including any such enhancements developed under the technology demonstration program under section 303, which may potentially yield a system that is less expensive to build and operate, and more responsive to data users, than is the Landsat system projected to be in operation through the year 2000.

(c) PREFERENCE FOR PRIVATE SECTOR SYSTEM.—If a successor land remote sensing system to Landsat 7 can be funded and managed by the private sector while still achieving the goals stated in subsection (b) without jeopardizing the domestic, national security, and foreign policy interests of the United States, preference should be given to the development of such a system by the private sector without competition from the United States Government.

"(iii) BANKS UNDERGOING LIQUIDATION.—With respect to any bank undergoing liquidation under this Act, a liability to the Financial Assistance Corporation in the amount of the payment required under this subparagraph (calculated as if the bank had left the System on the date it was placed in liquidation) shall be recognized as a claim in favor of the Financial Assistance Corporation against the estate of the bank.

"(iv) OBLIGATIONS OF OTHER BANKS.—The obligations of other banks shall not be reduced in anticipation of any recoveries under this subparagraph from banks leaving the System or in liquidation, but the Financial Assistance Corporation shall apply the recoveries, when received, and all earnings on the recoveries, to reduce the other banks' payment obligations, or, to the extent the recoveries are received after the other banks have met their entire payment obligation, shall refund the recoveries, when received, to the other banks in proportion to the other banks' payments.";

The Financial Assistance Corporation shall partially discharge the bank from its obligation under subparagraph (C) to the extent of each such payment and the earnings on the payment as earned.

"(ii) CAPITAL REQUIREMENTS.—The agreement shall not require payments to be made to the extent that making a particular payment or part of a payment would cause the bank to fail to satisfy applicable regulatory permanent capital requirements, but shall provide for recalculation of subsequent payments accordingly.

"(iii) INVESTMENT; AVAILABILITY.—The funds received by the Financial Assistance Corporation pursuant to the agreements shall be invested in eligible investments as defined in section 6.25(a)(1). The funds and the earnings on the funds shall be available only for the payment of the principal of the bonds issued by the Financial Assistance Corporation under this subsection."; and

"(aa) such amount as the institution may be required to appropriate under any assistance agreement the institution has with the Farm Credit System Assistance Board or the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation; or

"(bb) the amount that, if appropriated to the account in equal amounts in each year thereafter until the maturity of the obligation referred to in subparagraph (A), would cause the amount in the account to equal the par value of the preferred stock issued by the institution with respect to the obligation; plus

"(II) any amount that had been appropriated to the account in a previous year but had thereafter been offset by losses.

"(iii) LIMITATION.—An annual appropriation shall not be made to the extent that the appropriation would exceed the institution's net income (as determined pursuant to generally accepted accounting principles) in that year or to the extent that the appropriation would cause the institution's preferred stock to be impaired.

"(iv) USE.—The amount in the appropriated unallocated surplus account shall be unavailable to pay dividends or other allocations or distributions to shareholders or holders of participation certificates. The account shall be senior to all other unallocated surplus accounts but junior to all preferred and common stock for purposes of the application of operating losses.

"(iii) LIMITED LENDING AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any provision of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.), the Farm Credit Bank resulting from a merger under this subsection shall have only the lending authorities in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi that the constituent banks exercised in such States immediately prior to the merger, except as may be provided in section 5.17(a)(2) of such Act (12 U.S.C. 2252(a)(2)).

"(B) OPERATING AND MERGER AUTHORITY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson may operate subject to such provisions of part A of title II of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (as in effect immediately before the amendment made by section 401 took effect) and such provisions of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) (as in effect after the amendment), as the Farm Credit Administration deems appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection and such Act. This subparagraph shall take effect as if it had become law at the same time as the amendment made by section 401 and shall remain in effect until the Bank's merger with a Farm Credit Bank under this subsection, or July 1, 1994, whichever is sooner.

"(ii) LIMITATION ON OPERATING AUTHORITY.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding clause (i) and subparagraph (A)(ii), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to operate as provided under clause (i) shall expire, and the Farm Credit Administration shall revoke the Bank's charter, immediately on the Bank's merger with a Farm Credit Bank under this subsection, or July 1, 1994, whichever is sooner.

"(II) DISTRICT BOUNDARY MODIFICATION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson shall not include the authority for the Bank to modify, nor shall the Farm Credit Administration approve such a modification to, the boundaries of the Fifth Farm Credit District to reaffiliate any portion of the District with another Farm Credit Bank, except—

"(aa) in the case of the merger of the entire Bank as an entity with a Farm Credit Bank such that the entire chartered territory of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson (except as provided in item (bb)) is merged with the Farm Credit Bank; and

"(bb) in the case of the reaffiliation of the Northwest Louisiana Production Credit Association with another farm credit district pursuant to the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations under such Act.

"(iii) LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY TO MERGE.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to merge with a Farm Credit Bank as provided under clause (i) shall expire, and the Farm Credit Administration shall revoke the Bank's charter, immediately on the Bank's merger with a Farm Credit Bank under this subsection, or July 1, 1994, whichever is sooner.

"(II) BANK INTEGRITY.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to merge with a Farm Credit Bank shall be limited to a merger of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson (as chartered on the date of enactment of this subsection to include the territory in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, except as provided in clause (ii)(II)(bb)) as a whole entity such that the entire chartered territory of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson is merged with the Farm Credit Bank.

"(III) LIMITATION.—Beginning on the date of an order issued by the Farm Credit Administration under subparagraph (D), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to merge with a Farm Credit Bank shall be limited to the arbitrated merger provided for in paragraph (2).

"(C) EXTENSION.—

"(i) LETTER OF INTENT.—If no later than June 30, 1993, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson delivers to the Farm Credit Administration a letter of intent to merge with a Farm Credit Bank, summarizing the terms and conditions of the merger (including, but not limited to, board composition, capital structure, exchange, or transfer of equities, and termination) signed by the chief executive officer and the members of the boards of directors of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson and the Farm Credit Bank, the Farm Credit Administration shall, on its determination that the letter of intent represents a bona fide good faith agreement in principle between the two banks to merge, and that there is at least a reasonable prospect that the merger will be completed in an expeditious manner, grant a one-time extension, until a date certain not later than October 31, 1993, of the requirement under subparagraph (A). Any extension provided under this subparagraph may be conditioned on such terms and conditions as the Farm Credit Administration determines necessary to ensure that the merger described in the letter of intent is completed by the closing date of the extension.

"(ii) COMPLIANCE.—If the Farm Credit Administration grants an extension under clause (i), it shall issue an order under subparagraph (D) immediately if—

"(I) the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson, or the Farm Credit Bank that is a signatory to the letter of intent under clause (i), provides written notification to the Farm Credit Administration that the bank does not intend to complete the merger described in the letter of intent;

"(II) the Farm Credit Administration determines that the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson is not complying with any term or condition on which an extension under clause (i) was conditioned; or

"(III) the Farm Credit Administration determines that the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson is not pursuing in good faith the merger provided for in the letter of intent.

If the Farm Credit Administration issues an order under subparagraph (D) pursuant to this clause, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson shall be deemed to have failed to comply with the requirements of subparagraph (A).

"(D) FAILURE TO MERGE; ISSUANCE OF ORDER.—If the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson fails to comply, or notifies the Farm Credit Administration in writing that it does not intend to comply, with the requirements of subparagraph (A), the Farm Credit Administration shall, within 5 days after the date specified in subparagraph (A), or such other date specified by the Farm Credit Administration under subparagraph (C), issue, notwithstanding any other provision of law, an order requiring the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to merge with the Farm Credit Bank of Texas in accordance with paragraph (2).

"(2) ARBITRATED MERGER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the issuance of an order by the Farm Credit Administration under paragraph (1)(D), an arbitrator (or panel of arbitrators) shall be named by the American Arbitration Association in accordance with the Commercial Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association to serve as the arbitrator referred to in this paragraph.

"(B) DUTIES.—The arbitrator shall determine the terms and conditions of the merger required under an order issued under paragraph (1)(D), such that the terms and conditions are fair and equitable to the two banks, their affiliated associations, the stockholders and borrowers of the associations, and the other institutions of the Farm Credit System, and are designed to protect or enhance the safety and soundness of the Farm Credit System. The arbitrator shall have the authority to hire staff and secure the services of consultants as necessary to discharge the duties of the arbitrator under this paragraph.

"(C) EXPENSES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the compensation and expenses of the arbitrator, the fees and expenses of the American Arbitration Association, and any expenses associated with the referendum required under subparagraph (F) shall be paid from the Farm Credit Assistance Fund established under section 6.25 of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2278b–5).

"(D) DEVELOPMENT OF MERGER PLANS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 100 days after the issuance of an order by the Farm Credit Administration under paragraph (1)(D), the arbitrator shall develop and submit for certification to the Farm Credit Administration a plan specifying the terms and conditions of the merger of the two banks required under this paragraph, such that the terms and conditions are fair and equitable to the two banks, their affiliated associations, the stockholders or farmer-borrowers of the associations, and the other institutions of the Farm Credit System, and are designed to protect or enhance the safety and soundness of the Farm Credit System. In devising the plan, the arbitrator shall, to the extent practicable, achieve the following objectives:

"(I) Implementation of the preferences expressed by the affected and interested parties in submissions under clause (ii).

"(II) Valuation of assets fairly, equitably, and consistently for all parties involved.

"(III) Establishment of capitalization and funding terms in a manner that treats farmer-borrowers and stockholders in the two involved farm credit districts equitably and takes account of risk.

"(IV) Ensure the viability of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and associations of the bank and the ability of the resulting bank and associations of the bank to lend to eligible borrowers at reasonable and competitive rates of interest.

"(ii) SUBMISSION OF VIEWS AND INFORMATION.—The arbitrator shall receive from affected and interested parties written submissions, in accordance with fair and reasonable procedures established by the arbitrator, regarding the terms and conditions of an appropriate plan for the merger of the two banks required under this paragraph. The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson, the Farm Credit Bank of Texas, and their affiliated associations shall make available all books, records, financial information, and other material that the arbitrator determines is necessary to the development of the plan or the fulfillment of any other requirement under this paragraph. A copy of any submission or information provided to the arbitrator by any party under this paragraph shall be furnished to the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson or the Farm Credit Bank of Texas on the written request of the bank and at the bank's expense. "(II) The valuation, for purposes of the merger, of the assets and liabilities of the merging banks.

"(III) The terms and conditions on which the shares of capital stock of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson and, if necessary, the Farm Credit Bank of Texas, will be converted into shares of the resulting Farm Credit Bank.

"(IV) The capital structure and capitalization levels of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and the affiliated associations of the Farm Credit Bank in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi as the arbitrator determines necessary to carry out the purposes of this paragraph (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(V) The terms of financing agreements between any production credit associations or agricultural credit associations described in clause (iv), and the resulting Farm Credit Bank (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VI) Any other terms and conditions or other matters that the arbitrator considers necessary.

"(iv) CONTENT OF PLAN; AGRICULTURAL CREDIT ASSOCIATIONS.—If the arbitrator determines that the chartering of agricultural credit associations in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi will be in the best interests of the farmers, ranchers, and aquatic producers eligible to borrow from Farm Credit System associations, the plan required under this subparagraph shall also include, based on submissions from the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson and the Farm Credit Bank of Texas, provisions for the establishment of agricultural credit associations to operate in the States, subject to approval in the referendum under subparagraph (F). Such provisions shall include provisions regarding the following matters:

"(I) A proposal for the establishment of an agricultural credit association in each of the geographic areas specified in subparagraph (F)(iii) (the charters of which, if validly issued under subparagraph (G)(i) pursuant to approval in the referendum under subparagraph (F), shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(II) The initial composition, if the proposal for the establishment of agricultural credit associations is approved, of the board of directors of each such agricultural credit association (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(III) The valuation, for purposes of the proposed merger of the production credit association and the Federal land bank association in each of the geographic areas specified in subparagraph (F)(iii), of the assets and liabilities of the associations.

"(IV) The terms and conditions on which the shares of capital stock of any associations that may merge under the plan to form agricultural credit associations will be converted into shares of the resulting agricultural credit associations.

"(V) The capital structure and capitalization levels of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and such affiliated associations of the Farm Credit Bank in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi as the arbitrator determines necessary to carry out the purposes of this paragraph (which capital structure and capitalization levels shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VI) The terms of financing agreements between any agricultural credit associations and the resulting Farm Credit Bank (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VII) Any other terms and conditions or other matters that the arbitrator considers necessary.

"(v) CONSULTATION WITH INSURANCE CORPORATION.—The arbitrator shall consult with the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation regarding the valuation of the assets and liabilities under the plan of merger, the capitalization of the Farm Credit System institutions resulting under the plan, and any other matters relevant to the assistance to be provided by the Insurance Corporation to facilitate the merger under subparagraph (H).

"(E) CERTIFICATION OF PLAN.—Not later than 30 days after the receipt of the plan developed by the arbitrator, the Farm Credit Administration shall—

"(i) certify; or

"(ii) recommend to the arbitrator revisions to the plan that, if incorporated into the plan, will allow the Farm Credit Administration to certify, that the resulting bank and any resulting associations are proposed to be organized in such a fashion that they will, on implementation of the plan, operate in compliance with applicable laws and regulations. The arbitrator and the Farm Credit Administration shall work cooperatively to ensure the expeditious issuance of the certification. If the Farm Credit Administration recommends to the arbitrator revisions to the plan that, if incorporated into the plan, will allow the Farm Credit Administration to certify the plan, the arbitrator shall, not later than 15 days after receipt of the recommended revisions, incorporate the revisions into the plan as the arbitrator deems appropriate to secure the certification.

"(II) in the case of Federal land bank association farmer-borrowers, through a Federal land bank association or through an agricultural credit association as proposed in the plan.

Each farmer-borrower shall be entitled to one vote. The arbitrator shall establish record dates and other procedures for conducting the referendum. The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson, the Farm Credit Bank of Texas, and their affiliated associations shall cooperate in the conduct of the referendum, as determined necessary by the Arbitrator.

"(ii) DISCLOSURE.—The arbitrator shall send to farmer-borrowers eligible to vote under this subparagraph, with their ballot, a statement describing the potential consequences to the farmer-borrowers, and to the associations from which they borrow, of voting to charter an agricultural credit association and setting forth factors that farmer-borrowers should consider relevant to the choice between credit delivery through the current association structure and the chartering of an agricultural credit association. The arbitrator shall develop the disclosure materials in cooperation with the Farm Credit Administration and ensure that the materials are not inconsistent with applicable laws and regulations.

"(iii) TABULATION OF RESULTS.—The results of the vote under this subparagraph shall be compiled separately for production credit association farmer-borrowers and Federal land bank association farmer-borrowers in each of the following seven geographic areas:

"(I) The area served by the Federal Land Bank Association of South Mississippi.

In this regard, the Farm Credit Administration shall—

"(i) issue a charter or charter amendment and take any such other regulatory actions as may be necessary to provide for the establishment of an agricultural credit association in each of the geographic areas described in subparagraph (F)(iii) where a majority of the farmer-borrowers of both the production credit association and the Federal land bank association voted under subparagraph (F)(i) that they preferred to have credit delivered through an agricultural credit association (which charter shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations); and

"(ii) not issue a charter or charter amendment or take any such other regulatory action to provide for the establishment of an agricultural credit association in any of the geographic areas described in subparagraph (F)(iii) where less than a majority of the farmer-borrowers of the production credit association or the Federal land bank association voted in the referendum under subparagraph (F)(i) that they preferred to have credit delivered through an agricultural credit association (provided that the charter of any remaining association in such geographic area shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(iv) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—Assistance provided by the Corporation under this subparagraph shall be on such terms and conditions as the Corporation deems appropriate to facilitate the merger.

"(J) MERGER PLAN FOR AGRICULTURAL CREDIT ASSOCIATIONS.—In any of the States of Alabama, Louisiana, or Mississippi where all of the associations are chartered as agricultural credit associations, the boards of directors of each such association in each State are encouraged to submit to the farmer-borrowers of each such association for their approval a plan for merging the associations into one statewide agricultural credit association, in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.).

The court reviewing the determination or action shall not enter a stay or order of mandamus unless the court has determined, after notice and a hearing before a panel of the court, that the agency action complained of was arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.

"(ii) PROCEDURES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the court may set rules governing the procedures of any such proceeding that set page limits on briefs and time limits for filing briefs and motions and other actions that are shorter than the limits specified in the Federal Rules of Civil or Appellate Procedure.

"(iii) EXPEDITED REVIEW.—Any such proceeding before the court shall be assigned for hearing and completed at the earliest possible date, and shall be expedited in every way. "(iii) BANKS UNDERGOING LIQUIDATION.—With respect to any bank undergoing liquidation under this Act, a liability to the Financial Assistance Corporation in the amount of the payment required under this subparagraph (calculated as if the bank had left the System on the date it was placed in liquidation) shall be recognized as a claim in favor of the Financial Assistance Corporation against the estate of the bank.

"(iv) OBLIGATIONS OF OTHER BANKS.—The obligations of other banks shall not be reduced in anticipation of any recoveries under this subparagraph from banks leaving the System or in liquidation, but the Financial Assistance Corporation shall apply the recoveries, when received, and all earnings on the recoveries, to reduce the other banks' payment obligations, or, to the extent the recoveries are received after the other banks have met their entire payment obligation, shall refund the recoveries, when received, to the other banks in proportion to the other banks' payments.";

The Financial Assistance Corporation shall partially discharge the bank from its obligation under subparagraph (C) to the extent of each such payment and the earnings on the payment as earned.

"(ii) CAPITAL REQUIREMENTS.—The agreement shall not require payments to be made to the extent that making a particular payment or part of a payment would cause the bank to fail to satisfy applicable regulatory permanent capital requirements, but shall provide for recalculation of subsequent payments accordingly.

"(iii) INVESTMENT; AVAILABILITY.—The funds received by the Financial Assistance Corporation pursuant to the agreements shall be invested in eligible investments as defined in section 6.25(a)(1). The funds and the earnings on the funds shall be available only for the payment of the principal of the bonds issued by the Financial Assistance Corporation under this subsection."; and

"(I) the greater of—

"(aa) such amount as the institution may be required to appropriate under any assistance agreement the institution has with the Farm Credit System Assistance Board or the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation; or

"(bb) the amount that, if appropriated to the account in equal amounts in each year thereafter until the maturity of the obligation referred to in subparagraph (A), would cause the amount in the account to equal the par value of the preferred stock issued by the institution with respect to the obligation; plus

"(II) any amount that had been appropriated to the account in a previous year but had thereafter been offset by losses.

"(iii) LIMITATION.—An annual appropriation shall not be made to the extent that the appropriation would exceed the institution's net income (as determined pursuant to generally accepted accounting principles) in that year or to the extent that the appropriation would cause the institution's preferred stock to be impaired.

"(iv) USE.—The amount in the appropriated unallocated surplus account shall be unavailable to pay dividends or other allocations or distributions to shareholders or holders of participation certificates. The account shall be senior to all other unallocated surplus accounts but junior to all preferred and common stock for purposes of the application of operating losses.

"(v) PREFERRED STOCK.—The appropriations of surplus by an institution shall not affect the treatment of its preferred stock (and of the appropriated unallocated surplus) as equity for purposes of regulatory permanent capital requirements.".

"(v) ASSOCIATIONS TERMINATING SYSTEM STATUS OR IN LIQUIDATION.—Any association leaving the Farm Credit System pursuant to section 7.10 shall be required, under regulations of the Farm Credit Administration, to pay to its supervising bank a share, based on the association's retail loan volume relative to the retail loan volume of the bank and its affiliated associations had the association remained in the System, of the present value of the future payment obligation of its supervising bank. This subparagraph shall take effect as if it had become law at the same time as the amendment made by section 401 and shall remain in effect until the Bank's merger with a Farm Credit Bank under this subsection, or July 1, 1994, whichever is sooner.

"(ii) LIMITATION ON OPERATING AUTHORITY.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding clause (i) and subparagraph (A)(ii), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to operate as provided under clause (i) shall expire, and the Farm Credit Administration shall revoke the Bank's charter, immediately on the Bank's merger with a Farm Credit Bank under this subsection, or July 1, 1994, whichever is sooner.

"(II) DISTRICT BOUNDARY MODIFICATION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the authority of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson shall not include the authority for the Bank to modify, nor shall the Farm Credit Administration approve such a modification to, the boundaries of the Fifth Farm Credit District to reaffiliate any portion of the District with another Farm Credit Bank, except—

Any extension provided under this subparagraph may be conditioned on such terms and conditions as the Farm Credit Administration determines necessary to ensure that the merger described in the letter of intent is completed by the closing date of the extension.

"(ii) COMPLIANCE.—If the Farm Credit Administration grants an extension under clause (i), it shall issue an order under subparagraph (D) immediately if—

"(I) the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson, or the Farm Credit Bank that is a signatory to the letter of intent under clause (i), provides written notification to the Farm Credit Administration that the bank does not intend to complete the merger described in the letter of intent;

"(II) the Farm Credit Administration determines that the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson is not complying with any term or condition on which an extension under clause (i) was conditioned; or

"(III) the Farm Credit Administration determines that the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson is not pursuing in good faith the merger provided for in the letter of intent.

If the Farm Credit Administration issues an order under subparagraph (D) pursuant to this clause, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson shall be deemed to have failed to comply with the requirements of subparagraph (A).

"(D) FAILURE TO MERGE; ISSUANCE OF ORDER.—If the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson fails to comply, or notifies the Farm Credit Administration in writing that it does not intend to comply with the requirements of subparagraph (A), the Farm Credit Administration shall, within 5 days after the date specified in subparagraph (A), or such other date specified by the Farm Credit Administration under subparagraph (C), issue, notwithstanding any other provision of law, an order requiring the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson to merge with the Farm Credit Bank of Texas in accordance with paragraph (2).

In devising the plan, the arbitrator shall, to the extent practicable, achieve the following objectives:

"(I) Implementation of the preferences expressed by the affected and interested parties in submissions under clause (ii).

"(III) Establishment of capitalization and funding terms in a manner that treats farmer-borrowers and stockholders in the two involved farm credit districts equitably and takes account of risk.

"(IV) Ensure the viability of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and associations of the bank and the ability of the resulting bank and associations of the bank to lend to eligible borrowers at reasonable and competitive rates of interest.

"(ii) SUBMISSION OF VIEWS AND INFORMATION.—The arbitrator shall receive from affected and interested parties written submissions, in accordance with fair and reasonable procedures established by the arbitrator, regarding the terms and conditions of an appropriate plan for the merger of the two banks required under this paragraph. "(IV) The capital structure and capitalization levels of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and the affiliated associations of the Farm Credit Bank in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi as the arbitrator determines necessary to carry out the purposes of this paragraph (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(V) The terms of financing agreements between any production credit associations or agricultural credit associations described in clause (iv), and the resulting Farm Credit Bank (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VI) Any other terms and conditions or other matters that the arbitrator considers necessary.

"(iv) CONTENT OF PLAN; AGRICULTURAL CREDIT ASSOCIATIONS.—If the arbitrator determines that the chartering of agricultural credit associations in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi will be in the best interests of the farmers, ranchers, and aquatic producers eligible to borrow from Farm Credit System associations, the plan required under this subparagraph shall also include, based on submissions from the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Jackson and the Farm Credit Bank of Texas, provisions for the establishment of agricultural credit associations to operate in the States, subject to approval in the referendum under subparagraph (F). Such provisions shall include provisions regarding the following matters:

"(I) A proposal for the establishment of an agricultural credit association in each of the geographic areas specified in subparagraph (F)(iii) (the charters of which, if validly issued under subparagraph (G)(i) pursuant to approval in the referendum under subparagraph (F), shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(III) The valuation, for purposes of the proposed merger of the production credit association and the Federal land bank association in each of the geographic areas specified in subparagraph (F)(iii), of the assets and liabilities of the associations.

"(IV) The terms and conditions on which the shares of capital stock of any associations that may merge under the plan to form agricultural credit associations will be converted into shares of the resulting agricultural credit associations.

"(V) The capital structure and capitalization levels of the resulting Farm Credit Bank and such affiliated associations of the Farm Credit Bank in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi as the arbitrator determines necessary to carry out the purposes of this paragraph (which capital structure and capitalization levels shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VI) The terms of financing agreements between any agricultural credit associations and the resulting Farm Credit Bank (which shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations).

"(VII) Any other terms and conditions or other matters that the arbitrator considers necessary.

"(v) CONSULTATION WITH INSURANCE CORPORATION.—The arbitrator shall consult with the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation regarding the valuation of the assets and liabilities under the plan of merger, the capitalization of the Farm Credit System institutions resulting under the plan, and any other matters relevant to the assistance to be provided by the Insurance Corporation to facilitate the merger under subparagraph (H).

The arbitrator and the Farm Credit Administration shall work cooperatively to ensure the expeditious issuance of the certification. If the Farm Credit Administration recommends to the arbitrator revisions to the plan that, if incorporated into the plan, will allow the Farm Credit Administration to certify the plan, the arbitrator shall, not later than 15 days after receipt of the recommended revisions, incorporate the revisions into the plan as the arbitrator deems appropriate to secure the certification.

The arbitrator shall develop the disclosure materials in cooperation with the Farm Credit Administration and ensure that the materials are not inconsistent with applicable laws and regulations.

"(iii) TABULATION OF RESULTS.—The results of the vote under this subparagraph shall be compiled separately for production credit association farmer-borrowers and Federal land bank association farmer-borrowers in each of the following seven geographic areas:

In this regard, the Farm Credit Administration shall—

"(i) issue a charter or charter amendment and take any such other regulatory actions as may be necessary to provide for the establishment of an agricultural credit association in each of the geographic areas described in subparagraph (F)(iii) where a majority of the farmer-borrowers of both the production credit association and the Federal land bank association voted under subparagraph (F)(i) that they preferred to have credit delivered through an agricultural credit association (which charter shall be subject to change thereafter in accordance with the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (12 U.S.C. 2001 et seq.) and any applicable regulations); and

"(iv) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—Assistance provided by the Corporation under this subparagraph shall be on such terms and conditions as the Corporation deems appropriate to facilitate the merger.

The court reviewing the determination or action shall not enter a stay or order of mandamus unless the court has determined, after notice and a hearing before a panel of the court, that the agency action complained of was arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.

"(ii) PROCEDURES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the court may set rules governing the procedures of any such proceeding that set page limits on briefs and time limits for filing briefs and motions and other actions that are shorter than the limits specified in the Federal Rules of Civil or Appellate Procedure.

CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT

BRYAN AMENDMENT NO. 3420

Mr. FORD (for Mr. Bryan) proposed an amendment to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1392) to strengthen the authority of the Federal Trade Commission regarding fraud committed in connection with sales made with a telephone, and for other purposes; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment to the bill, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Telemarketing and Consumer Fraud and Abuse Prevention Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Telemarketing differs from other sales activities in that it can be carried out by sellers across State lines without direct contact with the consumer. Telemarketers can also be very mobile, easily moving from State to State.

(2) Interstate telemarketing fraud has become a problem of such magnitude that the resources of the Federal Trade Commission are not sufficient to ensure adequate consumer protection from such fraud.

(3) Consumers and others are estimated to lose $40 billion a year in telemarketing fraud.

(4) Consumers are victimized by other forms of telemarketing deception and abuse.

(5) Consequently, Congress should enact legislation that will offer consumers necessary protection from telemarketing deception (including fraud) and abuse.

SEC. 3. TELEMARKETING RULES.

(a) In General.—

(1) The Commission shall prescribe rules prohibiting deceptive (including fraudulent) telemarketing activities and other abusive telemarketing activities.

(2) The Commission shall include in such rules respecting deceptive telemarketing activities—

(A) a definition of deceptive telemarketing activities, and

(B) criteria that are symptomatic of deceptive telemarketing as distinguished from ordinary telemarketing business practices.

(3) The Commission shall include in such rules respecting other abusive telemarketing activities (A) a requirement that telemarketers may not undertake a pattern of unsolicited telephone calls which the reasonable consumer would consider coercive or abusive of such consumer's right to privacy, and (B) restrictions on the hours of the day and night when unsolicited telephone calls can be made to consumers. In prescribing the rules described in this paragraph, the Commission shall also consider—

(A) including a requirement that goods or services offered by telemarketing be shipped or provided within a specified period and that if the goods or services are not shipped or provided within such period, a refund be required;

(B) including, where practicable, authority for a person who orders a good or service through telemarketing to cancel the order within a specified period; and

(C) recordkeeping requirements.

(b) RULEMAKING.—

(1) The Commission shall prescribe the rules under subsection (a) within 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act. Such rules shall be prescribed in accordance with section 553 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) A rule issued under subsection (a) shall be considered a rule issued under section 18(a)(1)(B) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a(a)(1)(B)).

(c) ENFORCEMENT.—Any violation of any rule prescribed under subsection (a) shall be treated as a violation of a rule under section 18 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a) regarding unfair or deceptive acts or practices.

(B) EXCEPTION.—The Securities and Exchange Commission is not required to promulgate a rule under subparagraph (A) if it determines that—

(ii) such a rule promulgated by the Securities and Exchange Commission is not necessary or appropriate in the public interest, or for the protection of investors, or would be inconsistent with the maintenance of fair and orderly markets.

If the Securities and Exchange Commission determines that an exception described in clause (i) or (ii) applies, the Securities and Exchange Commission shall publish in the Federal Register its determination with the reasons for it.

(2) APPLICATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The rules promulgated by the Securities and Exchange Commission under paragraph (1)(A) shall apply to a broker, dealer, transfer agent, municipal securities dealer, municipal securities broker, government securities broker, government securities dealer, investment adviser or investment company, or any individual associated with a broker, dealer, transfer agent, municipal securities dealer, municipal securities broker, government securities broker, government securities dealer, investment adviser or investment company. The rules promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission under subsection (a) shall not apply to persons described in the preceding sentence.

(B) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

(i) the terms "broker", "dealer", "transfer agent", "municipal securities dealer", "municipal securities broker", "government securities broker", and "government securities dealer" have the meanings given such terms by paragraphs (4), (5), (25), (30), (31), (43), and (44) of section 3(a) of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a) (4), (5), (25), (30), (31), (43), and (44));

"(f)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), not later than 6 months after the effective date of rules promulgated by the Federal Trade Commission under section 3(a) of the Telemarketing and Consumer Fraud and Abuse Prevention Act, the Commission shall promulgate, or require each registered futures association to promulgate, rules substantially similar to such rules to prohibit deceptive and other abusive telemarketing activities by any person registered or exempt from registration under this Act in connection with such person's business as a futures commission merchant, introducing broker, commodity trading advisory, commodity pool operator, leverage transaction merchant, floor broker, or floor trader, or a person associated with any such person.

"(2) The Commission is not required to promulgate rules under paragraph (1) if it determines that—

If the Commission determines that an exception described in subparagraph (A) or (B) applies, the Commission shall publish in the Federal Register its determination with the reasons for it.".

(1) Nothing contained in this section shall prohibit an authorized State official from proceeding in State court on the basis of an alleged violation of any civil or criminal statute of such State.

(2) In addition to actions brought by an attorney general of a State under subsection (a), such an action may be brought by officers of such State who are authorized by the State to bring actions in such State for protection of consumers and who are designated by the Commission to bring an action under subsection (a) against persons that the Commission has determined have or are engaged in a pattern or practice of telemarketing which violates a rule of the Commission under section 3.

SEC. 5. ACTIONS BY PRIVATE PERSONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person adversely affected by any pattern or practice of telemarketing which violates any rule of the Commission under section 3, or an authorized person acting on such person's behalf, may, within 3 years after discovery of the violation, bring a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States against a person who has engaged or is engaging in such pattern or practice of telemarketing if the amount in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $50,000 in actual damages for each person adversely affected by such telemarketing. Such an action may be brought to enjoin such telemarketing, to enforce compliance with any rule of the Commission under section 3, to obtain damages, or to obtain such further and other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(b) NOTICE.—The plaintiff shall serve prior written notice of the action upon the Commission and provide the Commission with a copy of its complaint, except in any case where such prior notice is not feasible, in which case the person shall serve such notice immediately upon instituting such action. The Commission shall have the right (A) to intervene in the action, (B) upon so intervening, to be heard on all matters arising therein, and (C) to file petitions for appeal.

(c) ACTIONS BY THE COMMISSION.—Whenever the Commission has instituted a civil action for violation of any rule prescribed under section 3, no person may, during the pendency of such action instituted by the Commission, subsequently institute a civil action against any defendant named in the Commission's complaint for violation of any rule as alleged in the Commission's complaint.

(d) COSTS AND FEES.—The court, in issuing any final order in any action brought under subsection (a), may award costs of suit and reasonable fees for attorneys and expert witnesses to the prevailing party.

(e) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall restrict any right which any person may have under any statute or common law.

SEC. 6. PROCESS.

(a) CIVIL SUITS.—In any suit brought against a person, partnership, or corporation under section 13(b) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 53(b)) to enjoin—

(1) deceptive telemarketing activities or other abusive telemarketing activities in violation of the rules prescribed under this Act, or

(2) unfair or deceptive telemarketing acts or practices in or affecting commerce (within the meaning of section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 45(a)(1)), the court may, if the court determines that the interests of justice require that any other person, partnership, or corporation should be a party in such suit, cause such other person, partnership, or corporation to be summoned without regard to whether they reside or transact business in the district in which the suit is brought, and to that end process may be served wherever such other person, partnership, or corporation may be found.

(b) CRIMINAL CONTEMPT ACTIONS.—In any case described in subsection (a) (1) or (2), the Commission may bring a criminal contempt action for violations of orders obtained in such case in the same manner as civil penalty and other Federal court actions apply under section 16(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 56(a)(1)). Such criminal cases may be initiated by the Commission pursuant to the appointment as a Special Assistant United States Attorney by the Attorney General of an attorney employed full-time by the Commission to assist the Attorney General in the prosecution of such cases. Such appointment may be instituted at the request of the court which has entered the order for which contempt is sought. The Attorney General shall decide on the appointment within 45 days after receipt of such request for appointment of a Commission lawyer as a Special Assistant United States Attorney. The authority to bring criminal contempt actions under this subsection expires 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

INTER-AMERICAN SCIENTIFIC COOPERATION ACT

BINGAMAN (AND LIEBERMAN) AMENDMENT NO. 3421

Mr. FORD (for Mr. BINGAMAN, for himself and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 3215) to reinvigorate cooperation between the United States and Latin America in science and technology, as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Inter-American Scientific Cooperation Act of 1992".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND DEFINITION.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Latin America shares a wide range of scientific and technological concerns with the United States.

(2) The need for science and technology cooperation with Latin America has increased significantly since the 1970s, but mechanisms for cooperation have decreased significantly since many countries in Latin America graduated from programs sponsored by the Agency for International Development.

(3) Latin American scientists and engineers have increasingly looked to Europe and Japan for advanced training and research. This trend may result in a loss of mutually beneficial commerce and scientific cooperation between Latin America and the United States.

(4) Investment by the United States in the Latin American science and technology infrastructure and participation of United States scientists and engineers in short-term and long-term assignments in Latin America can further improve relations between the United States and Latin America, and bring many benefits to the United States, including scientific access, enhanced trade and investment relations, and the opportunity to contribute to economic growth and democratization in the hemisphere.

(5) Science and technology cooperation with the United States, and advanced training and research in the United States, can bring many benefits to Latin America. In developing countries, cooperation can contribute to the strengthening of basic science and technology infrastructure. In industrially advanced Latin American countries, cooperation can increase opportunities in many scientific disciplines and in the frontier scientific fields.

(6) Considerable progress in science and technology cooperation can be made with relatively modest investments.

(7) The return to democracy in a number of Latin American countries provides renewed vigor for freedom of scientific inquiry, cooperation, and progress, as well as a focus for the reversal of the decline in science and technology cooperation between the United States and Latin America.

(b) Definitions.—As used in this Act—

(1) the term "debt-for-science exchange" means an agreement, between a grantee under section 4 and a Latin American country, that provides that the grantee shall cancel its right to collect payment on a portion of the commercial external debt of that Latin American country, in exchange for the country's contribution to the grantee of local currencies or other assets to support scientific and technological research in the country;

(2) the term "Director" means the Director of the National Science Foundation; and

(3) the term "Latin America" means Mexico, the Caribbean basin, Central America, and South America.

SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PROGRAM.

The National Science Foundation shall establish an Inter-American Scientific Cooperation Program (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Program") aimed at increasing the level of science and technology cooperation between the United States and Latin America. The National Science Foundation, in establishing the Program, shall identify and cooperate with private and governmental funding bodies, both in Latin America and in the United States. The Program shall include the following elements:

(1) Encouragement and funding of project development interchanges and joint research projects between United States and Latin American scientists and engineers. Joint projects and interchanges funded by the National Science Foundation shall, whenever possible, include cost sharing from sources within the Latin American countries whose citizens participate. The Director shall determine the amount of cost sharing which is required.

(2) Establishment in accordance with section 13 of the National Science Foundation Act of 1950 (42 U.S.C. 1872) of an Inter-American Scientific Exchange. The Exchange's activities shall include collection and dissemination of information to Latin Americans on avenues for advanced study in science and engineering in the United States; United States assistance to Latin American institutions, at the institutions' request, for development of courses, seminars, and curricula in science and engineering; and other forms of scientific and technological cooperation as may be mutually agreeable, such as research projects in furtherance of professional development. In carrying out this paragraph the Director shall coordinate with other Federal agencies offering programs for foreign nationals for advanced study and research in the sciences and in engineering.

(3) Exchange of information and technical assistance between United States and Latin American scientists and engineers interested in establishing data bases and connecting to computer networks such as the National Research and Education Network.

(4) Exchange of information to facilitate the routing of scientific equipment between the United States and Latin America, including information with respect to matching equipment with need, identifying technical maintenance requirements, and meeting customs regulations.

(5) Promotion of research programs which utilize unique natural environments or existing or potential centers of scientific research excellence in Latin America.

SEC. 4. DEBT-FOR-SCIENCE EXCHANGES

(a) Grants.—The Director is authorized to make grants to nongovernmental organizations within the United States, including colleges and universities, for the purpose of acquiring the commercial external debt of Latin American Countries and undertaking such other activities as are necessary to carry out debt-for-science exchanges. Before making any grant under this section, the Director shall ascertain that—

(1) funds received from a Latin American country in connection with the debt-for-science exchange to which the grant applies will be expended only for cooperative research and development projects, including those described in section 3; or to fund endowments for the long-term support of cooperative research and development projects;

(2) the debt-for-science exchange will result in making funds available for such cooperative projects which otherwise would not be available;

(3) the amount of local currency provided by the Latin American country as a result of the debt-for-science exchange will be substantially greater than the cost of acquiring the country's commercial external debt;

(4) the grantee certifies that the Latin American country has accepted the terms of the exchange and that an agreement has been reached to cancel the commercial debt in an agreed upon fashion; and

(5) Federal grants made under this section will be equally matched by non-Federal contributions to acquire the commercial external debt of the Latin American country.

(b) Retention of Interest.—Grantees or subgrantees of funds provided under this section may retain, without deposit in the Treasury of the United States and without further appropriation, interest earned on the proceeds of any resulting debt-for-science exchange pending disbursements of such proceeds and interest for approved program purposes, which may include the establishment of an endowment, the income of which is used for such purposes.

(c) Coordination with Other Federal Agencies.—In carrying out subsection (a) the Director shall coordinate with Federal agencies, such as the Agency for International Development, that have expertise in debt exchanges.

SEC. 5. REPORT ON BINATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATIONS.

(a) Report to Congress.—Within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director shall submit to Congress a report which—

(1) describes existing Binational Science Foundations in Latin America and elsewhere and the research funded by them;

(2) identifies successful binational foundations in Latin America in areas other than science and technology;

(3) evaluates the advantages and disadvantages of Binational Science Foundations in comparison to direct funding of joint research projects;

(4) identifies countries in Latin America that might benefit by establishment of a Binational Science Foundation between that country and the United States;

(5) identifies types of cooperative scientific research and educational projects that might most effectively be funded through Binational Science Foundations;

(6) assesses, by country, the availability of private-sector funding and in-country funding to match United States funding of Binational Science Foundations in Latin America; and

(7) identifies legislative or administrative changes needed if the National Science Foundation is to fund establishment of Binational Science Foundations.

(b) Consultation.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Director shall consult with Federal agencies, such as the Department of State and the Agency for International Development, that have participate in binational foundations in Latin America and elsewhere.

SEC. 6. REPORT ON PROGRAM.

Within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director shall submit to Congress a report which—

(1) details activities funded by the National Science Foundation and carried out by or in cooperation with Latin American countries during the preceding fiscal year;

(2) includes a description of how activities of the Program relate to other ongoing and prospective National Science Foundation activities in Latin America;

(3) describes plans for the current and upcoming fiscal years' activities of the Program;

(4) recommends priorities for the Program for cooperation in terms of scientific disciplines and geographic regions; and

(5) recommends necessary legislative or administrative changes in the Program.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Director for carrying out this Act—

(1) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993; and

(2) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

HOLLINGS (AND THURMOND) AMENDMENT NO. 3422

Mr. FORD (for Mr. Hollings, for himself and Mr. Thurmond) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 3421 proposed by Mr. Bingaman (and Mr. Lieberman) to the bill H.R. 3215, supra; as follows:

At the end, add the following:

SEC. 8. SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Wind Engineering Program Act of 1992".

(b) FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Hurricanes and tornadoes kill more Americans and destroy more property than any other natural disaster.

(2) Each year, in the United States, extreme winds cause billions of dollars of damage to homes, schools, and other buildings, roads and bridges, electrical power distribution networks, and communications networks.

(3) Research on wind and wind engineering has resulted in improved methods for making buildings and other structures less vulnerable to extreme winds, but additional research funding is needed to develop new, improved, and more cost-effective methods of wind-resistant construction.

(4) Federal funding for wind engineering research has decreased over the last twenty years.

(5) Wind research has been hampered by a lack of data on near-surface wind speed and distribution during hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms.

(6) Many existing methods for wind-resistant construction are inexpensive and easy to implement but often they are not applied because the construction industry and the general public are unaware of such methods.

(7) Various Federal agencies have important roles to play in wind engineering research, but at present there is little interagency cooperation or coordination in this area.

(8) Establishment of a Federal Wind Engineering Program would result in new technologies for wind-resistant construction, broader application of such technologies in construction, and ultimately decreased loss of life and property due to extreme winds.

(c) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to create a Wind Engineering Program within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, which would—

(1) provide for wind engineering research;

(2) serve as a clearinghouse for information on wind engineering; and

(3) improve interagency coordination on wind engineering research between the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, the Federal Aviation Administration, and other appropriate agencies.

(d) ESTABLISHMENT.—Within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, there shall be established a Wind Engineering Program which shall—

(1) conduct research and development, in cooperation with the private sector and academia, on new methods for mitigating wind damage due to tornadoes, hurricanes, and other severe storms;

(2) fund construction and maintenance of wind tunnels and other research facilities needed for wind engineering research;

(3) promote the application of existing methods for, and research results on, reducing wind damage to buildings that are usually incompletely- or non-engineered, such as single family dwellings, mobile homes, light industrial buildings, and small commercial structures;

(4) transfer technology developed in wind engineering research to the private sector so that it may be applied in building codes, design practice, and construction;

(5) conduct, in conjunction with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, post-disaster research following hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms to evaluate the vulnerability of different types of buildings to extreme winds;

(6) serve as a point of contact for dissemination of research information on wind engineering and work with the private sector to develop education and training programs on construction techniques, developed from research results, for reducing wind damage;

(7) work with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration, and other agencies as is appropriate, on meteorology programs to collect and disseminate more data on extreme wind events; and

(8) work with the National Science Foundation to support and expand basic research on wind engineering.

(e) AUTHORIZATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Institute of Standards and Technology for the purposes of this section, $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

(2) Of the amounts authorized under paragraph (1), no less than 50 percent shall be used for cooperative agreements with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, the Federal Aviation Administration, or other agencies, for wind engineering research, development of improved practices for structures, and the collection and dissemination of meteorological data needed for wind engineering.

(d) INTEREST.—Any royalty offer by the Secretary pursuant to subsection 7(b) shall be adjusted to reflect net present value as of the effective date of the exchange. The State shall be entitled to receive a reasonable rate of interest at a rate equivalent to a five year treasury note on the balance of the value owed by the United States from the effective date of the exchange until full value is received by the State and mineral rights revert to the United States as prescribed by subsection 9(a)(3).

(14) On page 12, line 24, strike "establish funding," and insert "establish a funding mechanism,".

SECTION 1. MINING CLAIMS ON STOCK RAISING HOMESTEAD ACT LANDS.

(a) MINERAL ENTRY UNDER THE STOCK RAISING HOMESTEAD ACT.—Section 9 of the Act of December 29, 1916, entitled "An Act to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes" (43 U.S.C. 299), is amended by adding the following at the end thereof:

"(b) EXPLORATION; LOCATION OF MINING CLAIMS; NOTICES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) Notwithstanding subsection (a) and any other provision of law to the contrary, after the effective date of this subsection no person other than the surface owner may enter lands subject to this Act to explore for, or to locate, a mining claim on such lands without—

"(i) filing a notice of intention to locate a mining claim pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(ii) providing notice to the surface owner pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(B) Any person who has complied with the requirements referred to in subparagraph (A) may, during the authorized exploration period, in order to locate a mining claim, enter lands subject to this Act to undertake mineral activities related to exploration that cause no more than minimal disturbance of surface resources and do not involve the use of mechanized earthmoving equipment, explosives, the construction of roads, drill pads, or the use of toxic or hazardous materials.

"(C) The authorized exploration period referred to in subparagraph (B) shall begin 30 days after notice is provided under paragraph (3) with respect to lands subject to such notice and shall end with the expiration of the 90-day period referred to in paragraph (2)(A), or any extension provided under paragraph (2).

"(2) NOTICE OF INTENTION TO LOCATE A MINING CLAIM.—Any person seeking to locate a mining claim on lands subject to this Act in order to engage in the mineral activities relating to exploration referred to under paragraph (1)(B) shall file with the Secretary of the Interior a notice of intention to locate a claim on the lands concerned. The notice shall be in such form as the Secretary shall prescribe. The notice shall contain the name and mailing address of the person filing the notice and a legal description of the lands to which the notice applies. The legal description shall be based on the public land survey or on such other description as is sufficient to permit the Secretary to record the notice on the land status records of the Secretary. Whenever any person has filed a notice under this paragraph with respect to any lands, during the 90-day period following the date of such filing, or any extension thereof pursuant to this paragraph, no other person (including the surface owner) may—

"(A) file such a notice with respect to any portions of such lands;

"(B) explore for minerals or locate a mining claim on any portion of such lands; or

"(C) file an application to acquire any interest in any portion of such lands pursuant to section 209 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1719).

If, within such 90-day period, the person who filed a notice under this paragraph files a plan of operations with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (f), such 90-day period shall be extended until the approval or disapproval of the plan by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (f).

"(3) NOTICE TO SURFACE OWNER.—Any person who has filed a notice of intention to locate a mining claim under paragraph (2) for any lands subject to this Act shall provide written notice of such filing, by registered or certified mail with return receipt, to the surface owner (as evidenced by local tax records) of the lands covered by the notice under paragraph (2). The notice shall be provided at least 30 days before entering such lands and shall contain each of the following:

"(A) A brief description of the proposed mineral activities.

"(B) A map and legal description of the lands to be sublet to mineral exploration.

"(C) The name, address and phone number of the person managing such activities.

"(D) A statement of the dates on which such activities will take place.

"(4) ACREAGE LIMITATIONS.—The total acreage covered at any time by notices of intention to locate a mining claim under paragraph (2) filed by any person and by affiliates of such person may not exceed 6,400 acres of lands subject to this Act in any one State and 1,280 acres of such lands for a single surface owner. for purposes of this paragraph, the term 'affiliate' means, with respect to any person, any other person which controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with, such person.

"(d) AUTHORIZED MINERAL ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary shall authorize a person to conduct mineral activities (other than those relating to exploration referred to in subsection (b)(1) (B)) on lands subject to this Act without the consent of the surface owner thereof if such person complies with the requirements of subsections (e) and (f).

"(e) BOND.—(1) Before the Secretary may authorize any person to conduct mineral activities the Secretary shall require such person to post a bond or other financial guarantee in an amount to insure the completion of reclamation pursuant to this Act. Such bond or other financial guarantee shall insure—

"(A) payment to the surface owner, after the completion of such mineral activities and reclamation, compensation for any permanent damages to crops and tangible improvements of the surface owner that resulted from mineral activities; and

"(B) payment to the surface owner of compensation for any permanent loss of income of the surface owner due to loss or impairment of grazing, or other uses of the land by the surface owner to the extent that reclamation required by the plan of operations would not permit such uses to continue at the level existing prior to the commencement of mineral activities.

"(2) In determining the bond amount to cover permanent loss of income under paragraph (1)(B), the Secretary shall consider, where appropriate, the potential loss of value due to the estimated permanent reduction in utilization of the land.

"(C) The 60-day period referred to in paragraph (A) may be extended by the Secretary where additional time is required to comply with other applicable requirements of law.

"(j) INSPECTIONS.—Should any surface owner of land subject to this Act have reason to believe that they are or may be adversely affected by mineral activities due to any violation of the terms and conditions of a plan of operations approved under subsection (f), such surface owner may request an inspection of such lands. The Secretary shall determine within 10 days of the receipt of the request whether the request states a reason to believe that a violation exists, except in the event the surface owner alleges and provides reason to believe that an imminent danger exists the 10 day period shall be waived and the inspection conducted immediately. When an inspection is conducted under this paragraph, the Secretary shall notify the surface owner and such surface owner shall be allowed to accompany the inspector on the inspection.

(2) The initial lists prepared under paragraph (1) shall be based on information in the actual possession of the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture on the date of enactment of this Act, including information submitted to Congress pursuant to the directive contained in Senate Report No. 98-578, issued for the Fiscal Year 1985 Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation, as revised and updated. The initial lists shall be published and distributed for public review in accordance with procedures adopted by the Secretary concerned.

(3) For a period of 180 days after publication of a list pursuant to paragraph (2), persons asserting that particular parcels omitted from such a list should have been included may request the Secretary concerned to add such parcels to the appropriate list. The Secretary concerned shall add to the list any such parcels which the Secretary determines meet the conditions specified in paragraph (1).

(c) Nationally Significant Lands.—(1) During preparation or revision of an initial list under subsection (b), the Secretary concerned shall identify those listed lands which are located wholly or partially within any consideration system unit and all other listed lands which Congress has designated for specific management or which the Secretary concerned decides, in the concerned Secretary's discretion, should be retained in order to meet public, resource protection, or administrative needs. (d) Final Lists.—(1) As soon as possible after considering any requests made pursuant to subsection (b)(3) and the identification of lands pursuant to subsection (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall each publish a final list, consisting of lands included on each Secretary's initial list not identified pursuant to subsection (c)(1). Unless a Secretary has published a final list on or before the date 18 months after the date of publication, pursuant to subsection (b)(2), of such Secretary's initial list, the initial list prepared by such Secretary shall be deemed on such date to be the final list required to be published by such Secretary, and thereafter no lands included on such initial list shall be excluded from operation of subsection (a).

(2) If a court makes a final decision that a parcel of land was arbitrarily and capriciously excluded from operation of subsection (a), such parcel shall be deemed to have been included on a final list published pursuant to paragraph (1), unless such parcel is located wholly or partially inside a conservation system unit or any other area which Congress has designated for specific management, in which case such parcel shall be subject to the provisions of subsection (c)(2).

(2) The United States shall not adjudicate and, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, does not consent to be sued in any suit instituted to adjudicate the ownership of, or to quiet title to, any base land included in a final list and described in a confirmatory deed.

(3) Neither the Secretary of the Interior nor the Secretary of Agriculture shall be required to inspect any lands included on a final list nor to inform any member of the public regarding the condition of such lands prior to the issuance of the confirmatory deeds required by this subsection, and nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting any valid rights with respect to lands covered by a confirmatory deed issued pursuant to this subsection that were in existence on the date of issuance of such confirmatory deed.

SNAKE RIVER BIRDS OF PREY NATIONAL CONSERVATION AREA

CRAIG AMENDMENT NO. 3433

Mr. CRAIG proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 2141) to establish the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area in the State of Idaho, and for other purposes; as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the State of Idaho within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area contain one of the densest known nesting populations of eagles, falcons, owls, hawks, and other birds of prey (raptors) in North America.

(2) These public lands constitute a valuable national biological and educational resource since birds of prey are important components of the ecosystem.

(3) These public lands also contain important historic and cultural resources as well as other resources and values, all of which should be protected and appropriately managed.

(4) A military training area within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area, known as the Orchard Training Area, has been used since 1953 by reserve components of the Armed Forces. Military use of this area is currently governed by a Memorandum of Understanding between the Bureau of Land Management and the State of Idaho Military Division, dated May 1985. Operating under this Memorandum of Understanding, the Idaho National Guard has provided valuable assistance to the Bureau of Land Management with respect to fire control and other aspects of management of the Orchard Training Area and the other lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Area. Military use of the lands within the Orchard Training Area should continue in accordance with such Memorandum of Understanding (or extension or renewal thereof), to the extent consistent with section 4(e) of this Act, because this would be in the best interest of training of the reserve components (an important aspect of national security) and of the local economy.

(5) Protection of the conservation area as a home for raptors can best and should be accomplished by the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Land Management, under a management plan that—

(A) emphasizes management, protection, and rehabilitation of habitat for these raptors and of other resources and values of the area;

(B) provides for continued military use, consistent with the requirements of section 4(e) of this Act, of the Orchard Training Area by reserve components of the Armed Forces;

(C) addresses the need for public educational and interpretive opportunities;

(D) allows for diverse appropriate uses of lands in the area to the extent consistent with the maintenance and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats and protection and sound management of other resources and values of the area; and

(E) demonstrates management practices and techniques that may be useful to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere.

(6) There exists near the conservation area a facility, the World Center for Birds of Prey operated by The Peregrine Fund, Inc., where research, public education, recovery, and reestablishment operations exist for endangered raptor species. There also exists at Boise State University a raptor study program which attracts national and international graduate and undergraduate students.

(7) The Bureau of Land Management and Boise State University, together with other State, Federal, and private entities, have formed the Raptor Research and Technical Assistance Center to be housed at Boise State University, which provides a unique adjunct to the conservation area for raptor management, recovery, research, and public visitation, interpretation, and education.

(8) Consistent with requirements of sections 202 and 302 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1712 and 1732), the Secretary has developed a comprehensive management plan and, based on such plan, has implemented a management program for the public lands included in the conservation area established by this Act.

(9) Additional authority and guidance must be provided to assure that essential raptor habitat remains in public ownership, to facilitate sound and effective planning and management, to provide for effective public interpretation and education, to ensure continued study of the relationship of humans and these raptors, to preserve the unique and irreplaceable habitat of the conservation area, and to conserve and properly manage the other natural resources of the area in concert with maintenance of this habitat.

(10) An ongoing research program funded by the Bureau of Land Management and the National Guard is intended to provide information to be used in connection with future descisionmaking concerning management of all uses, including continued military use, of public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area.

(11) The public lands in the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation area have been used for domestic livestock grazing for more than a century. Appropriate protection and sound management of raptor habitat and the other resource values of this land would not preclude continuation of this use which has provided major economic contributions and stability to the local and State economies.

(12) Hydroelectric facilities for the generation and transmission of electricity exist within the Snake River Birds of Prey Area pursuant to a license(s) issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, or its predecessor, the Federal Power Commission.

SECTION. 2. DEFINITIONS

As used in this Act:

(1) The term "Secretary" mans the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) The term "raptor" or "raptors" means individuals or populations of eagles, falcons, owls, hawks, and other birds of prey.

(4) The term "raptor habitat" includes the habitat of the raptor prey base as well as the nesting and hunting habitat of raptors within the conservation area.

(5) The term "Memorandum of Understanding" means the Memorandum of Understanding #ID–237, dated May 1985, between the State of Idaho Military Division and the Bureau of Land Management.

(6) The term "Orchard Training Area" means that area generally so depicted on the map referred to in section 3(b), and as described in the Memorandum of Understanding as well as the air space over the same.

(9) The term "the plan" means the comprehensive management plan developed for the conservation area, dated August 30, 1985, together with such revisions thereto as may be required in order to implement this Act.

(10) The term "hydroelectric facilities" means all facilities related to the generation, transmission, and distribution of hydroelectric power and which are subject to, and authorized by, a license(s), and any and all amendments thereto, issued by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL CONSERVATION AREA.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSES.—(1) There is hereby established the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area, hereafter referred to as the "conservation area".

(2) The purposes for which the conservation area is established are: to provide for the conservation, protection, and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats, and the natural and environmental resources and values associated therewith, and of the scientific, cultural, and educational resources and values of the public lands in the conservation area; and, to the extent compatible with the foregoing purposes, to allow continuation of existing uses of the public lands in the conservation area, subject to the provisions of this Act.

(b) AREA INCLUDED.—The conservation area shall consist of approximately 482,457 acres of federally owned lands and interests therein managed by the Bureau of Land Management as generally depicted on the map entitled "Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area", dated November 1991.

(c) MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—As soon as is practicable after enactment of this Act, the map referred to in subsection (b) and a legal description of the conservation area shall be filed by the Secretary with the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate. Each such map shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title; except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such map and legal description. Each such map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Director and the Idaho State Director of the Bureau of Land Management of the Department of the Interior.

(d) WITHDRAWALS.—Subject to valid existing rights, the Federal lands within the conservation area are hereby withdrawn from all forms of entry, appropriation, or disposal (except as provided in paragraph (3)) under the public land laws; and from entry, application, and selection under the Act of March 3, 1877 (Ch. 107, 19 Stat. 377, 43 U.S.C. 321 et seq.; commonly referred to as the "Desert Lands Act"), section 4 of the Act of August 18, 1894 (Ch. 301, 28 Stat. 422; 43 U.S.C. 641; commonly referred to as the "Carey Act"), the Act of July 3, 1890 (Ch. 656, 26 Stat. 215; commonly referred to as the "State of Idaho Admissions Act"), section 2275 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (43 U.S.C. 851), and section 2276 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (43 U.S.C. 852). The Secretary shall return to the applicants any such applications pending on the date of enactment of this Act, without further action. Subject to valid existing rights, as of the date of enactment of this Act, lands within the conservation area are withdrawn from location under the general mining laws, the operation of the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, and the mineral material disposal laws.

SEC. 4. MANAGEMENT AND USE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1)(A) Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall finalize a management plan that is in conformance with the requirements of this Act.

(B) Thereafter, the Secretary shall review the plan at least once every 4 years and shall make such revisions as may be necessary or appropriate.

(C) In reviewing and revising the plan, the Secretary shall provide for appropriate public participation.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in subsections (d), (e), and (f) of this section, the Secretary shall allow only such uses of lands in the conservation area as the Secretary determines will further the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(b) MANAGEMENT GUIDANCE.—After each review pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary shall make such revisions as may be needed so that the plan and management program to implement the plan include, in addition to any other necessary or appropriate provisions, provisions for—

(1) protection for the raptor populations and habitats and the scientific, cultural, and educational resources and values of the public lands in the conservation area;

(2) identifying levels of continued military use of the Orchard Training Area compatible with paragraph (1) of this subsection;

(3) public use of the conservation area consistent with the purposes of this Act;

(4) interpretive and educational opportunities for the public;

(5) a program for continued scientific investigation and study to provide information to support sound management in accordance with this Act, to advance knowledge of raptor species and the resources and values of the conservation area, and to provide a process for transferring to other areas of the public lands and elsewhere this knowledge and management experience;

(6) such vegetative enhancement and other measures as may be necessary to restore or enhance prey habitat;

(7) the identification of levels, types, timing, and terms and conditions for the allowable non-military uses of lands within the conservation area that will be compatible with the protection, maintenance, and enhancement of raptor populations and habitats and the other purposes for which the conservation area is established; and

(8) assessing the desirability of imposing appropriate fees for public uses (including, but not limited to, recreational use) of lands in the conservation area, which are not now subject to fees, to be used to further the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(c) VISITORS CENTER.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, is authorized to establish, in cooperation with other public or private entities as the Secretary may deem appropriate, a visitors center designed to interpret the history and the geological, ecological, natural, cultural, and other resources of the conservation area and the biology of the raptors and their relationships to man.

(d) VISITORS USE OF AREA.—In addition to the Visitors Center, the Secretary may provide for visitor use of the public lands in the conservation area to such extent and in such manner as the Secretary considers consistent with the protection of raptors and raptor habitat, public safety, and the purposes for which the conservation area is established. To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall make available to visitors and other members of the public a map of the conservation area and such other educational and interpretive materials as may be appropriate.

(e) NATIONAL GUARD USE OF THE AREA.—(1) Pending completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, or until the date 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever is the shorter period, the Secretary shall permit continued military use of those portions of the conservation area known as the Orchard Training Area in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, to the extent consistent with the use levels identified pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this section.

(2) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall review the management plan and make such additional revisions therein as may be required to assure that it meets the requirements of this Act.

(3) Upon completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the conservation area, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report of the results of such research.

(4) Nothing in this Act shall preclude minor adjustment of the boundaries of the Orchard Training Area in accordance with provisions of the Memorandum of Understanding.

(5) After completion of the ongoing research concerning military use of lands in the Orchard Training Area or after the date 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever first occurs, the Secretary shall continue to permit military use of such lands, unless the Secretary, on the basis of such research, determines such use is not compatible with the purposes set forth in section 3(a)(2). Any such use thereafter shall be permitted in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, which may be extended or renewed by the Secretary so long as such use continues to meet the requirements of subsection (b)(2) of this section.

(6) In accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding, the Secretary shall require the State of Idaho Military Division to ensure that military units involved maintain a program of decontamination.

(7) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as by itself precluding the extension or renewal of the Memorandum of Understanding, or the construction of any improvements or buildings in the Orchard Training Area so long as the requirements of this subsection are met.

(f) LIVESTOCK GRAZING.—Notwithstanding section 4(a)(2) of this Act, if the Secretary determines domestic livestock grazing is compatible with the purposes for which the conservation area is established, such grazing will occur on public lands within the conservation area to the extent the Secretary determines such use of such lands is compatible with the purposes for which the conservation area is established. Any such grazing, and activities the Secretary determines necessary to carry out proper and practical grazing management programs (such as animal damage control activities) shall be managed in accordance with the Act of June 28, 1934 (43 U.S.C. 315 et seq.; commonly referred to as the "Taylor Grazing Act"), section 402 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1752), other laws applicable to such use and programs on the public lands, and the management plan for the conservation area.

(g) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance to, and to enter into such cooperative agreements and contracts with, the State of Idaho and with local governments and private entities as the Secretary deems necessary or desirable to carry out the purposes and policies of this Act.

(h) AGRICULTURAL PRACTICES.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as constituting a grant of authority to the Secretary to restrict recognized agricultural practices or other activities on private land adjacent to or with in the conservation area boundary.

(i) HYDROELECTRIC FACILITIES.—Notwithstanding any provision of this Act, or regulations and management plans undertaken pursuant to its provisions, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission shall retain its current jurisdiction concerning all aspects of the continued and future operation of hydroelectric facilities, licensed or relicensed under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.), located within the boundaries of the conservation area.

SEC. 5. ADDITIONS.

(a) ACQUISITIONS.—(1) The Secretary is authorized to acquire lands and interests therein within the boundaries of the conservation area by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, exchange, or transfer from another Federal agency, except that such lands or interests owned by the State of Idaho or a political subdivision thereof may be acquired only by donation or exchange.

(2) Any lands located within the boundaries of the conservation area that are acquired by the United States on or after the date of enactment of this Act shall become a part of the conservation area and shall be subject to this Act.

(b) PURCHASE OF LANDS.—In addition to the authority in section 318(d) of the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1748) and notwithstanding section 7(a) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1964 (16 U.S.C. 4601-9(a), monies appropriated from the Land and Water Conservation Fund may be used as authorized in section 5(b) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1534(b)), for the purposes of acquiring lands or interests therein within the conservation area for administration as public lands as a part of the conservation area.

(c) LAND EXCHANGES.—The Secretary shall within 4 years of enactment, study, identify, and initiate voluntary land exchanges which would resolve ownership related land use conflicts within the conservation area.

SEC. 6. OTHER LAWS AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) OTHER LAWS.—(1) Nothing in the Act shall be construed to supersede, limit, or otherwise affect administration and enforcement of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or to limit the applicability of the National Trails System Act to any lands within the conservation area.

(2) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this title, nothing in this title shall be construed as limiting the applicability to lands in the conservation area of laws applicable to public lands generally, including but not limited to the National Historic Preservation Act, the Archaeological Resources Protection Act of 1979, or the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as by itself altering the status of any lands that on the date of enactment of this Act were not managed by the Bureau of Land Management.

(4) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as prohibiting the Secretary from engaging qualified persons to use public lands within the conservation area for the propagation of plants (including seeds) to be used for vegetative enhancement of the conservation area in accordance with the plan and in furtherance of the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(b) RELEASE.—The Congress finds and directs that the public lands within the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area established as a natural area in October 1971 by Public Land Order 5133 have been adequately studied and found unsuitable for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Such lands are hereby released from further management pursuant to section 603(c) of such an Act and shall be managed in accordance with other applicable provisions of law, including this Act.

(c) EXISTING ADMINISTRATIVE WITHDRAWAL TERMINATED.—Public Land Orders 5133 dated October 12, 1971, and 5777 dated November 21, 1980, issued by the Secretary are hereby terminated.

(d) WATER.—(1) The Congress finds that the United States is currently a party in an adjudication of rights to waters of the Snake River, including water rights claimed by the United States on the basis of the reservation of lands for purposes of conservation of fish and wildlife and that consequently there is no need for this Act to effect a reservation by the United States of rights with respect to such waters in order to fulfill the purposes for which the conservation area is established.

(2) Nothing in this Act or any action taken pursuant thereto shall constitute either an expressed or implied reservation of water or water rights for any purpose.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as effecting a relinquishment or reduction of any of the water rights held or claimed by the United States within the State of Idaho or elsewhere on or before the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) The Secretary and all other officers of the United States shall take steps necessary to protect all water rights claimed by the United States in the Snake River adjudication now pending in the district court of the State of Idaho in which the United States is joined under the McCarran Amendment (section 208 of the Act of July 10, 1952; 66 Stat. 560; 43 U.S.C. 666).

(e) ENFORCEMENT.—Any person who violates any regulation promulgated by the Secretary to implement the provisions of this Act shall be subject to a fine in accordance with applicable provisions of title 18, United States Code, imprisonment of not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS AGAINST KASHMIRIS IN INDIA

• Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I rise today on behalf of Louisiana citizens of Kashmiri descent to draw attention to continued human rights violations being committed against Kashmiris living in India.

Kashmir is an enclave spanning the northern borders of India and Pakistan. Two of three wars fought between India and Pakistan have been over a border dispute involving Kashmir. While Pakistan has held its portion of Kashmir in trust for over 40 years, India appears to have basically annexed her portion and currently has thousands of troops in the area. Despite two U.N. resolutions to the contrary, Kashmir remains in a volatile, political limbo.

The plight of the Kashmiri people is not limited to political oppression however; it also includes serious human rights abuses. In the past 2 years, the Indian Government has tried to suppress the Kashmiri movement for self-determination often by brutally forceful means. According to Amnesty International, the Indian military and paramilitary forces in Kashmir have engaged in extrajudicial killings, detention without trial, rape, arson, and torture. All this fueling an already volatile militant movement in the region.

Mr. President, I acknowledge that the Government of India now appears to be making some progress in the area of human rights. The Government's recent decision to allow Amnesty International access to Kashmir as well as the Government's apparent intent to establish a human rights commission are steps in the right direction. While these steps seem to indicate that India has at least recognized its human rights problem, it is also clear, however, that much remains to be done.

The tension and problems in this region of the subcontinent will persist until the three parties involved, India, Pakistan, and Kashmir come to some form of negotiated settlement. I urge the U.S. Government to assist these parties in the peaceful resolution of this underlying dispute.•

(At the request of Mr. MACK, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD at this point:)

TRIBUTE TO MARVA MCCANTS

• Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to honor the outstanding efforts of Marva McCants and her successful business, Marva Sew, Inc.

Marva Sew is a booming custom design manufacturer located in the Milwaukee Enterprise Center [MEC]. The MEC, a small business incubator, located in the inner city, provides opportunities for historically underutilized businesses and gives them the startup assistance needed to succeed. Since moving to the MEC, Marva Sew has doubled its employment to 13—which includes her daughter Sondra.

Ms. McCants, the company president and daughter of a seamstress, started her business in 1983, in her home. During the same period, Marva obtained her teaching certification and joined the Milwaukee Area Technical College as an industrial sewing instructor.

As her clientele and credibility grew so did the demand on her business. Due to her overwhelming success, Marva ventured from the basement of her own home into the business arena. In March 1989, she opened the doors to her new boutique—Simply Marva Fashion Design. Fortunately her accomplishments did not cease there.

In light of her achievements, and the demand for increased manufacturing space, Marva expanded Simply Marva Sew at its present location. Ms. McCants designs and makes elegant clothes for her own shop and boutiques. And she also does large order cut-and-sew jobs like Marlboro auto racing jumpsuits, T-shirts, sweatshirts and banners.

In addition to being a successful small business owner, Marva is active in the promotion of minority-owned businesses. In October 1991, Marva testified at my small business field hearing that I held at the MEC. She advocated the need for minority capital access. In her words she explained that:

> The less frustration and the less discouragement you have the better you are in trying to get your business up and going.

Marva McCants is a model for all minority business men and women to follow. Her accomplishments as an entrepreneur are just the kind of medicine our inner cities need to get our economy back on track.

I am pleased to see that Marva overcame this frustration and made her childhood dream come true.

I ask my colleagues to please join me in saluting Marva McCants and all her employees at Marva Sew for the terrific job they are doing and to congratulate them on their second anniversary as a MEC tenant.•

PUNITIVE DAMAGES REFORM ACT OF 1992

• Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. President, yesterday, I introduced the Punitive Damages Reform Act of 1992. The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants is not only concerned about the issue, but it has published a paper in which it makes certain suggestions about reform. My legislation does not contain all of the proposed reforms in the paper, but this organization's input was very helpful in helping me put my legislation together.

I recommend their essay, entitled "Punitive Damages Without Limit: Fundamentally Unfair," to all who are interested in this issue.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the essay and a copy of a Wall Street Journal article on the threat of tort litigation to our Nation's accounting firms be printed immediately following my remarks.

The material follows:

BLACK DAYS FOR ACCOUNTING FIRMS

(By Philip R. Lochner, Jr.)

This week's decision by an Arizona jury to order the accounting firm Price Waterhouse to pay $338 million to Standard Chartered Bank has wide-ranging implications. Whether the jury decided correctly when it concluded that Price Waterhouse was negligent in proving auditing services is unclear. What is clear is that this civil judgment raises troublesome questions about what we can expect from accounting firms and whether they can continue to provide the services that our financial markets find essential. The decision forces accounting firms—and, by extension, all professional partnerships—to reconsider their roles.

The Price Waterhouse decision will certainly be appealed. But it is important to understand the degree to which accountants are already suffering from tort litigation. Almost all major accounting firms are facing vastly increased litigation claims, and last year two substantial accounting firms collapsed—Laventhol & Horwath, which press reports said faced about $2 billion in liability claims, and the smaller Spicer & Oppenheim.

WHAT HAPPENED IN ARIZONA

The profession probably faces an additional $15 billion in liability claims now, with more to come. Yet it is difficult for the accounting business to manage this risk because all national accounting firms are partnerships, and nearly all jurisdictions in this country make it difficult or impossible for them to take a corporate form. Strong firms can survive—but are increasingly at risk.

To understand such cases, it may help to review what happened in Arizona. Until 1985, Arizona law prohibited out-of-state financial institutions from buying local commercial banks. When that law changed, bankers from around the country and the world converged on cities such as Phoenix and Tucson. Prospects in the fast-growing state looked bright.

So bright, in fact, that Arizona caught the attention of Standard Chartered, a British giant whose assets in 1987 were valued at about $50 billion. Standard Chartered chose its target: United Bank of Arizona, whose auditor in 1985 and 1986 was Price Waterhouse. Through a California subsidiary, London-based Standard Chartered bought United Bank of Arizona for $335 million, or more than 15 times United's earnings when the deal was signed in 1985. At signing, United was the state's fourth largest bank, with assets of some $2.2 billion and a net worth of about $130 million.

Standard Chartered was so eager to get in on the ground floor that it moved decisively. So decisively that even though the bank had plenty of time before completing the acquisition, Standard Chartered apparently conducted a very limited survey of United's loan portfolio. That shouldn't necessarily be surprising: At the time, it appears, Standard Chartered thought it was buying a franchise, rather than a package of individually valuable assets. After the deal closed, some United real estate loans turned out to be something other than gold-plated.

And Standard had other troubles. By 1988, its Third World loan portfolio was in enough trouble that U.K. regulators were pressing Standard to improve its capital base. As a result, it sold United Bank for a whopping loss. For many, that would have been the end of the story: an unlucky, or perhaps bad, business decision resulting in a big write-off. Any number of foreign banks have made mistakes in the U.S. market in recent times—NatWest, Midland, Lloyds and Barclays, to name a few. Several out-of-state buyers of Arizona banks didn't do terribly well either.

But Standard, unlike the others, sued to make up its losses. United Bank's original shareholders were a difficult target, dispersed as they were across the country. So Standard sought recovery from the only convenient deep pocket left—the auditor, Price Waterhouse.

Standard claimed that Price Waterhouse's audits of 1985 and 1986 (the two years before the deal became final) were negligently performed by insufficiently trained and supervised personnel. It also claimed that the accounting firm should have discovered that United Bank's actual net worth was only half of what United Bank said it was, and that United Bank's internal controls were inadequate.

Standard's lawyers managed to convince the jury that Standard's damages were not just the lost value of sour loans it believes should have been discovered, nor the mere difference between United Bank's actual value and the price Standard Chartered paid. They convinced the jury that Standard deserved an amount in excess of the full purchase price. Not surprisingly, Price Waterhouse contended that this calculation of damages was an exercise in lunacy, particularly since Price Waterhouse earned less than $300,000 for the audits in question.

The jury verdict should have turned on the resolution of a number of issues, many of them numbingly tedious and obscure. Were Price Waterhouse's 1985 and 1986 audits negligently performed? What did professional accounting standards require in those audits? What is appropriate due diligence by a buyer in a bank acquisition, and did Standard Chartered do it? Does it matter that Standard didn't wait for the 1986 audit results before closing, though it arguably could have done so?

It is difficult to believe that the eight men and women who decided this case actually understood any of these matters very well. Indeed, SEC commissioners, who are at least nominally in charge of setting accounting policy in the U.S., have been known to be deeply divided over such questions as what accounting standards should require. Doubtless, the Arizona jurors were intelligent people. But this was a trial where counsel felt they had to tell the jurors what the initials "SEC" and "CEO" stood for. The result was that Price Waterhouse partners may end up paying $338 million out of their own pockets. This despite the fact that United Banks' problems had not lost United's depositors or taxpayers a single nickel.

For the accounting profession, and indeed all professional partnerships, the news of the jury award strengthens what is already a profound re-examination of their work. A century ago many auditing firms were simple, one-man shops. Since that time, the firms have grown enormously and expectations about what auditors would be responsible for have risen dramatically.

Congress, for its part, seems intent on adding to auditor responsibility. Rep. Ron Wyden (D., Ore.) has frequently proposed legislation placing greater demands on auditors. Banking and securities regulators have insisted that accountants conform to higher standards and assume heavier burdens as well.

What really happens in an audit? The larger the institution being audited, the greater the likelihood that auditors will be required to rely heavily on work performed by those being audited. Management, not auditors, prepares the financial statements. Auditors typically sample and test internally generated numbers. Even when audits are done correctly, audits cannot guarantee accuracy or the detection of fraud; they are not insurance policies. Nonetheless legal liability seems to rise.

Insurance is not much of an answer to accountants' liability problems. Insurers are already reluctant to cover high-risk propositions like big accounting firms. Premiums are prohibitive. Deductibles of up to $20 million are becoming the norm for large accounting firms, and coverage is increasingly harder to find beyond the $100 million level. One recent report claimed that auditor insurance premiums have increased tenfold in the past seven years. Without sufficient insurance, individual partners are personally at risk. In the Standard Chartered-Price Waterhouse case, that liability comes to more than $350,000 per partner.

TORT REFORM

In theory, one answer to these partnership problems could be to return the accounting profession to a world of individual practitioners. But it is pretty hard to imagine an individual practitioner performing an adequate audit of AT&T or Citibank. If we carry on as we have, more national accounting firms may collapse. The financial markets that depend on them will surely not be better off.

The best answer here may be tort reform. Another step in the right direction would be to let accounting firms incorporate. There is no reason why partners in accounting firms should be any more at risk for the negligence of their fellow partners than one broker at Merrill Lynch is for the negligence of another Merrill Lynch broker. States need to change their rules.

Permitting incorporation would hardly solve all their (or our) liability problems. But at least accountants would not have to risk their shirts when they go to work every day.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES WITHOUT LIMIT: FUNDAMENTALLY UNFAIR

"There is a point beyond which even justice becomes unjust."

Sophocles' observation may be over two thousand years old, but it is equally applicable today. This country's approach to awarding punitive damages is now clearly out of control. Nowhere is this more apparent than in recent verdicts against accounting firms in which plaintiffs have collected windfall awards far beyond their actual losses. Punitive damage awards have become so excessive that they threaten not only individual accounting firms, but the very basis on which the CPA profession can continue performing audits. Given the critical role the CPA profession plays in the country's financial reporting system, it is fair to say that anything that threatens the CPA profession's ability to conduct audits—except on the most highly selective basis to avoid risk of liability through association—threatens the smooth operation of the capital markets and the economy in general.

UNREASONABLE PUNISHMENT

At the heart of the problem is the unsettling reality that harsh punitive damage awards are being made in cases in which only compensatory damages are truly appropriate according to traditional concepts of law and justice. The purpose of punitive damages needs to be more clearly understood by juries and courts—and if necessary, specific statutes need to be enacted to ensure that the system operates to promote systematic justice rather than random and capricious attacks on professionals who happen to have attractively "deep pockets."

Punitive damages must be distinguished from compensatory damages in order to understand the basic issue. The purpose of compensatory damages is to make the injured parties whole again. Both out-of-pocket losses and economic losses may be taken into account in an attempt to put parties in the same position they were in, or would have been in, before the damage was done. Punitive damages, on the other hand, are designed to punish, not to compensate. Traditionally, punitive damages are reserved for situations in which a party's behavior was intentional or reckless, and so grossly bad that basic human sensibilities are outraged and extra punishment is truly required.

Once rare, punitive damage awards are now becoming quite common. The Institute for Civil Justice studied 24,000 punitive damage cases and found that from 1965–69 the average sum awarded was $43,000. But in 1980–84, the inflation-adjusted amounts averaged $729,000—a jump of 1,500 percent. The result of this staggering increase is a never-ending spiral. The prospect of winning the "litigation lottery" and obtaining high punitive damage awards creates an attractive incentive for parties who'd like to try their luck at bringing suit, no matter how flimsy their grounds.

The widely publicized Miniscribe case illustrates how the mechanism of punitive damages can be misused. The case stemmed from the actions of O.T. Wiles, the former chairman of Miniscribe, Inc., a manufacturer of computer disk drives. Wiles was accused of falsifying corporate records to inflate the company's net worth. Investors, who bought approximately $18 million in bonds sold by Miniscribe based on the falsified records, filed a successful lawsuit against Wiles, his investment bankers and the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand. Compensatory damages were found by the jury to be in the amount of $20 million, but punitive damages were set at an incredible $530 million.

Coopers & Lybrand was found by the jury to have conducted faulty audits, and to have signed off on a prospectus that contained fraudulent financial statements. The share of the damages attributed to Coopers & Lybrand was $4 million in compensatory damages and $250 million in punitive damages. Coopers & Lybrand contested the allegations against them, and claimed they did not have direct knowledge of Wiles' fraud. The trial judge later set aside the verdict as "contrary to the great weight of the evidence," and the case was eventually settled out of court for an undisclosed sum. Nevertheless, the magnitude of the jury award undoubtedly exerted great influence on the eventual size of the settlement.

THE CONSEQUENCES OF UNRESTRAINED VENGEANCE

The Miniscribe case raises serious questions. It is hard to imagine any kind of conduct in a business situation that would be sufficiently repugnant to human sensibilities as to justify a judgment for punitive damages in excess of 50 times compensatory damages. Why should accountants and other professionals be singled out for a level of punishment that would normally be reserved for the most outrageous human behavior in an ordinary non-business case—except for the fact that professionals are perceived as having the ability to pay?

When the law of punitive damages is stretched beyond its traditional limits to encompass ordinary negligence of professionals—instead of grossly reckless or intentionally bad misbehavior—three major problems arise. The first is that the liability exposure of accountants and other professionals become extremely difficult to predict and very difficult to withstand. Faced with the real possibility that an unfavorable court decision could force them to pay damages of unpredictable magnitude, far in excess of the actual injury, many firms cannot afford the risk of fighting even the most obviously capricious lawsuits. The unlimited potential for excessive punitive damages dictates that a professional firm submit quickly to a more limited settlement—however unjustified, however unfair.

The second problem is the impact large settlements will have on a firm's financial health. Insurance costs will most likely skyrocket, placing additional pressure on the firm's bottom line. Unreasonable monetary awards against some firms severely hamper all firms' ability to grow. If the current situation is left unchecked, the cost of litigation will quickly filter through to the economy in the form steeper fees and, in the professional sector, fewer jobs.

The third problem is the implications excessive punitive damage awards against professionals have for the smooth operations of the business and financial sectors. Will liability have a chilling effect on how accounting and other professional firms perform their technical functions and how they select the clients for whom they will perform certain work? If so, what will these clients do without the services they need?

WORKING FOR A SOLUTION

The accounting profession has identified excessive punitive damages as a major threat to the current and future health of the accounting profession. The profession's national representative body, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), has worked with the American Tort Reform Association (ATRA) in Washington, D.C, to create model legislation for states to adopt or use as a model in controlling the application of punitive damages in civil cases.

This effort is guided by the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision in Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company v. Haslip, in which the Court held that the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment requires the states to set reasonable limits on the jury's discretion in awarding punitive damages. In the Court's written opinion, it was recognized that in most states, juries are given little or no guidance by the courts in determining the basis on which punitive damages can be awarded, and the limits on the amount of such awards.

The model legislation proposed by the ATRA includes the following provisions:

Before punitive damages can be awarded, a claimant must establish by clear and convincing evidence that the claimant's harm was the result of intentional or malicious misconduct involving a conscious intent to cause injury.

There should be bifurcation of trials, such that a separate proceeding is required to determine the appropriateness of punitive damages after compensatory damages have been determined.

Punitive damages should be limited to $200,000, or an amount equal to the compensatory award, whichever is greater.

There should be a mandatory court review of punitive damages to assure that they are reasonable in light of the facts in the case. Various specific factors are given for the court to consider in making this determination.

In addition, the AICPA has created its own model legislation, which includes additional provisions designed to reduce the extreme vulnerability of accounting firms to excessive punitive damage awards. For example, in some jurisdictions, juries may impose punitive damages on an accounting firm based on the actions of an employee who may have been acting without the knowledge of the firm or any of its partners. To address this problem, the AICPA's model legislation would limit punitive damages against the firm to situations in which the firm's governing body had expressly authorized the employee's misconduct, or had subsequent knowledge and acquiesced or ratified the employee's behavior.

The AICPA's version of the model legislation also recommends dollar limits on the size of punitive awards. The standard proposal limits punitive damages to twice the amount of the firm's actual or expected gain from the situation—for example, twice the amount of the audit fee. This departure from the ATRA recommendation is due to the potential for disaster stemming from the structure of accounting firms. In a professional partnership, all the personal assets of each of the partners is at risk to satisfy judgments against the partnership—including punitive damage awards—even if all of the partners were totally unaware of acts committed by isolated individuals.

The states themselves are not oblivious to the serious problem of excessive punitive damage awards. Over the past six years, 25 states have enacted some type of punitive damage reform, ranging from outright abolition of punitive damages to stricter definitions of the kinds of conduct that will allow such awards and higher standards of proof relating to such conduct.

The explosion of litigation and outrageous judgments against professionals will immediately impact the professions, but will ultimately impose tremendous burdens on society at large. Our courts and juries are charged with the duty of dispensing justice. Adoption of the model legislation currently proposed by the ATRA, the AICPA, and other concerned organizations would be a major step towards ensuring that justice will be dispensed—not on the basis of "deep pockets," but within the limits of due process for all.●

TRIBUTE TO CUMMINS ENGINE CO.

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Cummins Engine Co.'s. 50th anniversary as a distinguished supplier of diesel power to the U.S. military.

At the outset of World War II, Cummins Engine, based in Columbus, IN, delivered 5,000 H-160 engines to power heavy logistics trucks used by the Army Quartermaster Corps.

Known as the Red Ball Express, many of these trucks were used by Gen. George Patton as Allied forces stormed across France and Germany. The reliable performance did much to establish diesel as the preferred power source for both military and commercial cargo transport.

The reputation of the engine was already well established. A year earlier, in 1943, Cummins received the Army/Navy "E" Award for excellence in the production of war materials.

Today, the spectrum of Cummins technology spans from supply of truck engines to continuous, active participation in the military market worldwide for all equipment applications where diesel power is specified. In fact, Cummins is the leading supplier of heavy-duty diesels for defense and other purposes in the Western world.

As the company prepared to celebrate its 50th anniversary as a supplier, Cummins delivered its 150,000th engine to the U.S. Department of Defense—a VTA903-T600 designated for installation in a Bradley M2 fighting vehicle.

Cummins Engine Co. is to be commended for its distinguished history as a supplier to our military—both in terms of its heritage as a technological leader and a provider of jobs for thousands of people in Indiana and worldwide.●

THE RETIREMENT OF REPRESENTATIVE JIM OLIN AND REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE ALLEN

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to two distinguished members of the Virginia delegation—JIM OLIN of the Sixth Congressional District and GEORGE ALLEN of the Seventh Congressional District.

Congressman JIM OLIN, of Roanoke, VA, was first elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1982 upon the retirement of another outstanding Virginian, M. Caldwell Butler. Since that time and through four subsequent elections, Mr. OLIN has proven himself as a capable and dedicated legislator who understands the needs of the people he represents. Our strong friendship always placed the needs of our constituents above any partisan divisions.

Throughout his distinguished public service career, JIM OLIN played an integral role in shaping important legislation which affects many Americans. He served on the House Agriculture Committee and the Small Business Committee where he served as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Environment and Employment.

I was privileged to work with JIM OLIN on three legislative achievements for which he will long be remembered:

The Virginia Wilderness Act which provides permanent protection to 81,000 acres of unique Virginia forests and streams.

The Buena Vista flood control project which, when completed, will protect this small community from the devastating floods it has endured time after time. The Congress accepted the delegation's recommendation that the project bear JIM OLIN's name in recognition of his long public service.

The development of the Roanoke River Parkway to provide visitor access from the Blue Ridge Parkway to the Roanoke Valley and the explore project.

Although I may not have agreed with my friend JIM OLIN on each issue or each vote, this Senator will certainly miss his friendship, his counsel, and his participation in the Virginia congressional delegation. He worked hard for his constituents and voted his conscience to do what he felt was best for our State and our Nation.

It has indeed been a privilege to serve with JIM OLIN over the past 10 years. I wish Congressman OLIN well in his retirement and extend my best wishes to him and his lovely wife, Phyllis, and their five children and eight grandchildren. May they enjoy all the blessings of long life and find much pleasure in their time together in the years ahead.

Congressman GEORGE ALLEN, of Earlysville, VA, was elected just 11 months ago in a special election to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of my good friend and former Representative from the Seventh District, D. French Slaughter. It was indeed my great pleasure to be by GEORGE ALLEN's side as he campaigned for this office. He was faced with a changing political scene, not of his making, leaving him little opportunity to continue in the House of Representatives.

GEORGE ALLEN came to Capitol Hill, together with a lovely wife and children, with a mandate from his constituents to reform Congress and to restore fiscal responsibility to the Federal Government. He never wavered from these commitments. Congressman ALLEN has fought hard to achieve these goals of a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution that included spending limitations, taxpayer protection, and a line-item veto for the President.

Before coming to the U.S. Congress, GEORGE ALLEN served 9 years in the Virginia House of Delegates where he made a strong reputation for fiscal conservatism. In his capacity as both a State and Federal legislator, GEORGE ALLEN has served his constituents with honor and distinction, and his services will certainly be missed.

GEORGE ALLEN is well regarded in Virginia as a man of considerable talents. He represents the emerging generation of strong Virginia Republican leaders and will certainly be a valuable electable candidate for future public office.

Because of circumstances beyond his control, GEORGE ALLEN was only here in Washington for a short time, but he made the most of his stay by expressing his views and fighting for what he believed in—boots and all. I wish GEORGE, his wife Susan, and their two children nothing but the best of luck in all their future endeavors. GEORGE ALLEN has proven to be an effective leader, and on behalf of our party, our State, and our Nation, I thank him for his commitment to public service.●

SEC. 111. STANDARDS AND REQUIREMENTS OF SMALL EMPLOYER HEALTH INSURANCE.

The Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE XXI—STANDARDS FOR SMALL EMPLOYER HEALTH INSURANCE AND CERTIFICATION OF MANAGED CARE PLANS

"PART A—GENERAL STANDARDS; DEFINITIONS

"APPLICATION OF REQUIREMENTS TO SMALL EMPLOYER HEALTH INSURANCE PLANS

"SEC. 2101. (a) PLAN UNDER STATE REGULATORY PROGRAM OR CERTIFIED BY THE SECRETARY.—An insurer offering a health insurance plan to a small employer in a State on or after the effective date applicable to the State under subsection (b) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this title if—

"(1) the Secretary determines that the State has established a regulatory program that provides for the application and enforcement of standards meeting the requirements under section 2102 to meet the requirements of part B of this title; and

"(2) if the State has not established such a program or if the program has been decertified by the Secretary under section 2102(b), the health insurance plan has been certified by the Secretary (in accordance with such procedures as the Secretary establishes) as meeting the requirements of part B of this title.

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as specified in paragraph (2) and provided in paragraph (3), the standards established under section 2102 to meet the requirements of part B of this title shall apply to health insurance plans offered, issued, or renewed to a small employer in a State on or after January 1, 1994.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR LEGISLATION.—In the case of a State which the Secretary identifies, in consultation with the NAIC, as—

"(A) requiring State legislation (other than legislation appropriating funds) in order for insurers and health insurance plans offered to small employers to meet the standards under the program established under subsection (a), and

"(B) having a legislature which does not meet in 1993 in a legislative session in which such legislation may be considered, the date specified in this paragraph is the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular legislative session of the State legislature that begins on or after January 1, 1994. For purposes of the previous sentence, in the case of a State that has a 2-year legislative session, each year of such session shall be deemed to be a separate regular legislative session of the State legislature.

"(3) REQUIREMENTS APPLIED TO EXISTING POLICIES.—In the case of a health insurance plan in effect before the applicable effective date specified in paragraph (1) or (2), the requirements referred to in subsections (a) and (b) of section 2112 shall not apply to any such plan, or any renewal of such plan, before the date which is 2 years after such effective date.

"(c) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS OF STATES.—Each State shall submit to the Secretary, at intervals established by the Secretary, a report on the implementation and enforcement of the standards under the program established under subsection (a)(1) with respect to health insurance plans offered to small employers.

"(d) MORE STRINGENT STATE STANDARDS PERMITTED.—Except as provided in subsections (b)(8) and (c)(4) of section 2113, a State may implement standards that are more stringent than the standards established to meet the requirements of part B of this title.

"ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDARDS

"SEC. 2102. (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDARDS.—

"(1) ROLE OF THE NAIC.—The Secretary shall request that the NAIC—

"(A) develop specific standards, in the form of a model Act and model regulations, to implement the requirements of part B of this title; and

"(B) report to the Secretary on such standards, by not later than September 30, 1992. If the NAIC develops such standards within such period and the Secretary finds that such standards implement the requirements of part B of this title, such standards shall be the standards applied under section 2101.

"(2) ROLE OF THE SECRETARY.—If the NAIC fails to develop and report on the standards described in paragraph (1) by the date specified in such paragraph or the Secretary finds that such standards do not implement the requirements under part B of this title, the Secretary shall develop and publish such standards, by not later than December 31, 1992. Such standards shall then be the standards applied under section 2101.

"(3) STANDARDS ON GUARANTEED AVAILABILITY.—The standards developed under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall provide alternative standards for guaranteeing availability of health insurance plans for all small employers in a State as provided in section 2111(c).

"(b) PERIODIC SECRETARIAL REVIEW OF STATE REGULATORY PROGRAM.—The Secretary periodically shall review State regulatory programs to determine if they continue to meet and enforce the standards referred to in subsection (a). If the Secretary initially determines that a State regulatory program no longer meets and enforces such standards, the Secretary shall provide the State an opportunity to adopt a plan of correction that would bring such program into compliance with such standards. If the Secretary makes a final determination that the State regulatory program fails to meet and enforce such standards and requirements after such an opportunity, the Secretary shall decertify such program and assume responsibility under section 2101(a)(2) with respect to plans in the State.

"(c) GAO AUDITS.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct periodic reviews on a sample of State regulatory programs to determine their compliance with the standards and requirements of this title. The Comptroller General of the United States shall report to the Secretary and Congress on the findings of such reviews.

"(c) GUARANTEED AVAILABILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, an insurer that offers a health insurance plan to small employers located in a State must meet the standards adopted by the State described in paragraph (2).

"(2) STANDARDS ON GUARANTEED AVAILABILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In order to implement the requirements of this title, the standards developed under paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 2102(a) shall—

"(ii) specify alternative mechanisms, including at least the alternative mechanisms described in subparagraph (B), that a State may adopt.

"(B) ALTERNATIVE MECHANISMS.—The alternative mechanisms described in this subparagraph are:

"(C) STATE ADOPTION OF CERTAIN STANDARDS.—A regulatory program adopted by the State under section 2101 must provide—

"(ii) for such other program that guarantees availability of health insurance to all small employers in the State and is approved by the Secretary.

"(D) STANDARDS FOR NONCOMPLYING STATES.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, shall develop requirements with respect to guaranteed availability to apply with respect to insurers located in a State that has not adopted the standards under section 2102 and who wish to apply for certification under section 2101(a)(2).

"(3) GROUNDS FOR REFUSAL TO RENEW.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An insurer may refuse to renew, or may terminate, a health insurance plan under this part only for—

"(i) nonpayment of premiums;

"(ii) fraud or misrepresentation; or

"(iii) failure to maintain minimum participation rates (consistent with subparagraph (B)).

"(B) MINIMUM PARTICIPATION RATES.—An insurer may require, with respect to a health insurance plan issued to a small employer, that a minimum percentage of eligible employees who do not otherwise have health insurance are enrolled in such plan if such percentage is applied uniformly to all plans offered to employers of comparable size.

"(d) GUARANTEED RENEWABILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An insurer shall ensure that a health insurance plan issued to a small employer be renewed, at the option of the small employer, unless the plan is terminated for a reason specified in paragraph (2) or in subsection (c)(3)(A).

"(2) TERMINATION OF SMALL EMPLOYER BUSINESS.—An insurer is not required to renew a health insurance plan with respect to a small employer if the insurer—

"(A) elects not to renew all of its health insurance plans issued to small employers in a State; and

"(B) provides notice to the applicable regulatory authority in the State and to each small employer covered under a plan of such termination at least 180 days before the date of expiration of the plan.

In the case of such a termination, the insurer may not provide for issuance of any health insurance plan to a small employer in the State during the 5-year period beginning on the date of termination of the last plan not so renewed.

"(e) No Discrimination Based on Health Status for Certain Services.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided under paragraph (2), a health insurance plan offered to a small employer by an insurer may not deny, limit, or condition the coverage under (or benefits of) the plan based on the health status, claims experience, receipt of health care, medical history, or lack of evidence of insurability, of an individual.

"(2) Treatment of preexisting condition exclusions for all services.—

"(A) In general.—Subject to the succeeding provisions of this paragraph, a health insurance plan offered to a small employer by an insurer may exclude coverage with respect to services related to treatment of a preexisting condition, but the period of such exclusion may not exceed 6 months. The exclusion of coverage shall not apply to services furnished to newborns.

"(B) Crediting of previous coverage.—

"(i) In general.—A health insurance plan issued to a small employer by an insurer shall provide that if an individual under such plan is in a period of continuous coverage (as defined in clause (ii)(I)) with respect to particular services as of the date of initial coverage under such plan, any period of exclusion of coverage with respect to a preexisting condition for such services or type of services shall be reduced by 1 month for each month in the period of continuous coverage.

"(ii) Definitions.—As used in this subparagraph:

"(I) Period of continuous coverage.—The term 'period of continuous coverage' means, with respect to particular services, the period beginning on the date an individual is enrolled under a health insurance plan, title XVIII, title XIX, or other health benefit arrangement including a self-insured plan which provides benefits with respect to such services and ends on the date the individual is not so enrolled for a continuous period of more than 3 months.

"(II) Preexisting condition.—The term 'preexisting condition' means, with respect to coverage under a health insurance plan issued to a small employer by an insurer, a condition which has been diagnosed or treated during the 3-month period ending on the day before the first date of such coverage (without regard to any waiting period).

"REQUIREMENTS RELATED TO RESTRICTIONS ON RATING PRACTICES

"Sec. 2112. (a) Limit on Variation of Premiums Between Blocks of Business.—

"(1) In general.—The base premium rate for any block of business of an insurer (as defined in section 2103(b)(1)) may not exceed the base premium rate for any other block of business by more than 20 percent.

"(2) Exceptions.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a block of business if the applicable regulatory authority determines that—

"(A) the block is one for which the insurer does not reject, and never has rejected, small employers included within the definition of employers eligible for the block of business or otherwise eligible employees and dependents who enroll on a timely basis, based upon their claims experience, health status, industry, or occupation,

"(B) the insurer does not transfer, and never has transferred, a health insurance plan involuntarily into or out of the block of business, and

"(C) health insurance plans offered under the block of business are currently available for purchase by small employers at the time an exception to paragraph (1) is sought by the insurer.

"(b) Limit on Variation in Premium Rates Within a Block of Business.—For a block of business of an insurer, the highest premium rates charged during a rating period to small employers with similar demographic characteristics (including age, sex, and geography and not relating to claims experience, health status, industry, occupation, or duration of coverage since issue) for the same or similar coverage, or the highest rates which could be charged to such employers under the rating system for that block of business, shall not exceed an amount that is 1.5 times the base premium rate for the block of business for a rating period (or portion thereof) that occurs in the first 3 years in which this section is in effect, and 1.35 times the base premium rate thereafter.

"(c) Consistent Application of Rating Factors.—In establishing premium rates for health insurance plans offered to small employers—

"(1) an insurer making adjustments with respect to age, sex, or geography must apply such adjustments consistently across small employers, and 37

"(2) no insurer may use a geographic area that is smaller than a county or smaller than an area that includes all areas in which the first three digits of the zip code are identical, whichever is smaller.

"(d) Limit on Transfer of Employers Among Blocks of Business.—

"(1) In general.—An insurer may not transfer a small employer from one block of business to another without the consent of the employer.

"(2) Offers to transfer.—An insurer may not offer to transfer a small employer from one block of business to another unless—

"(A) the offer is made without regard to age, sex, geography, claims experience, health status, industry, occupation or the date on which the policy was issued, and

"(B) the same offer is made to all other small employers in the same block of business.

"(e) Limits on Variation in Premium Increases.—The percentage increase in the premium rate charged to a small employer for a new rating period (determined on an annual basis) may not exceed the sum of the percentage change in the base premium rate plus 5 percentage points.

"(f) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) Base premium rate.—The term 'base premium rate' means, for each block of business for each rating period, the lowest premium rate which could have been charged under a rating system for that block of business by the insurer to small employers with similar demographic or other relevant characteristics (including age, sex, and geography and not relating to claims experience, health status, industry, occupation or duration of coverage since issue) for health insurance plans with the same or similar coverage.

"(2) Block of business.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'block of business' means, with respect to an insurer, all of the small employers with a health insurance plan issued by the insurer (as shown on the records of the insurer).

"(B) Distinct groups.—

"(i) In general.—Subject to clause (ii), a distinct group of small employers with health insurance plans issued by an insurer may be treated as a block of business by such insurer if all of the plans in such group—

"(I) are marketed and sold through individuals and organizations that do not participate in the marketing or sale of other distinct groups by the insurer,

"(II) have been acquired from another insurer as a distinct group, or

"(III) are provided through an association with membership of not less than 25 small employers that has been formed for purposes other than obtaining health insurance.

"(ii) Exception allowed.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), an insurer may not establish more than one distinct group of small employers for each category specified in clause (i).

"(C) Special rule.—An insurer may establish up to 2 groups under each category in subparagraph (A) or (B) to account for differences in characteristics (other than differences in plan benefits) of health insurance plans that are expected to produce substantial variation in health care costs.

"(f) Full Disclosure of Rating Practices.—

"(1) In general.—At the time an insurer offers a health insurance plan to a small employer, the insurer shall fully disclose to the employer all of the following:

"(A) Rating practices for small employer health insurance plans, including rating practices for different populations and benefit designs.

"(B) The extent to which premium rates for the small employer are established or adjusted based upon the actual or expected variation in claims costs or health condition of the employees of such small employer and their dependents.
